I walked down town to a brick building in the course of construction. The brick carriers were busy wheeling the brick and mortar to their place, and the brick masons were on the scaffolds laying the brick in the wall. Every man was busy on his job and I could see the walls growing. Just as I thought that it was a harmonious crew and that all were interested in their work, a disturbance arose among them. There were unkind words and then a heated argument and last of all the bricks started to flying. For some time the working crew ceased to work on the building and fought each other with bricks that should have been used on the job. God has built several denominational scaffolds around his church. One man is standing on the Methodist scaffold, another on the Baptist scaffold, still another on the Presbyterian. All are supposed to be working on the church of God. We can actually see the church grow when every man is working and when harmony prevails. How different things are when we have denominational selfishness, denominational arguments and denominational strife. When we start to fighting each other we are consuming energy and material that should go into the construction of the church of God. A professed christian is engaged in mighty poor work when he goes to throwing brick at other people who are standing on the other scaffolds around the church of God. A true Christian is working on the church of God and he should use his energy and his material in building up Zion.

Was walking along the shore of the Gulf of Mexico and just ahead I saw a fish that had been washed up by the restless waves. Having a can in my hand I touched the fish with the end of it. It started to swelling. I touched it again and it swelled some more. I kept touching it to see how big it would become. A little fish had become a big fish. Then I left off teasing of the fish and its size started down. Soon it was just a minnow flopping about on the sand. The friend with we named that fish a, "Balloon Fish." The more we fooled with it the bigger it got. That is the way of strife between neighbors and friends. When there is a little difference between neighbors, if they will let it alone, it will stay little and amount to nothing, but, just let them begin teasing that difference and it will swell and keep swelling until it is a large thing. The best way on earth to settle differences is to pass them by and forget that they ever lived. Learn the fine art of letting a difference alone and see how quickly it will dwindle, dwarf and die. The "cantankerous" person likes to tease the differences that they have with their neighbors and make a big thing out of nothing.

I saw a doctor examining his patient. After probing into his ears he announced, "You have two good ears." The doctor examined his eyes and said, "You have two good eyes." Then he ordered his patient to open his mouth and stick out his tongue. He looked long and anxiously and then lifting himself erect he said, "Your tongue indicates your trouble." The patient had two good ears good eyes and a bad tongue. When God made a man he made him with two ears and two eyes and one tongue that he might see twice as much as he said, that he might hear twice as much as he spoke. The thing that creates social and moral disorders is that most folks talk more than they see and hear. If we would see and hear more and then talk less, we would be much healthier in our soul life. Of many people it can be truly said, "Your tongue indicates your trouble."

One day this week I was standing by the railroad track and I saw an engine approaching in great speed. I stepped away from the track in fright. There was too much speed for safety. I wondered greatly as to the speed that the engine was making, for it was pulling a grade. When it dashed by like a flash I understood. It was carrying nothing but itself. When you see one of these tongues that is forever "rattling away" you had better step back for there is danger. Like the engine, the tongue that runs the fastest carries the least.

Heard a man talking loud and long on the unemployment situation in American life. He said, "Times will never be normal again until there are jobs for the eight million of the unemployed." At this time the American Legion is doing its best to get jobs for those who have no jobs. In part I agree with the words of the orator and the efforts of the Legion, but that is not the kind of unemployment that is hurting America today. If you want to know what has brought this depression upon us, just study the religious life of our nation. As a people we first became unemployed religiously, and that has thrown us out of jobs in other ways. If the citizenship of our great country would get back on their jobs in the church and in the ways of clean living, the depression would burst like a bubble. God is allowing this darkness to come upon us that the eighty million of the unemployed in the church of God might come to themselves and return unto loyalty and life.

When I was a boy I wanted a June bug in April. There were no June bugs in the air, but I saw a lazy bumble bee floating around before me. I said to myself, "I will make a June bug out of you." I caught him and put his tail between two sticks and squeezed out his stinger. Then I tied a string to his foot, and I played that I had a June bug in April. I know lots of folks who never have what they want, and all because they are not willing to take the risk. Learn how to squeeze the stinger out of things and make what you want.

Some Sights He Saw—
and Some He Saw Not.

Back on the Job

I am back on the job again this week, after having finished up with the Federal court jury in Montgomery Monday afternoon. William Conway and I came home and left Will Deshazo and Obie Deloach down there to put in the rest of the week on a big land case in connection with the army reservation at Maxwell Field.

One of My "Buddies"

Cobb Burnett of Route 4 was an early morning visitor Tuesday. He came to town to bring a load of English peas. Mr. Burnett says he has fine prospects for early peas, beans, etc., on his truck farm. He will be ready to market lots of things in a few days. Cobb was one of my "buddies" in the army during the World War. We "fought the battle of Camp Hancock," at Augusta, Georgia, during the entire period of our enlistment. We went to the army together and came back together. As the years go by the ties of memories that bind the war "buddies" together grow stronger and sweeter. Experiences that were terrible bitter when they were upon us in 1918 have now mellowed into recollections that are among our most cherished possessions.

Another Friend Gone

When I returned from Montgomery one day last week I picked up the Columbiana paper and found an account of the sudden and unexpected death of Judge George W. Weaver. This was a distinct shock to me, as it must have been to his many other friends. George Weaver was a man of many admirable traits, even though he might be credited with many mistakes in life. Who does not make mistakes? He rose from obscurity to the highest place of honor among his people in Shelby County. He was a man of great ability, and he used his ability to serve his county in many ways.

"Doctor Bill" Is Dead

"Doctor Bill," whose real name was W. A. Williams died at his home south of Clanton Monday night. Bill was a negro who claimed Indian blood. He was a medicine man who administered his concotions of weeds and herbs to thousands of people who came to him from all over this country. It has been said that "Doctor Bill" did more to advertise Clanton than any other person in this generation. That may be true, but I wonder if it was advertising worth while. While he did not charge folks for his remedies, at the same time his "patients" paid him well; and it is doubtless true that he leaves a comfortable little lump of money for somebody to scramble over. It will be no trouble now to find negroes who claim kin with "Doctor Bill."

Firestone Air Balloons

"Firestone always keeps up with the parade," said Monroe Wyatt Tuesday morning, as he placed on display a stock of the new style Firestone Air Balloon Tires at the Woco Service Station. "I sold the first set of balloon tires ever sold in Clanton about ten years ago," he said, "and if somebody don't watch out I will sell the first set of these new air balloons."

Where is Hog Alley?

I notice in the paper this week some fellow is advertising a hog sale to be on Hog Alley, in Clanton. Didn't know we had an alley by that name. In fact, I hardly thought we had enough hogs in this part of the country to warrant us in naming one of our alleys Hog Alley.

Good Business For Him

Several drummers were seated in the smoking compartment of the train. They were bemoaning the general demoralized condition of business as they found it among their customers. Finally they turned to the quiet little man in the corner. "And how do you find things, brother?" "Never been better since I've been on the road." "For the love of Pete, and what's your line, may we ask?" "Selling red ink," was the answer.

HOW TO SILENCE CRITISM

Much ado has been made in Congress recently over the remark credited to Senator Reed of Pennsylvania to the effect that the United States now seems to need a Mussolini. Doubtless such a statement coming from a senator of influence and high standing was a bit startling, yet remarks to be heard on the streets that Congress has broken down completely and the the country needs some sort of a temporary dictator to clean up the mess, are by no means uncommon.

It is a notworthy fact that many of the alleged statesmen who cried out the loudest against the implication that democracy is a failure are among those who have had a great deal to do in bringing forth the present wave of criticism against the failure of Congress as an intrument of the people.

There can be little doubt that the lack of leadership which has recently been displayed in the House is responsible to an extent for the continuance of many phases of the depression. The House has been unable to function in the matter of raising adequate revenue, of cutting down the expenses of government or in withstanding the efforts of special interests to get aid from the treasury. Too many members have voted not with an eye to the best interests of the country but to what they regarded as the best interest of the ballot box in November. Yet they are apt to find in the long run that they have been shortsighted and mistaken in their estimate of the selfishness and lack of judgement of the great mass of voters.

Of course the United States is not going in for dictatorship and popular government has not proved a failure, in spite of the failure of Congress to function during the past several weeks. The reason for this is that Congress will finally be forced to come to an intelligent view of what the country needs by the very pressure of public opinion.

After the House and the Senate get through with economy and tax bills these measures will have to go to conference committees and there is still hope that much can be done there toward whipping the legislation into shape.

In the meantime if the statesmen on Capitol Hill who resent the talk about dictatorships, really want to silence that kind of argument, all they have to do is begin to function in the interest of the United States as a whole rather than the interest of special classes who may make a lot of noise now but are apt to be repudiated a little later on when people have all the facts before them.

In this survey they covered twelve states and interviewed 1,403 of their subscribers. They found that 68% of those interviewed are going to buy tires this summer, and that 27.2% of these car owners are going to buy Firestone Tires—the next highest is only 20.6% which shows the demand for Firestone Tires is 32% more than for any other make.

DAT BLOOMIN PREACHER

Elder Blossom Fills His Pintment on The Third Sunday in May, 1932

Evy time Ah comes here Ah notice dat you all is hahd to git to come in de house, why is dat? Do you spose it is cause you had rudder hear your sef talk dan to hear me? One thing Ah do no, you is not hahd to git outen de house. Cause de very minit Ah sa Amen, evy body makes fur de doah, an hikes out fur home widout sayin dog to nobody. Dar is Brudder Skates settin dar, Ah has nevah laid eyes on him atter preachin: by de time Ah gits out in de yard, he is gone. Now Brudder Skates, Ah wants you to open dis service by leadin us in prayer. (His prayer):

"Our Fadder in heben, we know dat you knows evy thing whuts gwyin on in dis worl. Ob course you knows dat de preacher is tellin de trouf bout me an you knows why Ah do dat way. You knows dat mah ole oman done gib me mah orders to not ax nobody to go home wid us till Ah buys her a livin-room suit. An now you knows Lord, dat times is hahd fur me to git it. Now Lord Ah wants you to git hold ob her an mak her see dat de preacher an evybody elce is beginnin to think dat Ah dont want dem to go home wid me. Lord bless evy body, an gib us a good service to day, an sabe us in heben. We ax in de name ob de Lord, Amen."

De lessen to day is 1st Corinthians 3rd chapter. (Reads lesson). You will fin mah tex dis mawnin in Hebrews 13:2; "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

When Paul wrote dese words, he mus have had in his mine de time when de three angels in de form ob men set under dat tree in de yard ob Abruhams tent. (We reads bout dat in de 12th chapter ob Genesis). One ob de angels set wid his back to de tent-doah, an Sarah, Abrahams wife, heard de angels sa somethin dat she didnt belebe, an she laffed an den denied it. Abraham entertained dem men cause ob de goodness in his own heart. An den de Lord made known to him whut He was gwyin to do to Sodom an Gomorrah. Last Wensday atternoon Ah wuz gwyin ovah to mah son's house an Ah met Sistah Sally Long, an Ah could tell dat she wuz happy befo she got to me, an here is whut made her happy. She sed, "Brudder Blossom, yistiddy evenin bout dark a man cum to mah gate an axed to sta all nite an Ah tole him dat Ah wuz not prepared to keep inny body, but ef he cold put up wid our fare Ah would do de bes Ah could fur him. An he thanked me an went in de house. An Ah wish you could hab heard him dat nite, readin and splainin de Bible. Ah tell you Brudder Blossom, he would git so happy sometimes dat he couldnt talk. An we all set up till atter 12 o'clock. It wuz jes lak an angel had bin to our house an Ah sho did hate to see him leave dis mawnin."

Mah brudders and sistahs, selfishness does not belong in de hart ob God's chillun. An de moah ob it we is got in our hart, de less ob love we is got fur our fellowman. You can belebe me or not, but it is a fac, dat dis ole worl ob mankind is cryin fur des a little love an sympathy. Des think ob de unselfishness ob our blessed Lord in sacraficin His own life on de cruel cross to sabe poah sinful wretches lak us. Lots ob us today whut clames to love de Lord, wont eben let strangers sleep in our barn, an some ob us maks out lak we wants folks to go home wid us frum church an den is real glad when da dont go. One man sed dat me an mah wife hadnt treated him rite cause we wouldnt visit him. An he hadnt nevah axed me but one time, an Ah went den.

An ole man wuz settin diein wid dropsey, an Ah had heard dat he wuz an infidel, an Ah took two or three wid me an went to his house one Sunday ebenin. An Ah axed him fur permission to pray wid him an he sa no, Ah dont need you to pray fur me an besides dat Ah wants you all to git out. An Ah sa, alrite sur, but you cant keep me frum prayin fur you atter Ah git home. De nex Thursday nite he sent fur me to pray fur him. An Ah went an he wuz sabed, an died bout two weeks later. It aint altogether dat people dont want to entertain people, but da jes dont think uv it, dats why.

Paul sed in de tex, "be not forgetful to entertain." You see we jes gits all rapped up in our selves, an let self-interests fill us up so dat we aint got no time or room fur no body elce. Its a great pitty dat we all cant be lak a certain white oman Ah knowed when Ah wuz a boy. A young stranger come to her house one ebenin an axed to sta all nite. An de nex mawnin she axed him bout his people, an he tole her dat he wuz compelled to leave home because ob a step-mother bein so cruel to him. An she sa you jes sta here wid me an Ah will be a mother to you. An he libed wid her till he died, which wuz bout three years. An when she looked mung his papers she foun who to rite to. An when his father cum, she foun dat he wuz a very wealthy man, an he wuz so glad she had tooken care ob his son dat he paid off de mortgage on her home an den gib her one thousand dollars in cash. Jesus sed in de 25 chapter ob Mat. "Inasmuch as ye did it to one of the least of these my brethern, ye have done it unto me, for I was a stranger and ye took me in."

Brudders, Jesus mought call at yoah home some dark, cloudy, cold, ebenin in de person ob some poor foot-sore traveler, axin only fur a piece ob bread an a place to la down. So dont be forgetful to entertain strangers. Ah has nevah saw de time dat Ah didnt hab nuff bred to gib a stranger a piece, an Ah's nevah ben so crowded dat Ah couldnt gib him a place to res. Sinnners, how bout you? Aint dar no room in your hart fur Jesus? Let me ax you to open de doah an let Him in. Cause He will bless yoah life here an sabe your soul in heben. Dats nuff now, Ahs gwyin to stop, atter Ah reads mah poem.

Jesus cum to mah hart one day
An nocked to git in.
An Ah opened de doah to de stranger
An He freed mah life ob sin.

An now Ah keeps Him in mah hart
An He blesses me evy day.
An as Ah lissens to His sweet voice
He keeps me in de way.

Sinners, open de doah ob yoah hart
Jesus is jes outside.
Ah no He will be glad to come in
An with always abide.

Stan an be dismiss.

ANTIOCH M. P. CHURCH

Our choir practice on Thursday night is making fine progress. Everyone seems to have caught the spirit, of which we are glad. Last Thursday night the house was well filled. We hope it continues so. The singing was fine. Man can make music, and appreciate it—why? Because of the harmony of man's powers, and the unity of man's nature.

God is essentially a unity, and his powers essentially a harmony. Man is a miniature duplicate of God. All cords of unity and hamony begin in God, and proceeding through His entire system, unite in man. They proceed from God by divergence and meet in man by convergence. God's system is an ellipse, and He and man are the foci. Man is the image of God. In fact, God declared before He made man that He would make him according to a pattern found in Himself.

Such being man's nature, his constitution, though complex, is a unity, and his powers are a hamony, corresponding with the harmony of things, one of whose natural expression in the concrete is music. Our ideas of such a man are naturally expressed by the use of musical terms. We say that he has no jarring as discordant elements in his constitution, that he enjoys a sweet concord of powers, that he is full of music.

We hope that everyone who loves music will join in the choir. No man ever heard and loved music, but what he was better for it. It uniformly enkindles in man the sublime, and holy into development which for the time being crushes out their opposite and is in its proper place when it is in the house of God.

All singers and lovers of music are invited to cooperate with us in this great work.—Rev. G. W. Stewart, pastor.

SOME WRITINGS OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

The United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission announces that four volumes of the set of approximately 25 volumes of the defenite edition of the writings of George Washington, are now ready for distribution. The publication of a complete collection of Washington's personal, military and state papers has been one of the major activities which Congress assigned the Federal Bicentennial Commission, as part of the nation's honors to Washington during this two hundredth year since his birth.

Nothing like this comprehensive edition of the Washington writings has been attempted heretofore, partly because private publishing houses recoiled at the expense. Fifty years after Washington's death, Jared Sparks, then president of Harvard, issued an edition of 12 volumes, in which he ommitted numerous passages and "improved" Washington's diction in others. Sixty years after the Sparks edition, Worthington C. Ford brought out another 14 volumes, taken directly from the Washington manuscripts. But as Washington left a larger number of papers than any other president, these editions, large as they are, contain less than 50 per cent of the whole, represented in 400 folders in the library of Congress.

As pointed out by Dr. John C. Fitzpatrick, editor of this great compilation and noted authority on Washington writings, "the lack of a complete publication of Washington's letters has made possible the slanderous belittlement of his character by present-day writers. In one way we are indebted to Sparks and Ford for the hnudreds of biographies of Washton now available. The pity of it is, however, that most of these biographies, so unsatisfactory because of their lack of complete information, have been read with avidity by the American public and so have been responsible for the vast amount of existent misconception regarding Washington. It is not surprising therefore, that one of our present day eminent historians, John Bach McMaster, should have stated that George Washington is an unknown man."

THANKS FROM S. J. M. WEBB

Please allow me to express my deep appreciation to those who untiringly supported me in the recent campaign. Also to those who voted for me on May 3rd. All of these deeds of kindness causes me to feel very humble, and if elected this fall, I hope to be able to verify the words to you, by a careful consideration on every matter pertaining to educational interests presented to the board, that I may do the right thing for all and show special favors to none. To those who did not vote for me, I have no ill felling whatever, and if elected this fall, will serve each of you as though you voted for me in the primary, and that to the very best of my ability.

In conclusion let me very kindly but earnestly insist that all we Republicans stand together and pull for the success of our party, and for the right. For together we stand and divided we fall. Yours for the success of the Republican party and an onward march in Educational advantages.—S. J. M. Webb.

PROVIDENCE BEAT 13

We are asking for a small space to say a few words in regard to our home-coming day at this place.

We must say that it was almost assuredly a success, with the exception of a little discrder, of which we are sorry to admit, that occured during the day.

It was a real home-coming day, and it seemed that everybody was made to rejoice, by the grasping of hands and meeting their friends and loved ones, on this most grand and lovely occasion.

The service was overwhelmingly attended by people, both far and near. The program for the day was splendidly carried out. And all those that missed hearing the splendid message rendered by Rev. Johnnie Martin, missed something really worth while.

The noon hour was well spent. After the good eatables were well arranged, Rev. R. M. Honeycutt gave thanks and everybody seemed to enjoy the many good things set before them for a few minutes.

The song service was called to order in the afternoon by J. E. Martin. The evening was well taken up by the singing of the most beautiful songs and quartets rendered by different ones, too numerous to mention. Our home-coming day was well spent, and we are now looking forward to the future. We sincerely thank and appreciate the cooperation of the many different classes present, and invite you to come again.

With many good wishes to the Banner and it's many readers.—W. F. Thompson.

MARS HILL

There will be an all day singing the 22nd of this month at Mars Hill, in the new book. We also expect to clean off the cemetery next Friday, the 20th of May. Everybody come and bring tools and help, that are interested.

JACOB AND ESAU RECONCILED

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 33:1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Two Brothers End a Quarrel.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Esau Forgives His Brother.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Righting a Wrong.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Cultivating Peace at Home and Abroad.

From Bethel, Jacob went to Padan-aram to his mother's people. Here he served Laban, his uncle, for twenty years; fourteen year for his wives, Leah and Rachel, and six years for certain wages.

I. Jacob Departs for Canaan (31:11-21).

The time had come for Jacob to go back to his kindred in the Land of Canaan. This he did according to the Lord's instruction to him (v. 13). Though going forward under divine direction, his Jacob nature caused him to take clandestine leave of Laban. When Laban realized the situation, he went in hot pursuit of him, but God appeared unto him in a dream and warned him against any act of violence toward Jacob. They formed a compact and Laban returned home.

II. Jacob's Experience on the Way (ch. 32).

Laban's return freed Jacob from the enemy who was pursuing him, but he faced a more formidable enemy in the person of Esau from whose wrath he had fled twenty years before.

1. Jacob meeting the angels (vv. 1-8). Two camps of angels met him to give him the assurance that God would be with him according to promise. Notwithstanding this, Jacob continued to scheme. He sent a deputation before him with a message of good cheer to Esau.

2. Jacob praying (vv. 9-12). Esau made no reply to Jacob's message, but went forward with an army of four hundred strong to met Jacob. In his distress, Jacob cast himself upon God in prayer, short, direct, and earnest.

a. He reminded God of his command issued for his return and also of the covenant promise (Gen. 31:3).

b. He pleads God's promise as to his personal safety (v. 9, cf. Gen. 28:13-15, 31-33). In praying to God we should definitely plead his promises in his Word on the ground of covenant relationship in Christ.

c. He confesses his unworthiness (v. 10). In this is shown the proper spirit of humility.

d. He presents definite petitions (v. 11). He laid before the Lord the definite request to be delivered from the wrath of Esau.

3. The angel of the Lord wrestling with Jacob (vv. 24-32, cf. Hos. 12:3, 4).

In God's school of discipline Jacob was making some improvement, but he was still under the sway of self-will and self-trust. Though he had laid the matter definitely before the Lord, he thought that his scheming would render God some assistance. Accordingly, he sent presents ahead to appease the anger of Esau. While on this journey a man met him and wrestled with him, but Jacob knew not who he was. He exerted every ounce of strength in what he thought was the struggle for his very life. The morning was approaching and still the wrestlers continued, Jacob not knowing that it was the Lord manifest in human form. He did not dare enter the promised land under the control of his self-sufficiency. His self-will must be broken—his Jacob nature must be changed. He was humbled by the dislocation of his thigh. When thus humbled, he quit wrestling and clung to God.

4. Jacob gets a new name (v. 28). He was no longer Jacob the "supplanter," but Israel, a "prince with God." Jacob had an experience at the Jabbok which wrought a mighty change in him. His new name was given him after he had a new nature. Jacob came to realize that he had been struggling with God, for he called the place "Peniel," which means "face to face with God." Jacob wrestled most of the night with God, but it was only when he yielded and laid hold of God that he got the blessing.

III. Jacob Meets Esau (33:1-11).

God had evident wrought with Esau for when Jacob approached him the sting of bitterness was gone. It was not Jacob's scheming that removed Esau's anger, but the action of God upon his heart. At Jabbok, Jacob got right with God, so when he met Esau it was an easy matter to get right with him. It is easy to get right with our brother when once we are right with God.

When
makes HIM FUSSY

One of the most important things you can do to make a teething baby comfortable is to see that little bowels do their work of carrying off waste matter promptly and regularly. For this nothing is better than Castoria, a pure vegetable preparation specially made for babies and children. Castoria acts so gently you can give it to young infants to relieve colic. Yet it is always effective, for older children, too. Remember, Castoria contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics—is absolutely harmless. When your baby is fretful with teething or a food upset, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Be sure you get genuine Castoria with the name:

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

CAN, CAN, CAN, CAN, IS SLOGAN FOR ALABAMA

Auburn, Ala., May 16.—"Can, can all you can," is the slogan adopted by Alabama home demonstration club women and 4-H club girls for the 1932 canning season. Last year 16,086 of these women and girls conserved 1,903,637 quarts of food products — meats vegetables, and fruits—and Miss Helen Kennedy, extension nutritionist of Auburn thinks that the 1931 record will be equaled in 1932.

County home dmonstration agents will make it a leading project during the remainder of the spring, all the summer, and the early fall. They have made a special study of it at short courses preparatory to conducting meetings of their clubs and giving demonstrations as to the latest and best methods of conserving food by canning, drying, preserving, or otherwise.

"The first objective of every family is to conserve an ample food supply for home need," said Miss Kennedy. The family budget should include enough of the different kind of foods, essential for a balanced ration throughout the year. It includes food for infants as well as for adults. A standard budget has been prepared and is used as a guide.

In addition to home needs many women and girls will can for the market. They will sell direct to consumers on the curb markets, at their homes, by mail, express or otherwise.

They are beginning their food conservation with the early fruits and vegetables in the spring and will conserve others in season. Meat, too, will be conserved in this way. Home agents have bulletins on the subject.

1932 SUMMER SCHOOL CATALOG IS MAILED

Auburn, Ala., May 16.—Catalogs for the 1932 summer session at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute are being mailed from the office of Dean Zebulon Judd to prospective students. The summer session will be divided into two terms, the first beginning June 6 and ending July 15; the second beginning on July 18 and edig August 20, at which time the third graduation exercises of the year at Auburn will be held.

A large number of courses will be offered by a large faculty of men and women especially for the courses they are to teach. In addition to Alabama students other states will be well represented, Dean Judd said.

Courses will be offered to graduate students as well as to undergraduate students. Graduate student enrollment has averaged 300 the last several years with good prospects for the 1932 session.

Dean Judd has asked those interested in the summer school to write for catalogs and any other information needed.

BRIEF NEWS NOTES

A North Carolina paper manufacturing company is now using cotton to the extent of 25 per cent in manufacturing bond paper. This means that a bale of cotton is consumed in making a ton of paper.

Alabama farmers are receiving this spring more than $1,500,000 of the crop production loans provided by an act of congress. At the end of April, Prof. L. N. Duncan, said that loans totaling $1,585,836 had been approved for 18,895 Alabama farmers.

Theodore Swann, Birmingham industrialist, predicts that the chemical industry will contribute much to the restoration of business activity in the United States during the next few years, just as mechanical and electrical developments—such as the automobile and the radio were big factors in the revival of business from the 1920-21 depression.

In a public statement issued May 6 Governor Miller advised owners of Alabama warrants to hold them for Alabama will pay them in full. He added: "I hear from many sources that there is a movement on foot designing financiers to purchase Alabama warrants from distressed owners at greatly less than their value; if true, then there will be a strong pressure for payment of them by their financial holders."

The budget as proposed recently to the German Reichstag contained no provision for further reparations payments, a press dispatch announced. In listing expenditures for the coming year, Finance Minister, Herman Dietrich said 700,000,000 marks ($165,000,000) would be used for interest and amortization on funded floating debts and reparations loans, which meant that no funds had been earmarked for further reparations.

MILLER ACCEPTS FOREST

New State Foerst In Geneva County

Montgomery, Ala.—A tract of approximately five thousand acres has been accepted by Governor Miller as a State Forest through the donation of the Jackson Lumber Company of Lockhart, Alabama, according to information issued by Hon. John H. Peach, Legal Advisor to the Governor. The land lies in the western part of Geneva County. The area has been logged over, but contains a considerable amount of young growth. It is believed by foresters that its reforestation by natnral means will ensue quite readily.

The new state forest will be devoted to experimental and demonstrational purposes. The means, methods and devices of reestablishing valuable timber growth upon the cut-over lands of the state can be well illustrated on this tract. No cost to the State is attached to the acceptance of the gift which was voluntarily tendered by the Lumber Company as a means of stimulating interest in timber production upon the nonagricultural lands in that section of the state.

WALLACE VICKERS BACK HERE

Into our office Tuesday walked a long, lanky, commanding looking young fellow, who acted like he was at home, but who was not quite as as familiar to as he seemed to be of us and our surroundings. After conversing a while we found him to be Wallace Vickers, son of the late estimable citizen, Lee O. Vickers of Mt. Pleasant community.

Wallace, a mere strap of a lad, left here shortly after the death of his father and went to Florida, where he has been living ever since. Jacksonville is his home, and he has been working for the county. That work has been suspended for a few months and Wallace has come back to farm with relatives, until his job opens up again.

Telephone ...Mrs. Green"

"Mother says to hurry as it sounds like an important call."

"Tell her that I'll be over as soon as I can take the dinner out of the stove."

Do you use your neighbor's telephone? Think how much better it would be to have one of your own. Then you need not bother anyone, and your friends can call you without embarrassment.

The entire family will find many uses for the telephone, with the added comfort of knowing that in emergencies the telephone is always ready to summon aid.

You, too, can have a telephone of your own for only a few cents a day. In fact, the service is so low in cost that it really doesn't pay to try to do without it.

And let the weevil WORRY

LOOKS like a mighty bad weevil year. We had two bone-dry summers in 1930 and 1931 and are about due for a wet one now. Owing to mild weather, weevils had a picnic all winter and they are just waiting for the squares to form.

It is going to be a race between the cotton and the weevils. Cotton sure is going to have a job keeping ahead of the weevils without a little help from you. Not much, if any, fertilizer under it, the crop is almost sure to be slow and sickly by June. Just the way the weevils want it.

What they do to your crop depends largely on what you do for your crop!

Side-dress! Chilean Nitrate, 100 pounds per acre (200 pounds would be much better) will set the crop early, ahead of the weevil. Then you are reasonably safe. But be sure you get Chilean. Nothing takes its place for side-dressing cotton.

Your dealer has it or can get it on a moment's notice. See him now!

RED MEN VISITORS HERE ON TUESDAY

Officials Returning From The Great Council Meeting In Montgomery

A delegation of the high moguls of the Improved Order of Red Men in Alabama, stopped for a while in Clanton Tuesday afternoon on their return from the Alabama Great Council meeting in Montgomery. The party was composed of Sam Hall, of Birmingham, Great Sachem; J. W. Pierson of Birmingham, past great Sachem; S. P. Beggs, of Birmingham past Great Sachem; R. E. Whaley, of Montevallo, past Great Sachem; Mitt Thomas, of Pinson, chairman of the Finance Committee, of the Great Council; and A. H. Mixon, of Ensley, Great Chief of Recodrs.

These gentlemen were in very high spirits about the prospects of the order in Alabama. They stated that the Great Council is out of debt, and has some wampum in the belt, and is ready to forge ahead in a manner befitting the merits of an order that means so much to the brotherhood of men who are enlisted in it.

"What about those Red Men you have scattered around Clanton," they asked. When assured that a great many of them are still here wandering about lonely for the good old times we used to have together, they declared that something ought to be done to get old Waxahatchie tribe back on the map.

If there are any of the old members who would be interested in getting the Tribe back into working order, The Union-Banner would be glad to cummunicate the fact to the gentlemen who were our visitors Tuesday. Something might be started in big style.

PROF. AND MRS. L. C. WARR TO OPEN SUMMER SCHOOL HERE

On next Monday morning, May 30, 7:00 o'clock, at the Chilton County High School, Prof. and Mrs. L. C. Warr, will open a summer school which will run for six weeks.

The courses will be open to Senior, Junior, and grammer grade pupils. The courses to be determined by a sufficient number of pupils enrolling for the various subjects.

This is an opportunity for those children who have failed to make their grades during the past school year, and also for those children who are deficient or weak in particular subjects. If your child failed in any subject during the past school term, do not let him begin school next fall with this failure hanging over him. If he passed in his work, and yet, you feel that he is weak in any subject, this is an opportunity for you to let him have a thorough review course and much drill work that he may be made stronger for next year's tasks.

Mr. and Mrs. Warr are both well trained and experienced teachers, and their work will be thorough and painstaking. This is an opportunity for the children of Clanton, and we trust that parents will take advantage of it.

The fee per child for the entire six weeks will be $10.00. To be paid on entrance Monday morning.

Advanced work for next year's credit will be offered if requested by a sufficient number of pupils who have made at least an average of B. in last year's work. (No pupil ranking below B will be allowed to enroll for advance work). The primary purpose of the school however, is not to teach advanced work, but to take care of those pupils who really need to go to school in order to start the new year, next September, with no back work, and those pupils who desire to take thorough review courses in order to strenghten their background.

If you are interested in the summer school, you may either call Mr. or Mrs. Warr or be at the high school Monday morning to enroll your child.

BIG SCHOOL MEETING HERE

Harman and Keller Will Speak Next Saturday

AT COURTHOUSE 2 O'CLOCK P. M. EVERYBODY URGED TO ATTEND

Speakers Will Give Bare Facts About Alabama School Situation

A meeting of very great importance to the educational progress of Chilton County will be held at the courthouse next Saturday afternoon when Dr. A. F. Harman, state superintendent of education, and J. A. Keller, president of Alabama Education Association, will come here in response to an invitation from the Chilton County Board of Education.

The County Board hopes that a representative number of people from every school district in the county will come to the meeting and hear these distinguished and able leaders discuss the educational system of Alabama. To accomplish this result in the way of attendance at the meeting, the County Board issues a profound and earnest request that every person in the county who is interested in the schools, come to the meeting.

It would be impossible to pick two men who are more able to discuss facts and figures about Alabama's educational interests than Mr. Harman and Mr. Keller. They are not out with axes to grind. They are not out to gouge somebody with politics. They are out in the interests of the school children of Alabama. They are coming to Chilton County because they are interested in our children. They want to talk to the parents of those children. And it is certain that no parent could take a better step right now than to come to hear these men speak, and thereby learn some important facts about our schools.

Remember the meeting will be at the courthouse in Clanton next Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. The trustees in every district should get busy and see that a delegation of citizens and school patrons come.

BOY KILLED BY ACCIDENT SHOT

Tragedy at Home of Bert Frederick Neal Jemison On Monday Evening

Robert Bryce Coe, age 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Coe, near Jemison, was killed instantly late Monday afternoon, by the accidental discharge of a shot gun.

Coroner J. Mell Martin was called to the scene of the tragedy and his investigation resulted in the pronouncement of accidental death.

The fatal accident happened at the home of Bert Frederick, uncle of the accident victim. The boy had been picking strawberries at the Frederick place Monday. In the afternoon when a rain came up, young Coe and another young boy, Arthor Frederick, took a small rifle and went out to shoot rabits. When they returned to the house, it was said that Coe went in the house to put up the rifle. As he set the rifle down in the corner beside a shot gun, the shot gun in some way discharged. The load from the gun struck the boy in the side of the neck and jaw, tearing a great hole, and killing him instantly.

The body was left on the floor where it fell until Coroner Martin arrived and made investigation of all details.

Burial of young Coe was at Ashby Tuesday. It is stated that R. L. Coe, father of the youth, is a brother-in-law of Mr. Fate Langston, of Jemison, and lives two miles west of Jemison.

SECOND PRIMARY

Republicans of Chilton County are reminded that the second primary, or run-off, will be held on June 14th.

At that time the voters of the County will choose between C. D. Duke and O. L. Devaughn for commissioner of the Fourth District, and between J. L. Smith and C. L. Wilkins, for member of the school board.

These are important places to be filled and there are good men to choose from. This ought to assure a full turnout of the Republican voters on the 14th of next month.

41 CAR LOADS OF BERRIES SHIPPED

Production As Large This Year As Any Year In Strawberry History

In spite of the severe freeze which completely wiped out the first strawberry crop in Chilton County this spring, it has turned out that the production of berries in the Clanton area has been as large this year as in any year of the past.

A report from Mr. Jasper Dennis Tuesday stated that already a total of 41 carloads have been shipped from Clanton. Up to last Friday taking account of about 35 cars shipped to that time, the growers of the Clanton association had received in round figures twenty thousand dollars for their berries.

Mr. Dennis estimates that the Clanton berry growers have paid out over $6,500 for picking, practically all of which has been spent with the merchants of Clanton.

Statements from some of the leading merchants of Clanton indicate that the berry crop returns have proven a very noticable stimulant to business here in the past few weeks. Purchases have of course been small, but it has been cash transactions, and has helped out our local business situation considerably.

The last three Saturdays have been the busiest days experienced by Clanton Merchants in many years. One of our leading merchants, who has been in business here for fourteen years, declares that one of the last three Saturdays was the busiest day his store ever enjoyed.

There are yet plenty of berries, but perhaps there will not be many more carload shipments. The association will, however, continue to handle as many of the berries as possible by making local truck shipments to Birmingham, Montgomery, Selma, and other nearby places.

KIWANIS INTERESTED IN HOSPITAL HERE

Another treat and a very instructive and interesting address was given members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club at their regular weekly luncheon last Thursday, when Dr. F. G. Dubose of Maplesville, formerly of Selma, and one of the most prominent physicians and surgeons of the state spoke to the club.

The club had as another guest, Dr. V. J. Gragg, prominent physician and surgeon of Clanton and head of the Central Alabama Hospital, which has recently reopened. The club's program was "Progress of Hospitals." Dr. Gragg read a very interesting letter of information concerning surgery, dating back in the years of the Egyptians.

Dr. Dubose, in a clear cut, well understood manner, impressed on the Kiwanians the importance of backing the home town hospital, and the value of such an institution to a community. He told in illustrated personal experiences, of the value of doctors in a community cooperating to bring about a more economical and better service to the people.

The Kiwanis Club feels complimented by the acceptance of the invitation to speak to them, by Dr. Dubose, who has recently moved to Maplesville where he will make his home.

Junior Base Ball

Editor Union-Banner:

The American Legion is sponsoring a Junior Base Ball League, which is nation-wide. I have been appointed Loop Chairman, in the Loop, which comprises the following towns: Montgomery, Prattville, Wetumpka, Tallassee, Clanton, Hayneville, Fort Deposit, and Rockford. I have had a meeting in my office with a bunch of boys and designated J. O. Ray, Jr., of this city, as base ball coach of the Chilton County Post team and the boys also elected Bill Simpson as assistant coach. The Chilton County Post of the American Legion covers the entire county, and all boys in the county who will not be 17 years of age on or before June 30, 1932, are eligible candidates for this team.

This team will be selected from all those who report to the coach, J. O. Ray, Jr., on or before June 30, 1932, as on that date the roster of the varsity junior league team will have to be sent in to headquarters and all have to be signed up. It is likely that we can manage to get two or three teams out of this county and the more young men that report to the coach for a trial, the more recreation the young men get and the likelihood of a better team.

Beginning Monday of this week, at the Chilton County High School ball park, at 2 p.m., the boys started their practice under an experienced base ball coach, and I trust there will be considerable competition for a tryout on each position on this junior base ball team, and I trust that in the near future that the capital loop will boast of a championship team of this loop and we will get in the finals at the close of the season.

The following local merchants, who handle base ball material donated base ball supplies for the initial practice: Clanton Building Supply Company, Alred Drug Company and Calloway Drug Company, all three of which firms handle base ball material.

Let not only the American Legion get behind these young men in their undertaking, but let Chilton County get behind them also and lend them our encouragement in their undertaking. The foregoing are some of the rules for the junior base ball league for 1932:

The competition will be open only to boys who are amateurs (that is boys who have not been paid for playing base ball) and who will not have attained their 17th birthday before June 30, 1932. (Note: A boy born prior to midnight, June 29, 1915 is not eligible.)

Each player must be a bona fide resident of the community served by the post sponsoring the team in which he enrolls in accordance with the regulations laid down by the executive committee of the respective departments.

No team may carry more than fifteen players, and all players must have been enrolled before June 30, 1932. The player personnel of a team cannot be changed after date of official enrollment. Substitutions for purposes of strengthening will not be allowed under any circumstances. Only in case of death, may a vacancy be filled with a substitute player, and then only when authorized by the department Athletic director for competitions within his department, and by the national director of the Americanism Commission for Regional, Sectional and Final Tournaments.

All tournaments to decide state champions will be under the direction of the state organizer of the American Legion. The athletic officer or the department athletic commission of each state, shall formulate such rules and regulations not in conflict with these rules as are best suited for conditions of that department for the playing of local, county, district and state tournaments. Such rules and regulations as will stimulate and protect competition shall be established. The state athletic officer or his duly appointed representative of the American Legion, shall have the power to disqualify, suspend or remove any manager, coach or player, violating any of these rules or other rules promulgated within his jurisdiction. All questions and disputes within a department shall be decided by the department athletic officer or by such commission as the department may designate. There shall be no appeal from such decision to the National Headquarters of the American Legion or elsewhere.

The state championship teams must be certified by their respective department athletic officer to the national director of the Americanism commission not later than August 10, 1932. This certificate must be accompanied by a certified copy of each player's original certificate of entry and eligiblity, birth certificate, photograph of player, etc.

Any boys who will be interested in the junior base ball league may either communicate with the undersigned, Mr. Ray, Bill Simpson or Dan Smith, and I sincerely trust that the Chilton County Post team will be in the play-off games at the close of the season. Respectfully yours.—Percy M. Pitts.

IGINAL

May 25 Important Date in U.S. History

May 25, is a date often neglected in recounting the important events of our history, but is one of great significance. On May 25, 1787, we are informed by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, George Washington was elected president of the Constitutional convention.

This convention had been called for the purpose of amending the Articles of Confederation under which the country had been governed since 1781, and which had proved ineffectual. Instead, however, the delegates assembled at Philidelphia threw the Articles over-board and adopted a new Constitution which has since been our instrument of government.

On the very first day of the convention, George Washington was called up to the chair as president of the body. The man who had led the continental army to victory, earning the title of "Frist in war," was now given this signal honor and was soon to add to that title, "First in peace."

The fact that the foremost men of the country were gathered on this occasion and the fact that this convention was probably the most important assembly ever held on this continent, further attests to the esteem in which George Washington was held by his fellow countrymen.

We know from source records that Washington made only one suggestion to the convention in session. We also know however, from the records of his contemporaries, that he was one of the most influential delegates to the convention. His was not the role of an impassioned orator, but a meditator—a conciliator who, by his glorious character, by his clear thinking, and by his patriotism, was able to bring the discontented human elements together to make possible our constitution.

As every student of American history knows, the constitutional convention was beset with difficulties. Sectional rivalries cropped up; different theories of government were ardently sponsored; debates became heated, and personalities clashed. George Washington was always there to help iron out these difficulties. Who can tell? Without the aid of George Washington, the constitution as we know it might never have been evolved.

D. S. ROBINSON THANKS VOTERS

I am saying through this good old Union-Banner, talking newspaper; I thank the 511 voters that cast their vote for me in the primary of May 3rd, expressing their right to vote for me, that I might be a servant of the people as a member of the school board of education, in and for the people of Chilton County. But as the 512 votes that were cast were not enough to nominate me, then I will be ready to help support all the nominees of the Republican party, with all the loyalty that is about me in the coming November election.

I am saying to every Republican voter in Chilton County, let's not be careless about attending the polls in the general election in November, 1932, and give our nominees a full support that will elect them over the top to each office. Now any time I can serve any of my friends, call on me and I will be pleased to serve you. As to being offended at those that did not vote for me, I do not carry that; that is your good right.

Again thanking the 511 voters for their vote for me from the good part of my heart.—I remain, yours for service, D. S. Robinson.

WHEN HE CAN'T PAY HE AT LEAST IS ENTERTAINING

A creditor of mine sent me a letter asking that I please remit. I did not have the money, so I sent him the following letter:

"It is impossible for me to send you a check in response to your request. My present financial condition is due to the effects of federal laws, state laws, county laws, corporation laws, by-laws, brothers-in-laws, mother-in-law, and outlaws that have been foisted upon the unsuspecting public. Through the various laws I have been held down, held up, helped up, walked on, sat on, flattened out, and squeezed until I don't know where I am, who I am, what I am, or why I am.

"These laws compel me to pay a merchant tax, capital stock tax, income tax, poll tax, real estate tax, property tax, auto tax, gas tax, water tax, light tax, cigar tax, street tax, school tax, syntax, and carpet tax.

"The government has so governed my business that I do not know who owns it. I am suspected, inspected, disrespected, examined, re-examined, until all I know is that I am supplicated for money for every need, desire and hope of the human race, and because I refuse to fall and go out and beg, borrow or steal money to give away, I am cussed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, lied to, lied about, held up, held down and robbed, until I am nearly ruined; so the only reason I am clinging to life is to see what is coming next."

HARMAN URGES SCHOOLS CLOSE UNTIL BUDGET WILL BALANCE

Monroeville, Ala., May 23.—Dr. A. F. Harman, state superintendent of education, today advised and urged that county and city boards of education and boards of trustees of educational institutions in the state do not endeavor to reopen the schools for which they are responsible this fall or until such time as it is certain that their budget will be balanced.

Dr. Harman made these recommendations in an address at a county-wide mass meeting opening the campaign of the Alabama Education Association for "the education of the children of the state." J. A. Keller, of Andalusia, president of the association, also spoke.

He said the campaign was not for or against any public official or group of officials connected with any branch of the state government but to acquaint the people of the state with the true conditions concerning the schools and to urge immediate action.

Dr. Harman acknowledged that the state faces a deficit of "distressing magnitude" and that is must balance its budget, but he insisted that "to balance the budget with the ignorance of children is neither economy nor good government."

He said it is evident that budgets of these various boards of the education and boards of trustees cannot be balanced unless the appropriations for education made by the legislature are available and that it was necessary that county and city boards of education know "when, where and what" amounts of money they are to receive in order that "even the simplest business methods may be obtained."

"Therefore, as state superintendent of education, I now advise and urge that county and city boards of education and boards of trustees of institutions of this state, in the absence of definite assurance of the prompt payment of moneys past due and of moneys to fall due in the future, not endeavor to reopen the doors of the schools and institutions for which they are responsible this fall or until such time as it is certain that their respective budgets can be balanced," Dr. Harman said.

"This will mean, of course, that many school systems, particularly in the rural schools will find it necessary to remain closed indefinitely."

The state superintendent of education advanced three methods of relieving the state of its present dilemma. One, to curtail ill appropriations to such an extent as will leave the budget in balance. He said this was unthinkable by a state that has made such progress as Alabama in the last 25 years.

Two, levy additional taxes in sufficient amount to strike the desired balance. This too, he held, is not to be contemplated at such a time as this.

The third way out, he said, is to reduce appropriations wherever possible without sacrificing the most vital services by the state and levying such additional revenues as reasonably could be expected to be placed upon the people of the state.

Dr. Harman said that the campaign was not for the payment of the salaries of teachers, however important and solemn the obligation of the state to do this is. He said the teachers have arisen to the very heights of loyalty and carried on, but that no reasonable people should expect such a thing to continue indefinitely.

I caution the people of the state to guard jealously their rights and privileges and present provisions for the conduct of schools of every kind he concluded.

GIVE ME FLOWERS WHILE I LIVE

It has been but few flowers I have received in my life. My life has been unpleasant. Too, my life has been unhappy to myself and all others. I have been a cripple for over 34 years. Cripples and sick folks are most in the way of someone. Folks nowadays haven't got time to be bothered with that kind of folks.

But listen, I am down today, but tomorraw it may be you. I can't help being a cripple, if I could, I surely would. You can't help being sick, but God's will must be done. He made a cripple out of me to show you what could be done. I am staying here for something, I know not what. I am no pleasure to my self or any other. But maybe in the world to come it will be happy for such as I.

I have been made light of right to my face, but I could not help myself, only turn my eyes and feel bad. God was with me, he is all the pleasure to me. He is with me at all times. He has gone with me through some mighty dark places. When a man is down, don't pass him by, give to him one welcome smile. Just lend him a hand and help him to stand. Be kind to a man when he is down. Give me your flowers to day, tomorrow I may not can see them.

When I am dead your kind words or flowers will not help me, there will be plenty of flowers in heaven that will never wilt.

Thanks to the paper for space, hoping that everyone that reads this will take it ta heart and be kind to the helpless. — Reauby Chasteen, R 7, Clanton, Alabama.

Should Our Rural Folk Be Penalized?

(By Martha McDevitt, in the National Rural Letter Carrier)

The public and most especially the farmers have been quoted as desiring economies in the government payroll. Commodities of the farmer are not bringing a fair revenue to his coffers, while his actual hours and days of labor have not been diminished, and neither have his taxes. This would most naturally inspire an appeal to the heads of the government and congress that some legislation be enacted that will reduce his expenditures. Unfortunately, at this time, legislation is being considered under the cloak of aiding the farmer, that will be a positive step backward to all rural communities and yet not reduce his taxes one iota.

The farmer pays many taxes, for the county, township, school, and state, but these do not enter the United States Treasury at all. The only direct tax that goes to the government is the income tax, and unless he is assessed under this catagory he is not directly contributing to the government. About the only direct governmental service that is furnished every farmer is his daily mail service.

The ruarl mail delivery is a service that the government provides for the benefit of the farmer, and is a contribution of the government that is necessary. Last week the Senate returned the post office appropriation bill to its appropriation committee with the instruction to slash $80,000,000 from the total amount appropriated for this department, for all postal business.

Postmaster General Brown immediately appeared before the appropriation committee of the senate and informed them that if this amount of money is deducted from the total appropriations for 1933 all branches of the post office department would suffer. The transfer and delivery of mail would greatly be impaired and the progress of the post office department would be stifled.

He specially pointed out that rural delivery service would be greatly curtailed. For this branch of the postoffice service he says: "It will be necessary to consolidate about 8,000 rural routes and place about 9,000 others on a basis of tri-weekly instead of daily service."

In other words, it means that of the $80,000,000 loss or curtailment in the appropriations approximately 25 per cent will be borne by farmers. Out of the total number of twenty-five and one-half million patrons who receive their mail daily, five and one-half million will receive their mail every other day. Even though this be done the taxes of the farmer will not be reduced, for unless he is contributing to the income tax he is not paying directly for his rural service except through the purchasing of postal supplies.

The farmer asks to be protected from high taxes and as usual he is being penalized and not helped.

The rural mail service is about 35 years old. Before the time of its inception the farmer did not have the convenience of the postman coming right to his door. Since that time the rural service has grown until it has reached the peak of 42,000 routes. Rural carriers are civil service employees who have passed a competitive examination and are men and women of excellent character and high standing in their respective communities.

While many of these rural routes were laid out in horse and buggy days, their roads, for the most part, still are unimproved, for although there has been a great deal of improvement during the past decade it has been on the highways and not on the roads that the farmer and carrier must use. These carriers must furnish their own equipment and are paid for the number of miles their route consists of. They are allowed four cents per mile "equipment allowance" while other government workers are allowed six cents per mile if their car is used in making trips on gevornment business. This equipment allowance is over the carrier's basic salary, as the carrier must furnish all equipment. In many instances carriers must use horses, automobiles, and snowmobiles in the course of a year's time on a rural route due to climatic and geographical conditions.

At the present time as vacancies occur in the rural service the post office department is making consolidations instead of appointing new men, and in this manner $400,000 every year is saved in that one department without inconveniencing the rural patron.

The ruarl carrier sells stamps, money orders and is a source of revenue to the department that other branches of the postoffice department, such as the city carrier, is not. A concerted effort on the part of city organizations has been made to curtail the rural delivery service to the farmer, protecting the interest of the business man, and miarepresenting the rural carrier to the farmer. He is charged with holding a cheap political position; of being paid for eight hours a day and only working two hours; of carrying passengers along with the mail and collecting additional pay for this service. The truth as borne out with the postal rules and reulations, is that the rural carrier is paid for the number of miles he serves. No civil service employee may be politically active and rural carriers are not even permitted to accept a position on their local school board if it is an elective one, regardless of whether he would receive any compensation or not. They are positively forbidden to carry any passengers on their route while they are on duty delivering the mail. This last regulation is one that often irks the rural carrier, as he would like to give a lift to his farmer patron if he meets him on the road some distance from his home, and yet he cannot offer transportation.

As a result of this vicious propaganda, the farmers, in many instances through the farm papers and their local papers have been duped into believing many untruths relative to their service, and the ultimate result will be curtailment of this postal service. The farmer should protect his interests to the extent of keeping in contact with the unfair legislation as outlined above and protest to his senator immediately so they may destroy it.

Don't give the weevils a chance
ALL any weevil asks is a chance—one chance. Once he gets busy with a square, the boll is gone. Reports indicate enough weevils this year to ruin the crop, if they get a chance.
Whether they get it or not, depends pretty much on you.
Weevils can't hurt a crop much, once the bolls are set. Because of the heavy infestation this year, set your crop as early as you can.
Nothing takes the place of a Chilean Nitrate side-dressing for making an early crop. There is no way a little money could be better invested now than for 100 pounds (200 pounds would be better) of Chilean Nitrate to side-dress each acre of your cotton.
Don't fail to specify Chilean Nitrate when you see your dealer. That is just as important as side-dressing itself.
Get busy! The weevils will be plenty busy soon.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert)

Long and painful hearings before the senate committee in its efforts to construct an equitable tax law, and especially the protests against some of the special sales and nuisance taxes, indicate that perhaps the House leaders who favored a small and inclusive sales tax were not so far wrong after all. For example: Protests against the so-called nuisance tax on low priced admissions to theatres are serving to call attention once more to the rapid growth of the motion picture industry in the United States and the undisputed public interest in it. From a small beginning the industry has now become one of the big leaders, and the period of development has been considerably less than one generation.

To show how difficult is the task of fixing equitable taxes, the representatives of the motion picture theatres and the producers declare that a tax on low priced admissions would close a great many of the smaller theaters in the United States. Evidence was to the effect that more than five thousand had already been closed, due principally to the depression, by January, 1932, this being about twenty per cent of the total number in the United States.

Argument for the theater nuisance tax is that the people can get along without theaters. Leaving aside the question of further crippling a great industry, giving employment to thousands all over the country. It may be true that we could get along in a fashion without amusement. As a matter of fact we could get along without every thing except food and shelter, but if everything else were taxed out of existence would life, on a purely animal plane, really be worth living? And would there not soon be revolutions of all sorts?

The change which has been made in the amusement and culture of the small town by the development of the motion picture is not always realized. In the old days ninety per cent of the people knew nothing first hand about opera, about the great dramatic stars, the plays and musical productions of the day. The other ten per cent, more fortunate in worldly means, was able to journey to New York or Chicago once or twice a year to acquire culture direct. But the modern talking picture has changed everything. The greatest operatic and dramatic stars, and the latest dramatic and musical productions and scenes of travel and current interest are available nightly in the small theater of the average town and village, and the price is no longer prohibitive to anyone.

This accounts for the widespread objection to the nuisance taxes, which objection is not coming directly from those who are directly interested in the businesses which are proposed to be taxed. Of course taxes must be raised in some manner, but there will be far less complaint finally if these are spread over a broader area and not confined to a few industries, and especially those in which great mass of the people are interested. For in the long-run, let it be remembered, the consumer has to pay the tax, and when he pays it directly through the box office in a few extra pennies for a low priced amusement ticket, or by affixing a special stamp to something which he is compelled to purchase, he is immediately reminded of the depression and the way he is helping to pay for it. Indirect taxes or taxes spread over a broad base are easier to pay and cause a minimum of complaint in the long run. Nobody likes to pay taxes but if one does it without knowing it, at least his morale is better and his hope for the future greater.

NORRIS FOR ROOSEVELT

Supporters of governor Franklin D. Roosevelt for the Democratic nomination for the presidency are said to have been considerably heartened by the statement that Senator Norris, of Nebraska, progressive Republican, would support the New York governor if he becomes the choice of the Democratic convention.

To the neutral political observer it would seem, however, that the endorsement of Senator Norris might be a two-edged sword. It is to be admitted that Senator Norris seems to have a firm hold on the Nebraska electorate, so far as his own political fortunes are concerned, but it is also pointed out that he seems to be unable to utilize this firm hold in the interest of any other candidate. For example: Senator Norris endorsed Al Smith in 1928 and threw cold chills down the spines of some of the weak-kneed brethren of the Republican ranks. But Nebraska did not go for Al Smith, and neither did the other states which might have been influenced by Senator Norris' brand of progressivism.

The fact is that Governor Roosevelt's weakest situation is in the more or less conservative East, and not in the progressive West where Senator Norris might give him some aid. And the reason many of the eastern Democratic leaders are cool to Roosevelt is because of the fact that they suspect that he is in sympathy with some of the radical views which Senator Norris espouses. Therefore, the endorsement of Senator Norris is calculated to weaken Governor Roosevelt before the Democratic convention in the east where he needs help, as well as to help him in the west, where he is getting along pretty well now.

Of course, Governor Roosevelt still has the edge so far as the Democratic race is concerned, but his campaign has slowed down somewhat since he lost California. In the meantime the Massachusetts Democratic hosts are planning to go to Chicago in a solid Smith special train, just as they went to Houston in 1928 in a solid Smith train. The prospect for fun and excitement in the Democratic convention is growing.

THE ANNUAL MAY SINGING

True to the precedent establishment during the past third of a century, during which time the annual Fourth Sunday in May singing has been held without interruption, the thirty-third session had the old Salem, friendly, hand-shaking spirit present, which has characterized this gathering ever since its inception in 1899. There were not many on hand for the dinner-on-the-ground, but the dinner was there for them. In the afternoon, however, the people gathered, and the scene very strikingly bore the resemblance of similar gatherings fifteen years ago when the folks drove their first Ford down to old Salem, parked it in the shade of a beech tree at the edge of Cargyle Creek, left part of the children there to mind the car and the dinner and carried the madam and the rest of them to the old white washed house to scrouge in and hear some of the reverberations being sent out on the breezes by the crowded but enthusiastic class of singers.

But this story is about to get too pathetic, if you know what that means. In other words, the ideas get too touching for means of expression. Nevertheless, when the place of the singing was changed to Providence, the spirit was not dropped but was brought on up there and has remained intact every year since. There seems to be some tender, heart-felt emotion there that is absent at all other singings over the county; or at least, it seems different. Singers coming from miles away—some who have never been to the place before, feel comfortably at home and know that they are among friends who are glad to mix with them, etc.

Everyone went away, feeling the day well spent, and looking anxiously forward to May next year when the same experiences may be re-enacted and the same old Salem spirit felt by and between everybody .

Anyhow, if there were a lot of paid publicity agents boosting stocks in 1929 it must be admitted that now most of them belong to the army of the unemplyed. A least we haven't noticed much boosting of late.

Our Sunday School Lesson

If you attend Sunday school, and I am sure the most of you do, I am sure that you come across topics from time to time which may be a bit puzzling or hard to understand. In cases of this kind, explanation by an authority on such matters might be welcomed. In this connection, I want to call your attention to a feature of the Union-Banner which is carried every week, which is headed: "Sunday School Lesson". This is carried each week, embodying the text, etc., of the improved uniform international Sunday school leson system, with full discussion by Rev. P. B. Fitzwater, D. D., member of the faculty of Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Coming from such authority, these discussions and explanations should prove very helpful to anyone needing extra help in preparing his Sunday school lesson, teacher or pupil. Maybe it wouldn't be a bad idea to make a practice of reading this column every week.

Why Interdenominational

When Bob Jones College, at College Point, Fla., was opened, many people naturally assumed that it would be a Methodist institution, and the announcement that the college would be interdenominational was quite a surprise. Many people wanted to know why this policy was to be followed. And I heard a representative of Bob Jones College explaining one of the reasons, one day last week. Many people, in all churches have a kind of idea that theirs is the only correct creed to be found, and that one who does not believe as they do in every particular is just that far wrong. The student body of Bob Jones College includes students from pretty near any kind of church you can name. As these boys and girls from different beliefs come in contact with each other from day to day, in the class rooms and on the campus, they form a different opinion, altogether. They find that, after all, a member of another church or belief is not the devil with his horns clipped, but a good, reasonable, likeable, honest and trustworthy person. As these boys and girls work and play together through their college days, a close union develops, and they go back to their people and their churches with different ideas and views of people and creeds different from their own. In this way, closer union and a better understanding between the different faiths of the future is inevitable. This is the theory, or one of the theories, at least, upon which Bob Jones College authorities proceeded in making it interdenominational. And these authorities are well pleased with the results already showing from the experiment.

Let's Look Back

Just looking back for something worth seeing one day last week, and I came across an old copy of the Saturday Evening Post, an issue published in February, 1912, just a bit over 20 years ago. Perusing this copy, I found quite a few interesting things. Automobiles were just beginning to break the ice and come into their own in a fairly big way about that time, although they had been on the market for several years. Looking at the pictures, reading the advertisements, and checking the prices was very interesting. For instance, a Ford ad carried the announcement of the 1912 Model T, 22 horse-power, priced from $690 to $900, f. o. b. Detroit; the nearest thing they had listed in comparison to a present closed body style was a "landaulet" to sell for $900 at the factory. That car's comparative 1932 model Ford would be an 8-cylinder 4-door sedan, 65 horse-power, which sells for $540 at Detroit. In other words, the present Ford is three times as powerful, with no comparison to be made in body style, riding quality, and other points too numerous to mention, and yet it sells for a bit over half what the 1912 did. That was just one comparison I made. Other cars were advertised, with stress being laid on the "big, 40-horsepower motor, up-to-date acetylene lighting system," etc., while another raised a big racket about their car because it could be started from the seat. In these days, when it seems everybody wants to contend that the world is going to the devil and always was, I believe it would do people some good to turn back through some of those "good old days" to get a real close comparison with present prices, quality considered. I believe there would be a big slump in the Belly-Achers Union. And that makes me think of something else I read, in connection with this depression business. One man says: If people will stop grinning and wondering when the depression is going to end and start using this energy in trying to bring about the end, we'll all get back to normal a lot sooner.

Who's Who—Thos. J. Littlejohn

Thomas Jefferson Littlejohn was born about three miles northwest of Clanton, March 29, 1881, the son of J. M., and Lucy (Riggins) Littlejohn. He received his education in the Unity school in his home community, and in the McMorris school in Clanton. He worked on his father's farm until about the age of 21, when he went to work with E. M. Pinckard & Co., continuing with this firm for about 15 years. After this he went on the road for the American Snuff Co., in the north Alabama territory for about one year, and then in the Knoxville, Tenn., territory for two years. Following this, he was with Canton-Shepherd Grocery Co., wholesale grocers, of Tuscaloosa, for some time. In 1922, Tom went to work for Clanton Motor Car Co., as salesman. In this year he was elected sheriff of Chilton County, which position he held from 1923 to 1927. In December, 1922, he married Mrs. Lula Powell; she died in August, 1925. In October, 1929, he married Miss Grace Foshee, of Clanton; they have one daughter, Tommie Sue. At the expiration of his term as sheriff, in 1927, Tom again joined the sales force of the local Ford agency, which by this time, had been changed from Clanton Motor Car Co., to Clanton Motors. He held this position until May, 1929, when he was appointed local Ford dealer, and made manager of Clanton Motors, which position he holds at the present time. Chilton County and her people can point to Tom Littlejohn as a native son with pride. He is highly respected by all who know him, and he is one of the most widely known men in the county. He has the name of making good on every job he ever tried, including the position as sheriff of this county, which office he filled with distinction; it is claimed by many that he left this offce with more friends than when he entered it—something which rarely happens in an office of this kind. He has been with the local Ford agency as salesman several years and as stated above, the Ford authorities thought enough of his general ability to turn the Ford business over into his hands in 1929. Needless to say, he has been the usual big success in this position also. Chilton county has produced many sons and daughters who have proved successes in their different fields of endeavor, yet none greater than Thos. J. LittleJohn. Next week our Who's Who will deal with Mr. Cohen E. Stapp, our County Farm Demonstrator.

MORAL ECHOES

(By D. W. Haskew)

And it came to pass that a pastor called to see a certain lady. In his visit he let the good woman know that she was being missed in the services of the sanctuary. She replied in a tone of seeming regret, "Pastor I hate to miss those good services, but of late I have been so awfully busy I have not had time to attend church and Sunday school." The good pastor knew that the member of his church never missed a meeting of the Pilot's Club. He also knew that this woman's car had been parked for hours in front of a home, wherein was being conducted a bridge club. In the travels of this same pastor, he dropped into a business office, and kindly reminded a member that he was being greatly missed in the services of his church. He was handed this reply, "I know and I mean to come, but of late I have been so awfully busy I could not get there." The good pastor knew that the member never missed a Kiwanis club, and that he had spent hours on the golf course. Then the pastor groaned in his soul saying to himself, "O, how will my people be able to explain themselves before the bar of God."

Many years ago we had a cherished music box in our home. It was before the days of the Victrola. We would wind the spring in this box and it would turn a cylinder on which there were several selections of choice music. It would sound like heavenly music in the night hours. Something went wrong and the music stopped. For days the house seemed lonely because there was not the familiar sound of those mellow tones. One day I secured a screw driver and ventured to go into the box. After careful inspection I found that there was nothing wrong on the inside but a loose screw. I tightened it and the music was as sweet as ever. I am wondering if some of you are not suffering from a loose screw. You have a loose screw on the question of church attendance, on the question of habits, on the question of companionship, on the question of ideals. The sweet music of your life has hushed. The purpose of these Moral Echoes is to just tighten a screw in your life that you may send out music to the world. Tighten up all of your loose screws and heavenly music will echo from your soul.

In my travels to and fro through the earth I came upon a man who had an unusual occupation. After viewing him for a moment I said to him, "Friend, will you name your occupation?" "Certainly sir," he plied the man, "My business is to handle mud." This man was standing in the mud up to his knees, he had mud in his hair, mud on his face, mud on his clothes and mud in his hands. He carried mud, he delivered mud and he threw mud. He was certainly in the mud business. Since that day I have seen many men and women who could be classified as being, "In the mud business." They walk the streets to carry mud, they sit in parlors to display their mud product, they get up before the public to throw mud. They have mud on their hands, on their character and they live in mud up to their knees. May God of Heaven have mercy on the side walk, street corner and whispering mud dealers.

The child was a bit unruly as well as a sick child. The doctor came and filled a prescription. The exact number of drops were placed in a bit of sugar. Then the task of getting the medicine into the stomach of the child started. The mother advanced holding the spoon in her hand and coaxing, "Now darling, open your mouth and take your medicine." A loud scream rent the air and the child started to slashing with its hands, kicking with its feet, and squirming with all its strength. She had eaten green plums and needed medicine, but she was not willing to take her medicine. When people break the law, when they act dishonestly, they have a deranged attitude toward society, but they kick and squirm, fight and claw, as law and justice advances toward them with the medicine they should take. If a man is mean enough to eat green plums—break the law—why should he not be man enough to stand up and take his medicine like a man? When you have the colic, you had better thank God that there are folks in the world who have interest enough in you to try and relieve your pain.

Four of us were engaged in a heated game of dominoes. It was a contest royal. At last there was a break in domino etiquette, and one of our party said to another, "I do not see how you could let your conscious allow you to do that." In good humor and as a joke came this reply, "When I play a game of any kind, I always take out my conscience and put it under the table." It occurred to me this good lady had described the action of many people, not only in games, but in all the ways and walks of life. When it comes to observing the Sabbath, when it comes to attending church, when it comes to conducting business, when it comes to social attitudes, when it comes to pure living, we are inclined to put our conscience under the table. Your conscience is the best companion that you can have, and it should never be taken from its divine position in the heart. It should stand in the very center of our being and cry out its message of warning. We should listen to it like listening to the voice of God.

The Man on the Corner

Some Sights He Saw—and Some He Saw Not.

"Up and Down the Race Track"

Saw Howard Roper on the corner Monday morning. First time I had met up with him in many months. "Why don't you ever come to see us any more?" I asked him. This reply: "Well, you boys have got off down there next to the jail, and I don't happen to go down that way. When I come to town I do like most everyone else—spend my time going up and down the race track between the railroad and the courthouse." That's a new one for you. Clanton's Main Street is a race track, and I guess you can see more folks on this street in a given time than at any other spot in Chilton County.

It is Different Some Times

There were fewer people on the race track Tuesday than any day I have seen in a long time. It was odd looking. I wondered what became of the people to whom all the automobiles belonged. Every parking space between the Highway and the courthouse was filled with a car, and you could not see a dozen people in the block.

Better Business Recently

The encouraging report comes from Clanton merchants saying business has been exceptionally good in the last few weeks. This is attributed to the cash returns that have been received from the strawberry crop in this section. One merchant who has been in business here fourteen years says the best day he has ever had in his store was one Saturday in the last three weeks. That sounds good for these depression times.

Studying Potato Business

Earle Thomas, Reedie Taylor, and Charlie Cox made a trip to Cullman Tuesday to study the system of storage and marketing of potatoes as carried out by the farmers of that section. Cullman is regarded as the best organized truck farming district in Alabama. The potato business has been started in Chilton County on a commercial scale. It will be worth while to our people to make a more thorough study and application of Cullman's methods.

Evan Parrish's Bean Stalk

Evan Parrish and Mack Broadhead have gone into the bean business on what will prove to be a tall if not such a large scale. They have four bean stalks growing up a telephone pole in front of Evan's store. Evan furnished the seed and Mack is doing the cultivating. The runners are headed for the top of the pole at the rate of a foot a day. Somebody asked what would happen when they reach the top of the pole. I predict the vines will take to the wires. Bob Baker has contracted to buy the product of this venture at ten cents a pound. Harvesting will be the problem. They will have to get a monkey to pick those beans.

The state of Sonora, Mexico, has arranged it now so that divorces can be obtained upon nine days resilence. Some of these times some enterprising state is going to get the jump on the rest of them by issuing divorce papers attached to the back of the marriage certificate by a gummed label.

Five Chicago hotels went into bankruptcy recently. Too bad they couldn't hold out until the Republican and Democratic national conventions.

SLIPPING BILLBOARD

Motor from Baltimore to Washington or vice versa, and the chances are you follow Federal Highway No. 1. Tourists along this particular route in 1932 will encounter about twenty per cent fewer signboard eyesores than were visible a year ago. If this improvement may be overlooked by the casual driver, it is progress, none the less. The American Civic Association and its aids get the credit for another notable advance on the billboard front.

It is slow work, not without reverses. A bill to tax this form of outdoor advertising in Virginia was recently defeated; yet legislation has been effected in New Jersey, Maryland and Massachusetts with encouraging results. Signs of any description whatever are banned on the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, leaving at least one approach to the capitol where natural beauty has not been defaced. That is a cue for the rest of the country.

So infested with unsightly signboards are the highways environs almost everywhere that these few clean ups are a mere drop in the bucket. Nevertheless, a start has been made.—Dayton News.

GOVERNMENT IN BUSINESS

Now that the entire country including congress and the various state and local administrations seems to be getting around to the point where economy is freely admitted to be a good thing, it might not be out of place to remind ourselves that one of the best ways to reduce public expenditures would be to cut down the number of boards and commissions which seem to make it their business to pry into everybody's business.

For example: in speaking recently of the Kelly-Davis bill for the purpose of setting up a federal coal commission, Senator Moses of New Hampshire, said:

"I think of it only as adding a new bureau to that furniture shop which we have already set up in which weird devises thrust the government into doing for the community what the community should do for itself. It is another of the measures to regulate the private life of the citizen. What an individual used to do for himself and took much satisfaction in doing now has passed on to a paid public officer.

"Once a mother saw to it that her offspring brushed his teeth and washed behind his ears. Now a school nurse is paid to do it. The individual looks to the community, the community looks to the legislature and the legislature to the Congress, with the result that no one here present, no matter how law abiding, can lay his head on his pillow at night without having violated some law, even in his most circumspect day. If a law had been passed as sponsored by a legislator of my state, the individual would have been compelled to sleep eight hours a day."

During our days of prosperity the people seemed to pay little attention to mounting taxes, increased public expenditures and the growth of boards and commissions. But now that the depression is upon us they are beginning to awaken, and if the ball can be started rolling in the opposite direction, to the ultimate elimination of ninety per cent of the nuisances, the depression may be worth what it is costing us.

BORZAGE'S "DOCTORS' WIVES" EMOTIONAL MARTIAL DRAMA

Providing a pictorial treat that strain the emotions and evoke intense human interest so well, "Doctors' Wives," Fox drama of martial strife and its adjustment in the medical fraternity comes to the Wadesonian Theatre, Monday and Tuesday, May 30 and 31.

Briefly the story revolves around the marriage of New York's most successful young surgeon with an assistant in his research laboratory. Her father had been a doctor, from whom she had inherited an idealistic respect for men of medicine.

After six months of martial happiness, conflict enters the drama in the form of suspicions and doubts in the young bride's heart which are suddenly corrobrated, in her mind, when she inadvertently discovers what she thinks is an affair between her husband and one of his charming patients.

Without an explanation to her innocent husband, she seeks consolation in the arms of another doctor, her husband's life-long friend. This she finds, is not what she wanted. Under an assumed name she takes up nursing.

How this transforms her previous opinions of her husband, his work, and his strength, forms the dramatic climax of the picture.

Warner Baxter, as "Dr. Jude Penning," the surgeon, has in this role undoubtedly added another distinguished canvas to his gallery of screen portraits. Joan Bennett proves by her finished artistry in the different role of the idealistic girl who marries him, that she is deserving of the honors that have been heaped upon her for her recent screen work.

As the "other man" in the picture, Victor Varconi adds strength to the splendid supporting cast which includes Helene Millard, Paul Porcasi, Nancy Gardner, John St. Polis, Cecilia Loftus and many others.

Frank Borzage demonstrates once again his mastery of human emotions in the delicate direction seen throughout the picture.

DAT BLOOMIN PREACHER

Elder Blossom Fills His Pintment on The 4th Sunday in May, 1932

De subject dis mawnin is regeneration. An as Ah stan here in dis pulpit my mine naturally drifts back to dat time when I wuz jes a lad of a boy. De spirit ob God made it known to me dat my sins were forgiven, den wuz when I felt dat I wuz a new creature in Christ Jesus. Will you now turn to de 3rd chapter of John an read de 1st 17 verses? Dat is de lessen. (Reads lesson then all stand and sing). Jes remain standin whilst Brudder Jesse Armstead leads us in a word of prayer. (His prayer).

"Our Fadder in heben, we is met hyar dis mawnin in de capacity of worshippers, an ef our hearts dont deceive us we wants to please You wid dis service. So I axes You to look down frum Your throne in de skies wid a forgiving look an blot out any sins dat we may be guilty of, an set us rite in Thy site. Lord, pitty all ob those people who, by precious teachin, has been made to belebe dat all they have to do is jes stop doin bad an start to doin good, an by their good works fit themselves for the kingdom. Dear Lord, we no dat Your book teaches dat we mus be born ob de spirit, that we are not saved by our good works, but that we are saved by Grace. Lord, hep de preacher dis mawnin as he talks to us bout regeneration, cause we belebe dat it is needed rite here in dis church. Give us a great blessin dis mawnin an make our hearts rejoice an save us at las, cause we ax it in de name ob our Lord. Amen."

I am not gwyin to take no tex But will site several scriptures, beginning wid Deut., 30:6. We hab at less 99 difrunt scriptures dat deals wid dis scripture. Under de hed ob regeneration is listed de scriptures dat relate to de change of affections commonly denominated by preachers. And lots ob others as, "conversion" "a new creature," "a new birth," saved" etc. Now let me sa in de beginnin, dat I cant understan des why people clames to no de Bible will try to mak their salvation dependent, whooly or in part on their good works. Does it not look reasonable to you dat ef we could save our selves by our good works, dat it wouldnt have ben necessary for Jesus to die on de cross? Why would God have Him to suffer an bleed an die to save us ef we could, by any means, or in any way whatsoever, obtained it? I dont discount good works. I beleave in God's chillun livin rite an doin good. But dat good works whut some people thinks makes them, is de kind ob works dat follows or should follow their regeneration. Brudders an Sisters, I believe dat I can prove by de scriptures dat dar is no good works befo regeneration. All works befo dat is evil works. Now some ob you is ready to sa yea, Brudder Blossom, But atter we is regenerated an born of the spirit, den we is got to do good to git to heben. Well all I got to sa bout dat is, I would hate to believe dat Jesus power to sabe wuz so limited dat I had to hep Him out in savin my soul. Lisen to dis in Heb. 7:25, "Wherefore He is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him. Seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them."

Now I mought sa fur your information dat de Greek word dat is translated "uttermost" really means "ever more." So you se by dis scripture dat de doctrine of Salvation by works, or by grace an works combined is excluded entirely. I heard a man sa dat God planted His spirit in de baby when it wuz born, an dat all dat wuz necessary atter dat wuz jes cultivatin. Dat, ob course, cuts out salvation by Christ or by grace, or by works. Another man sed dat regeneration or de spiritual birth didnt mean nothin more than the determination on your part to join the church an live rite. To regenerate means to "renew the heart of an cause to turn to the love of God." Ef jes desidin to live rite could turn de trick, I feel sho dat Jesus would nevah hab come to dis worl an suffered whut He did.

De nex thing dat I want to sa is dat ef we are saved by grace an works combined, den grace will do its part, but de works of all of us will be deficient in some part, so dat we would fail of eternal salvation in de end an whut grace wus bestoed on us would be lost or of no avail. No my Brudders, wid all ob these 99 scriptures to back me up, I will contend strictly fur a regenerated chuch. I feel lak de debil is nevah better pleased than when people depend on their good work to save dem. Cause ef he can keep dem belebin dat way to de end of life, den he knows dat he will git dem. Talk bout doin good whut will you do wid dis scripture in Luke 18:19, "Why callest thou me good? None is good, save one, that is God." I could gib you several more scriptures, but I think dat is nuff. Now jes a question to de regenerate part of dis congregation: Do you hab a difrunt feelin in yoah heart fur de church an de cause of Christ to whut you had befo you wuz saved? I no you do, cause I does an I belebe dat it is cause we has ben born of God. Dat unregenerate part of de church dont care nothin bout de church or de cause of Christ. None of dem evah says anything to a sinner bout his soul's salvation. Dem is de kind ob members dat had rudder go fishin dan to preachin an go to a dance dan to prayer meetin. But all ob these regenerated souls loves de service of God. An all of these worldly things, sich as dancin an Sunday fishin an gamblin has no attraction fur dem, da got nuff of dat befo da wuz regenerated.

In my pinion, lots an lots of people in our churches today are total strangers to grace an have nevah had an experience or work of grace in their hearts, my regenerated hearers all of you who no dat you is a chile of God. Let us pray fur a great searchin of the harts of unsaved church members. They are good people in a great many ways, but one thing is lakin on their part, an that is a regenerated life. I will have to close here. We is gwyin to stan while I reads my poem, an dat will be your dismissal.

Dear Fadder, de souls of lots of men
Throughout our entire nation,
Is sadly lackin in jes one thing
An dat is regeneration.

The ship of Zion jes barely moves,
Tho built of sturdy timbers.
Because of the load she's tryin to carry
Of unregenerate members.

Lord, tuch de hart of all of these
An my they be awakened.
An get rite wid God befo, by death
All of dem are overtaken.

ENDORSES DUKE FOR COMMISSIONER FROM FOURTH DISTRICT

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in the Union-Banner to write a few words endorsing C. D. Duke for Commisioner from the Fourth District.

I have known Charley Duke for 28 years, and I have always considered him one of the best men in the community. I have lived in the same community, not over a half mile from his home, for over 25 years, and I have never heard any kind of rumor of any kind that his character was any other than the best. He is a good church and Sunday school worker, honest and straightforword in all his dealings.

He has made a success of his own financial affairs, and I sincerely believe he would make Chilton County an extra good commissioner. He is a man of firmness and ability, and though willing to consider good advice, I believe he would not be easily pulled about by every whim, but would exercise his own judgment in the execution of his duties.

I do not believe he has made any promises of jobs or special favors in order to secure votes; he is not that kind of man. If elected, I believe he will treat all alike, with no special favors to anyone.

Inasmuch as the eastern part of the District has not elected a commisioner for many years, I believe we should be allowed one. Charley Duke is one of the best men in this section, and we will appreciate it if the voters will help us out to nominate him.

Thanking you in advance for your support of Mr. Duke, and urging all the voters to come out and vote on June 14, I remain, Yours very truly, —G. N. Easterling.

(Paid political adv., by C. D. Duke Clanton, Ala.)

Lesson for May 29

JOSEPH THE DREAMER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 37:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Boy's Dream.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Boy's Dream.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Right and Wrong Ambition.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Right and Wrong Ambition.

I. Joseph the Pavored Child (vv. 1-3).

Joseph was Jacob's favorite son. This favoritism expressed itself in a superior position and more respectable clothes. That Jacob should feel partial toward Joseph perhaps was inevitable, but that he should manifest it was extremely unwise.

II. Joseph Hated by His Brethren (v. 4).

His superior character was a continual reminder to his brethren of their evil deeds. The silent rebuke of a righteous life is hard for the wicked to bear. His father's favoritism fanned this hatred into a flame which at last burst forth upon him. Such parental indiscretion may lead to murder. The good are not always loved.

III. Joseph's Dreams (vv. 5-11).

God showed to Joseph by means of these dreams his future. It was right for Joseph to have these dreams because they were from God, but perhaps he was indiscreet in making them known. Often times the manner in which a thing is done offends more than the thing itself.

1. His brothers' sheaves bowing in obeisance to his (vv. 5-8). This was rightly interpreted by them to mean their subjection and obedience to him. This intensified their hatred of him. It was hard enough for them to endure the father's favoritism, but to have this dream narrated, which pictured his rule over him, was more than they could endure.

2. The sun, moon, and eleven stars rendering obeisance to him (vv. 9-11). This dream is wider in its application than that of the sheaves. The eleven stars are identical with the eleven sheaves. The sun and moon is rightly interpreted by his father as representing his father and mother rendering obeisance to him. This dream created within his father's mind a suspicion of a lurking ambition of selfishness and vanity in Joseph's bosom. He rebuked him for it, but possessed the good sense to observe it. The hatred of his brethren revealed itself in envy.

IV. Joseph Sent by His Father on a Mission of Mercy to His Brethren (vv. 12-17).

His brethren had gone to Shechem, about fifty miles distant from Hebron, where was abundance of pasture for their flocks. Jacob became anxious about their welfare and sent Joseph to find out their condition. Knowing the attitude of his brethren toward him, he no doubt realized that his mission was fraught with grave danger. It means exposure to highway robbers, wild beasts, and the murderous hatred of his brethren. Undeterred by the envious hatred of his brethren, he willingly responded, "Here am I."

V. Joseph's Reception by His Brethren (vv. 18-28).

As soon as they saw him their hatred began to burn.

1. Their murderous plot (vv. 18-22). They said, "Behold, this dreamer cometh. Come now therefore, and let us slay him." They thought to prevent these dreams from coming true by destroying the dreamer. Reuben dissuaded them from this act by proposing to cast him into a pit, thinking to rescue him and return him to his father.

2. They stripped him of his coat of many colors and cast him into the pit (vv. 23, 24). In spite of his earnest entreaty against this wicked act, they perpetrated this heartless cruelty (Gen. 42:21).

3. Their feasting (v. 25). Their heartlessness manifested itself in their enjoyment of a meal, perhaps within the sight and hearing of Joseph's cry.

4. Sold to the Ishmaelites (vv. 25-28). In the providence of God, these merchantmen passed by at the opportune time. Judah proposed that they sell him, as no gain could accrue from letting him die in the pit. Having done this infamous deed, they sought to cover it up by lying and deceit. They took his coat of many colors and dipped it in the blood of a kid and sent it to his father, allowing him to draw his own conclusion as to the matter. Jacob is now reaping what he had sown. Many years before this he had wronged a brother and deceived his father by trickery and lying.

RESTFUL SLEEP for FRETFUL, FEVERISH CHILD

—With Castoria's regulation

When your child tosses and cries out in his sleep, it means he is not comfortable. Very often the trouble is that poisonous waste matter is not being carried off as it should be. Bowels need help—mild, gentle help—but effective. Just the kind Castoria gives. Castoria is a pure vegetable preparation made specially for children's ailments. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. Don't let your child's rest—and your own—be interrupted. A prompt dose of Castoria will urge stubborn little bowels to act. Then relaxed comfort and restful sleep! Genuine Castoria always has the name:

ONE YEAR IN COLLEGE ON $8.50 AS FOOD BILL

Auburn, Ala., May 23.—One year in college on a cash expenditure of only $8.50 for food is the record of each of four former 4-H club girls who have completed their freshman year at Auburn. The girls are Nellie Fuller, Elizabeth Lawson, Elsie Edwards, and Opal Jones of Macon, Lee and Butler Counties.

And they have eaten abundantly of a properly balanced diet. The explanation is that before coming to college they canned, preserved, dried and saved food by other methods. The idea was originated by Mrs. Lida Jones, home demonstration agent for Macon County, and it has worked well in practice.

By having this food each of these girls has finished a year in college at a total cost of approximately $200 whereas the average cost per student in Auburn is around $400 per year.

When they became students last September they paid their matriculation fees from money received at sales on curb markets, from poultry projects, and from other sources, plus scholarships made available to them by different organizations.

They are finishing their first year in college with good scholarship records to their credit. They have been popular as students and they are looking forward to returning to Auburn to collext next September. During the summer they will be at their home preparing and saving food for their sophmore year. Home demonstration agents report that other 4-H club girls are now preparing food for college just as these have done.

STORM TIMBER MARKETABLE

Montgomery, Ala., May 23.—Investigations made recently in the storm stricken sections of Alabama disclosed that the quantity and quality of the timber in many instances remains unaffected, according to Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester. In most cases the timber is not twisted off but is pushed over with about half of the roots exposed. The amount of breakage is hardly more than usually results under average felling conditions. Considerable loss to the landowner, however, is occasioned by the necessity of selling his timber, regardless of market prices instead of holding for sale until values increase.

Wind thrown pines should be marketed as early as possible since, although the trees may remain alive for a long time as attested by the healthy green color of the pine straw they fall ready victims to attack by the various beetles. Hardwood timber seems to live and remain healthy longer after having been pushed over by the wind than do the pines. In either case the landowner is forced to sell comparatively soon. However, in most instances there is sufficient time for the owner to estimate the amount and value of the timber to be sold and to advertise it in order to take advantage of the best offers available.

A young man by the name of Umphries, who has visited his cousins in Clanton, the Simmses, was killed in an autamobile wreck near his home in Kentucky a few days ago.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Sales of fertilizer in Alabama this season has been about 50 per cent of 1931 sales, which were 35 per cent below 1930. On the other hand farmers are using a large amount of cottonseed meal as fertilizer.

Prof. L. N. Duncan has announced that the Alabama extension service will consume this year 20 bales of cotton in the paper used for letterheads and for mimeograph. This paper is 25 to 40 per cent cotton. It is manufactured in North Carolina by southern labor, he said.

The May issue of the Alabama Economic Review, published at Auburn, shows that prices paid by farmers were on March 15 an average of 17 per cent of prewar while prices received by farmers were 61 per cent making the relative exchange value of farm products 62 per cent prewar. This reveals why business conditions are at a low ebb.

A Paris dispatch says that the amount of foreign wheat French millers may use in mixing their flour has been reduced from 45 per cent to 40 per cent by an official decree. France previously had lightened restrictions on the importation of foreign wheat, by revising upward the proportion permitted in French flour from an allowance of only 3 per cent early this year. The new decree places the quota where it was April 1.

FARM AND GARDEN QUERY BOX

(By K. C. Davis, Knapp School of Country Life, Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.)

Q.—Was the mild winter the cause of so many insects this spring? I have never seen plant lice so bad.

A.—Many insects live during the winter in some hibernating stage such as the adult stage for the cotton boll weevil, the rootaphis stage for plant lice, etc. Mild winters always make insects worse during the following year unless their natural enemies keep them in control. Army worms have been much worse this year than ever before so early in the season. The worms are readily destroyed by dusting or spraying with arsenate of lime. The plant lice mentioned are readily controlled by spraying with nicotine or dusting with tobacco dust. The nicotine spray is made by mixing one pint to fifty gallons of water.

Q.—Your garden reminders have been very helpful. Please give us more of these for the summer season.

A.—Make additional plantings of table corn, late tomatoes, lima beans, snap beans and okra. Also set late peppers and egg plant. A little later in the summer it will be wise to plant the full crop of greens. Late cabbage may be planted at any time during May or June.

Q.—What sorghum is best to grow for making molasses?

A.—Get the seed of sweet amber sorghum. This should be planted about like corn, but with more seed in each hill. Plant the seed much shallower than corn. When it comes up, thin the hills to about three of the best plants. It should be planted in May of early June and will mature well before fall.

CLAIMING WORLD'S FARROWING RECORD

Ozark, Ala., May 23—N. G.'s Miss, Prolific pure-bred Duroc Jersey sow, owned by Neal Andrews, prominent farmer who lives near here, is claiming the pig farrowing championship of the world.

Since early in 1929 she has farrowed 5 litters, totaling 80 pigs. The first time she brought 11 pigs, the second 13, the third 21, fourth 17, and the fifth 18.

The litter of 18 pigs farrowed on May 1, 1932 and Mrs. Andrews has listed the pigs with W. D. Thomason, county agent, to compete for prizes in the ton-litter show at Montgomery, September 14 and 15. There are 14 gilts and 4 males in the litter, and they will be for sale for breeding stock at the Montgomery show.

N. G.'s Miss cost her owner $17 and she was bought from T. A. Norman of Somerville, Tenn. She herself was a part of a big litter of 12, farrowed on December 10, 1928.

Dale County is noted for "peanut pork" and peanut hams, having been a leading hog county for 15 years.

Recently much work has been done in improving the breeding stock of the hogs, Thomason reports.

SINGING AT BETHEL

There will be an all day singing, using the old books, at Bethel on next Sunday, May 29th. All singers and lovers of music are invited, both old and young.

LESS COTTON IS STORED IN ALABAMA WAREHOUSES

Less cotton was stored in Alabama warehouses on May 1 this year than at the same date a year ago, reparts Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of agriculture.

Statistics complied by H. S. Holloway, chief of the gin and warehouse division, show 769,665 bales stored in Alabama warehouses this year as compared with 841,303 bales on the same date a year ago.

BALE OF COTTON IN ONE TON OF PAPER

A North Carolina paper manufacturing company is now using cotton to the extent of 25 per cent in manufacturing bond paper. This means that a bale of cotton is consumed in making a ton of paper.

CARD OF THANKS

Editor Union-Banner:

Will you please allow me space in your paper to thank my neighbors and friends for their service in helping me get my barn built back, which burned on April 23rd, and also for their donations of corn and feed stuff. I do not know how to express my appreciation for this kindness. May the Lord bless each and every one.—A. L. Bearden, Billingsley, Ala., Route 1.

ROBERT MONROE ROEBUCK

It was my sad priviledge to attend the funeral of Bro. Robert Monroe Roebuck at Adams last Saturday. The funeral was as beautiful and impressive as it could be. A very large crowd (more than the church could accommodate) was present to attest the character and popularity of the deceased in his community, where he had lived a long while.

The pallbearers, five of whom were grandchildren, were as follows: Kent, Otto, Buster and Welch Roebuck, Clyde Gragg and Elbert Lawley. Rev. Bentley of Billingsley, preached the funeral and did it exceptionally well. From the praise and eulogy he gave, Bro. Roebuck was no doubt held high in the esteem by the people of the community and was a pillow of strength in the Mt. Carmel church of which he was a preacher's friend, and always loyal to his young pastor, Bro. Bentley.

Notwithstanding he had reached a ripe old age of 86, yet withal, he was mentally physically active until last Monday when he took his final illness and was on Thursday afternoon called to his final resting place. His life must have been a bendiction to all with whom he came into contact.

He leaves 3 daughters, Mrs. Mary Robinson, Mrs. Eunice Thompson, Mrs. Bertha Roper, and one son, W. M. Roebuck of Maplesville, Ala., and a host of grandchildren and great grandchildren to mourn his loss. It is hard to say the final good bye to those who are near and dear, to us, but we can get comfort from the contemplation of that Lord beyond the river, the home of the soul. To this land we are fast tending and bye and bye will all be gathered together in that home where sickness and sorrow, pain and parting are no more.—J. D. Griffin.

C. D. DUKE WRITES VOTERS

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space to say a few words to the voters of Chilton County.

It has been rumored since the primary that I have been around and promised jobs to some certain people, and that some had asked me to promise them jobs if they would support me. Now, none of this is true. As I have stated before in the paper, I have promised no one a job, nor have I promised anyone any special favors in return for their promise to vote for me.

I have only this to say. I have tried, in this campaign, to be fair and square to all. I have tried my best to treat all just like I would like to be treated. I have used nothing to try to hurt anyone in any way.

If I am nominated and elected, I will have no strings attached to me. I will be obligated in no way to any one. I will be free to serve the people—all the people—to the very best of my judgment. I am trying to make this race on my own merits, and not on the demerits of my opponent.

To those who voted for me in the first primary, I offer my sincere thanks; and ask for a continuance of your confidence in me, and for your vote in the next primary. To those who did not vote for me, I come asking for your consideration, vote and influence.

In conclusion, let me urge you all to come out and vote on June 14th. Again assuring you of my appreciation of your support, and pledging my best wishes and full support to the Republican party, I remain.—Yours very truly, C. D. Duke.

POULTRY

"A man either makes or breaks himself in the poultry business between the sixth and twentieth week after his chicks are hatched—but he doesn't find it out until the following winter!"

Those timely words from a very successful Southern poultryman verify the experience of thousands of American poultry raisers, according to C. S. Johnson, manager of the poultry department of Purina Mills. How these weeks have such vital bearing on the success or failure of each year's poultry venture is told in an interesting statement by Johnson, who speaks from a nation-wide contact with the industry.

"The sixth to the twentieth weeks, the unproductive or growing period, are really the most critical in the chick's life, rather than the first few days after hatching as many people suppose," says Johnson. "The reason is that most baby chicks are started right and get good care and feed up to the time they are six weeks old. The farm work begins to take more time and the chicks are left to range for themselves. Nature is called upon to do a lot of the feeding.

"Such a let-up in the care of chicks after giving them a good start is costly," Johnson claims. "Growth is retarded. Heath is impaired. Disease frequently takes hold and makes big inroads. Pullets drag into the fall not laying and not paying. Money doesn't come in. Even the early investment in feeding and care made during the starting period is lost.

To get big pullets that lay big eggs, the poultry raiser must give his chicks every chance to go ahead during the growing period, so that they will develop as rapidly as possible and shorten the unproductive time," continues Johnson. "They must have the things they need to develop body frames, tissues, muscles, and egg producing systems. These are the things they get in a good growing mash.

"To depend on natural food that is never too plentiful means the needs of but a few growing pullets will be satisfied," Johnson says. Besides a pullett doesn't know what she needs—she only knows what she likes best. Of course, a growing pullet can get along on grain and what she can rustle. But if her owner will look ahead he'll find it will take seven months on the average for her to reach laying age at which time she'll weigh but three to three and one-half pounds.

"Those figures," declares Johnson, "are not guesswork, they are actual feeding record averages on chicks grown on grain and those grown on grain plus our growing mash, Growena. Green stuff, grain, and insects are not enough for growing pullets. Keeping a growing mash before them is the only way to provide the necessary minerals for building large frames, to furnish a variety of proteins for making blood, bones, egg organs and muscles, and an abundance of growth vitamins to put the proteins and minerals they eat into action."

Growena, the mash for growing pullets to which Mr. Johnson refers, is sold locally by J. L. Ruffin.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

University, Ala., May 23.—Commencement exercises at the University of Alabama were completed Tuesday, when over 400 degrees were conferred by Dr. George H. Denny, president of the University. The baccalaureate address was delivered by Gov. B. M. Miller in Morgan Hall Tuesday morning.

Dr. Beverley D. Tucker, of Richmond, Va., made the baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning, to begin the 101st commencement at the University.

Dr. Tucker based his sermon upon the life and services of George Washington, in commemoration of the bicentennial of the first president "The commencenment orator is usually expected to paint a roseate picture of the world, Dr. Tucker stated, "But this year the commencement preacher has special reason for looking to the past rather than to the future for his interpretation of the situation which the college graduate is called upon to encounter.

"It is not merely that the immediate prospect gives little grounds for optimism and roseate views. For we do not need to be reminded that the past year has been one of the world wide panic and of political and economic bankruptcy. But the year 1932, as the bicentennial of Washington's birthday, presents the natural opportunity of looking to the rock when we are hew and the hole of the pit whence we are digged, that thereby we may take stock of our present and gain our bearing for the future."

"In celebrating the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington," Dr. Tucker continued, "We have the prespective of time to guide us in making our estimates. Without fear of detracting from his assured place in the gratitude of his countrymen, we can tone down the superlatives that have been traditionally used of his gifts and his virtues. We may leave these to be analyzed and weighed in the balance of historical research. We see in Washington a man who was raised up by God for a special purpose. Not his gifts nor his capacities are the key to the understanding of his influence, but his character rooted in religion, rooted in faith in God."

General Hines, in his speech before the alumni association, emphasized the fact that present conditions demand individual consideration of national problems and urged the graduating students to bear this in mind.

"The path you follow after passing this doorway will reflect the trend of your inclinations, govern your achievements, and form the channels of your lives. At this particular time you find a modern world, disillusioned, chaotic, bewildered, demanding a solution adequate to return to its normal course. It has been indicated frequently recently that the fundamental cause of all our trouble is personal selfishness and fear. We hear it said that man must be changed if problems are to be solved, that we are in need of greater leadership throught the world and that this is our primary need. There is a need for greater interest on the part of our citizens in their country and the exercise of the right of citizenship."

Several important meetings were held by the alumni council, the Alumnae council, and the alumni association. Phi Beta Kappa heard Dr. Theodore Jack deliver the annual address at their dinner. Beta Gamma Sigma, national scholastic fraternity for commerce students, held its annual spring initiation.

Dr. Denny delivered his annual report to the board of trustees at the meeting Monday afternoon.

THORSBY SECTION

(S. E Norton, Manager)

The number of cars of strawberries shipped this season up to Monday night, May 23rd, is 75 carloads, also about ten carloads by truck to local markets. As an instance of the desire of the railroads to handle this traffic, we are told pasesnger train No. 10 was held 45 minutes Monday to permit the finish of loading a second car for shipment by express that day, for which there would be no train that could take them before 9 o'clock the next morning.

On Friday night last week, a freight train was held an hour to permit loading three cars that were to go on that train. A trained corps of car loaders at Thorsby made short work of moving and loading nearly 1,000 crates of berries, to finish 4 carloads to go on that train.

These incidents illustrate the efficiency of management and employees of the association and cooperation of the carriers in handling this business, when conditions prevent a more leisurely proceeding of the work.

There will be lots of berries left, but prices may not leave any profit if shipped. This suggests need of a cannery at Thorsby.

The next item of importance to the association will be originating shipments in carloads of Irish potatoes, for which 3,500 sacks to hold 100 pounds each are expected to arrive this week. There is some talk of shipment of snap beans, but this may be considerably hampered, as we understand the growers have been slow to order hampers. Maybe they shy at the name of these containers.

Thorsby Institute closing days for 1931 and '32 school year are with us. Entertainments, examinations, plays and serious matters will take the time of many Thorsby people, and some from outside, which followed by departures of students and faculty, will take up the time about all this week.

The largest graduating class in the history of the school has a roster of 21 names, and they certainly are an interesting group.

Mr. C. M. Williams attended the graduating exercises at Alabama college in Montevallo Monday. There were 123 young women in the graduating class.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Coin of Montgomery were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Nels Peterson.

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Norton entertained members of Thorsby Institute faculty, who will soon be leaving for summer schools, or their homes, together with a few others, Monday evening. Dominoes were the principal feature of entertainment followed by ice cream and cake.

Buy your cosmetics, face powder, face cream, etc., at Wyatt Drug Co., Thorsby, Ala.

Mrs. H. M. Gerald entertained Mrs. Magne Anderson Monday night. Her daughters, Mary Ella and Mrs. Leonard Moodey, both graduates of Thorsby Institute, are with her for this week, to attend commencement exercises at the school.

Miss Marguerite Davison and Mrs. E. W. Butler returned from a week's visit at Pleasant Hill, Tennessee, where Miss Davidson had a series of classes for a few days in a school at that place, returned Saturday.

Mrs. Ralph Willbanks, (Mamie Flummer) was a visitor of Miss Agnes Leary over the week end, to attend the alumni party and Baccalaureate sermon of Thorsby Institute.

Sunday School at the Baptist Church 9:45 a. m. Following the Sunday School, the pastor will bring a brief message, not more than fifteen or twenty minutes in length. A cordial invitation is extended to all who will come.

Mrs. Ella Hall, who has been visiting at Mt. Creek, has returned home.

C. C. Peterson and wife visited their, son, Harry, in Birmingham Monday.

Mrs. A. E. Reagan entertained at dinner Sunday in honor of Miss Ella Howard, graduate of Thorsby Institute, Miss Maragaret Peterson and Helen Bosworth of Birmingham, Miss Edith Foss and Christina Bosworth.

Mrs. Harry Thompson, of Birmingham, spent the week end visiting her husband in Thorsby.

Bertha Littleton has had two weeks vacation and will return to her work at Birmingham.

Mr. J. L. Moore, of Birmingham, spent last week with his brother-in-law, A. N. Laurell.

Mrs. Earl Meade and Mrs. Starks McCullehand spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Meade.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Meade and Helen Louise, with Mrs. William Blood were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Hall Saturday evening.

Coty face powder, with perfume, both for $1.00 at Wyatt Drug Co., Thorsby.

Mrs. M. A. Barnes and grandson, J. C. Watson, left Saturday after a week's visit with Mrs. M. J. Prim, for Talledega, to visit her son, W. H. Compton and family, taking Mrs. M. J. Prim with them for a few days visit.

Mrs. Sam Watson, Mrs. Newt Thomas, and son, Green, of Mars Hill community were visitors at W. H. Raybon Saturday afternoon.

On Saturday afternoon Miss Thoroman presented her pupils in a very pleasing music recital. Two piano numbers were a large part of the program. In the first number three were playing at each piano and kept together very well. The Glee Club and the duet by Edna Lee Wilder and Lois Thompson were much enjoyed.

MANY ATTEND MEETING HERE LAST SATURDAY

Addresses on Education Made By Supt. Harman and J. A. Keller

A courthouse full of people from all parts of Chilton county listened to addresses of State Superintendent Harman, and Mr. J. A. Keller last Saturday afternoon. The interest of those present was manifest by the attentive manner in which they listened to the speakers for over two hours.

Mr. Kellar, who is superintendent of education of Covington County, and president of the Alabama Education Association, spoke first. He made a full and candid presentation of the school situation from the standpoint of the teachers and school officials, reciting the many instances where the teachers have sacrificed their own welfare in order to keep going with their duties to the schools and the children of the state.

The speech of Mr. Keller was such as to inspire the average citizen to higher devotion to the sacred cause of education for his children. His appeal to the fathers and mothers in behalf of education for the youth of the state was very stiring.

Superintendent Harman made an address that necessarily had to take in and attempt to cover too much ground for one speech. It would take hours and hours for Harman to tell all he knows about Alabama's school situation.

His answer to critics who have censured him for going to the people at this time with a campaign in the interest of the schools was somewhat caustic. The opinion of the people of Chilton County who heard him last Saturday is that if Mr. Harman will get just a little madder, he will do a better job; because then he will very likely come out plainer with some facts he seems now to be a little hesitant about discussing.

The address of Mr. Harman was closed by a recommendation to the school officials that they make no plans to open schools this fall until they know just exactly when the state will pay its school obligations to the county, and how much it will amount to. This recommendation, he said, has gone out from the educational department in Montgomery, to every public educational institution in Alabama.

Mr. Harman received cheers from the audience when he thundered his challenge that every state official of Alabama from the Governor on down should be willing to take a cut in salary and do without his pay on the same basis and to the same extent as the school teachers have done.

Superintendent Lawrence states that meetings similiar to the one held at the courthouse Saturday afternoon are being planned for different communities in the county. Any place interested in having such a meeting should communicate with Mr. Lawrence for arrangements.

JAMES W. CARPENTER DIES

James W. Carpenter, age 63 years, died Saturday evening the 21st of May at 6 o'clock, in Remport, Mississippi. He was born in Alabama, April 17, 1867, and had served as engineer at the Batson and Hatten Lumber mill for several years.

Surviving are his widow and seven children. Funeral services were held at the home Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with burial in the Finley cemetery, near his home.

MRS. ALBERT MARTIN DIED

Burial was at Oak Grove Sunday afternoon at two o'clock, in charge of J. Mell Martin & Sons. The funeral was conducted by Rev. R. M. Honeycutt.

Mrs. Martin was a faithful member of the Oak Grove Baptist Church, and she was loved by a wide circle of friends and neighbors in her home community. She was a devoted wife, and a loving mother to her large family of children.

She is survived by her husband, Mr. Albert Martin; four sons, Glenn Bill and Vaughn of Oak Grove, and Melvin, of Sylacauga; four doughters, Mrs. Grady Sutley, of Oak Grove, Mrs. Bill Shaw, of Calera, and Misses Lola and Lillian Martin of Sylacauga. Uses of Ether

Ether is said to have first been used by Dr. Crawford W. Long of Georgia, in 1842. William T. Morton, a dentist, is said to be the first to have used it regularly as an anesthetic. It is made from sulphuric acid and alcohol. Since the middle of the Nineteenth, century ether has been used as an intoxicant in Ireland. The effect is similar to that of opium.

ELECTION OFFICERS FOR THE SECOND PRIMARY

Publication is being made this week of the list of officers who will serve in holding the run-off primaries of the Democratic and Republican parties in Chilton County in the second primary June 14.

Particular attention is directed to the fact that this list is the same as those who served in the primaries of May 3, which is in accordance with provisions of the elections laws of Alabama.

Sheriff Gillespie is issuing summonses to all of these parties calling upon them to render service at the various polling places on June 14.

As in the case on May 3, the run-off primaries on June 14 will be separate and distinct as regards the Democrats and Republicans. A list of officers will be provided at each polling place to conduct each primary separately.

MRS. HUBBARD MOVING TO TUSCALOOSA SOON

Mrs. R. M. Hubbard, of Jemison, has moved to Tuscaloosa, where she will enter her daughter as a student at the University of Alabama. Mrs. Hubbard will live at 1408 Caplewood where she will have a house for taking care of boarding students at the University. There are a number of Chilton County students at the University, and Mrs. Hubbard hopes that some of them will make arrangement to live with her.

Wilma Parrish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Parrish, had her tonsils and adenoids removed last Monday at Dr. Arthur Johnson's Infirmary.

DEATH LIST OF ALABAMA STORM

Official Figures On Toll of The Lives Taken By Recent Alabama Tornadoes

Official figures on the toll of life taken by the tornadoes which swept various sections of Alabama during the month of March, place the total of dead at 211.

This total is contained in a report issued May 18th by the bureau of vita statistics of the state health department, which shows in addition that 18 of the victims were between one and four years of age; 44 between the ages of five and 14; 120 betweent the ages of 15 and 64, and 29 were 65 years old or over.

Of the 115 other fatalities chargeable to accidents of different kinds, 31 were caused by motor vehicle accidents, seven by industrial accidents, 51 by home accidents and 26 from other accidents of a public nature exclusive of the tornadoes and motor vehicle accidents.

Deaths from all causes, occurring in Alabama during March, totalled 2,661, the death rate per 1,000 of population being 11.6. Births during the same month, totalled 5,649, the birth rate being 24.6. The birth rate for March exceeded that for the same month of the last two years.

Despite the terrible toll taken by the tornadoes, the mortality rate was lower than for the last two years; nearly every cause of death for that month showing a decrease over last year, with the exception of accidental deaths.

In a report of Dr. D. G. Gill, director of the bureau of vital epidemiology, for the month of April, decrease is shown during that month in the prevalence in Alabama of scarlet fever, and whooping cough.

Increase in shown in comparison with the month of April, in the prevalence of typhiod, malaria, smallpox measles, whooping cough, diptheria, tuberculosis, pallagra, meningitis, influenza, pneumonia and mumps. To date, this year, however, there has been a decrease in cases reported of malaria, diptheria, tuberculosis, pallagra, meningitis, influenza and pneumonia.

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

The Men's Bible Class will have a special speaker next Sunday morning in the person of Prof. L. D. Haskew. We urge a full attendance.

The message at 11 a.m. will be on the subject, "Courage." That is something that is needed by all the people of Chilton county. Give us a large crowd. It is so much easier to preach to folks than it is to empty benches.

The night services will be: young peoples organizations at 7 o'clock and preaching at 7:45. Meet us for our evening devotions.

Do you really know the way to the church of which you are a member? If so, how often do you find your footsteps in that way? It may be that the dust of last fall settled down over the last tracks that you made toward the house of God. The rains of the spring may have washed away the last tracks you made. Make some more next Sunday.

BOUQUET FOR ELDER BLOSSOM

Elder Blossom, who writes a sermon in the Union-Banner every week was given a nice bouquet in the form of a glowing verbal tribute extended by Rev. F. A. Gibson in one of his discousses at Friendship last Sunday. Rev. Gibson said that these sermons, although the language was bad, were the best reading that he was afforded in the present day.

In behalf of dat bloomin preacher, The Union-Banner wishes to thank Rev. Gibson for this appreciative tribute. It is encouraging to us, and we are sure that it makes old Blossom's heart beat faster. And were not that old head grizzly and bald from experience full of heartaches and sorrow mixed with spells of joy and jubilation, it would swell a little when he reads what his white "brudders" said about his sermons. But to say the least of it, we are sure that Elder Blossom appreciates bouquets of this kind.

OLD FOLKS MEETING AT FRIENDSHIP LAST SUNDAY WAS EXTRA GOOD

Attendance Was Splendid And Spirit of the Meeting Was Highly Elevating. Important Resolutions Adopted, Including One For Rev. S. M. Adams

The fourth annual session of the old folks and ministers meeting at Friendship was held last Sunday. The meeting was called to order at 9:45 by Rev. J. Robert Bean, pastor at Friendship and chairman of the program committee. As per the published program, Rev. T. J. Deason conducted an hour's devotional service, and at 11 o'clock Rev. M. J. Parrish preached. Dinner was from 12 to 1, when the meeting was again called to order by Rev. Bean, and a one hour's experience meeting was conducted by Rev. F. A. Gibson. The singing before noon was conducted by T. E. Wyatt, and in the afte noon by J. W. P. Murphy.

The hour had then arrived for the sermon of Rev. R. M. Honeycutt, but for some reason he was not there, so the committee got busy and had the place filled by another, Rev. Jim Thomas of Elmore county. Rev. Thomas filled the hour with much credit to himself and to the satisfaction of all present. A vote of thanks and appreciation by the audience was voted to Rev. Thomas, in which nearly everyone present expressed themselves by the uplifted hand, that they had enjoyed the message.

After a few announcements, some resolutions were offered and the meeting adjourned to meet again next year. The following resolutions were offered and adopted:

Resolutions

Recognizing the power for good to be derived when God in the person of the Holy Spirit is present with a gathering of Christian men and women, and realizing the fact that the greatest need of the world today is a turning of the people from worldly and perishable things and from the multiple forms of sin and ungodliness, to the pursuit of those things that enrich the soul, strengthen the faith and elevate lives to the reverence, love and adoration of God and His kingdom on earth,

And believing that it is for the fostering of these noble ideals and for perpetuating the faith that was once delivered to the Saints that this old folks and ministers gathering is held annually at Friendship;

Be it therefore resolved by all who have accepted the invitation of our host and are attending this the fourth session of the gathering, that we, in a body, extend our appreciation to the people of Friendship church and community for their cordial hospitality and for the generous and kind spirit in which we have been entertained in the capacity of this annual gathering.

Further, we ask and urge that the affair be held next year and from year to year on in the future, and we invoke the blessings of Almighty God upon the institution so long as it may exist. We also pray the blessings of the most high God upon Friendship church and its members for making this meeting possible for us. Respectfully submitted,—H. W. Devaughn, J. V. Best, Riley Robinson, Committee.

Respects Rev. S. M. Adams

A committee was appointed to draft resolutions in respect to the late Rev. Samuel Memory Adams, and said committee reports as follows:—

Whereas, God has seen fit to call from us a beloved co-worker and minister of the Gospel, Rev. Samuel Memory Adams, and since he had heretofore attended this annual meeting, and two years ago preached for us; and since Bro. Adams was the first pastor of Friendship church, which is host to this gathering;

And in recognition of the many years of faithful service to the cause of Christ and the untiring and arduous efforts put forth by the deceased brother in behalf of God's kingdom on earth; and recognizing the great power which he for many years wielded through the churches of our county and the great amount of good accomplished for the cause;

Be it therefore resolved that this gathering of ministers and older folks tender its fondest and cherished respects to the memory of Bro. Adams. His road through life was not strewn with flowers, but his hardships and trials were many, however he withstood them all with the fortitude of a real soldier and we believe has won for himself a crown of the purest gold in that beautiful world that shall never end. Be it resolved further that a copy of these resolutions be furnished The Alabama Baptist and both the county papers for publication.

We would also like to mention the names of Rev. A. Dewey Huett, who was in our meeting a year ago, and Bro. R. M. Roebuck, who was with us in our 1930 meeting, both of whom have departed this life since our last meeting. Respectfully submitted,—A. L. Foshee. T. E. Wyatt, W. P. Lowery, Committee.

"THE RIDERS OF GOLDEN GULCH"

The mail service, as given by our Uncle Sam at the present day, is fast and efficient. With the advent of the Air Mail it is possible to send mail across the continent in less than two days.

But in the days of the early West, the delivering of mail, was a far more difficult matter. The Pony Express and the stage coach trudged slowly over the plains where today the modern airplanes takes but a few minutes. This fact has a great bearing on the events in the life of Bill Edwards, the son of a banker at Cottonwood. Bill had traveled over the country and a letter addressed to him was following him. As would be the usual occurrence, Bill was always a couple of towns ahead of the letter before the postal department could locate him.

When the letter finally reached him he discovered that his father had died and left his bank in the care of Bart Smith to be turned over to Bill upon his return. So Bill started for home to take over the runnings of the bank.

When he arrives at home, the trouble starts and the action from then on will hold you spell-bound with its daring.

Buffalo Bill, Jr., takes the part of Bill Edwards and gives one of the best character portrayals in his long and successful career. It can be truly said that "Riders of Golden Gulch" which will be shown at the Wadesonian Theatre on Friday and Saturday of this week is the fastest action picture ever filmed.

Lard and Perfumes

Choice perfumes are made by a process known as cold enfleurage. A thickness of cold lard is placed on glass slabs in wooden frames. Flowers are placed on this lard. Each day fresh flowers replace the old ones until the lard becomes saturated with their perfume. The lard is then dissolved with cold alcohol which evaporates, leaving the extract.

We are in need of some bats and balls and other equipment and we will appreciate all donations given us.

J. Z. MIMS WRITES TO OFFICERS

Just a word to the public regarding the primary election to be held June 14th, 1932.

I have had quite a number of inquiries as to the officers to hold the second primary which will be held on June 14th, 1932. Would like to say Section 5 of the New Primary Law requires the officers holding the first primary to hold the second one, therefore, if you was an officer in the first election, or the election on May 3rd, 1932, you will or should be an officer in the election on June 14th, 1932. It is each officer's duty to be at the voting place in his precinct by eight o'clock on June 14th, 1932, and assume your duties as an election officer just as though you had been re-appointed. Yours truly, —J. Z. Mims.

MRS. ANNIE E. RAMSEY

On May 24th, 1932, at 7:50 o'clock the death angel visited the home of Mr. Monroe Ramsey and carried his beloved wife, Mrs. Annie E. Ramsey, age 82.

She was born August 1849. She was a member of Mt. Carmel Baptist church for 60 odd years, and a faithful member. She was well known about that section and Maplesville. She was married 50 odd years ago. There were four children.

She died after an illness of nine week's. Everything that human hands could do was done for her. She was cheerful and faithful until the end. To know her meant to love her. She always did deeds of kindness for other people. She was a faithful Christian, and lived every day for her heavenly master.

Her shining life deserves to be ranked among the most noble along life's way. The influence of her life will continue to shine more bright as the years pass on. She lived to let her light shine before others. We shall miss the light which we saw in her. Though we shall greatly miss here presence, her gentle disposition, kindly smiles and comforting words, but may each of us strive to live up to her example of never growing tired of doing our best for our heavenly father.

She lived a beautiful Chistian life before her family and friends, that they might carry a beautiful memory of her.

She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, three daughters, Mrs. C. C. Cobern, Mrs. M. O. Perry, of Maplesville, Mrs. T. A. Wright, of Linden; one son, Monroe Ramsey of Selma; one brother, J. W. Foshee of Maplesville; two sisters, Mrs. C. J. Cobern and Miss Minnie Foshee all of Maplesville. There are also seven granchildren who survive her.

Funeral service was held at 10:00 o'clock Wednesday morning at the Maplesville Baptist church. Dr. Ezell of the Clanton Baptist Church officiating. Interment was made in the Maplesville cemetery, arrangements by Brislin Brothers of Selma. There were many beautiful floral offerings.

Pallbearers were Paul and Kermit Cobern, Garland, Maurice and Hubert Foshee, and Irving Perry.—A Friend.

THE extension of electric transmission and distribution lines of Alabama Power Company has kept pace with its development of power plants—now reaching into 66 of the 67 counties of the state making electric service available in abundance to more than 100,000 customers at generally uniform and low rates.

In 1920, 38 towns and communities were served directly by the Company. In 1930 the number had reached 474. Of the total towns now served 381 received their first electric utility service from this Company.

30 municipal (including 1 state) and 63 private utility systems have been acquired and lower rates made available to the customers in every instance.

Based on 1930 use it is estimated that present customers are saving about $5,225,000, each year compared with the cost of service at rates previously in effect.

Along with this liberal policy of extending power lines to all corners of the State, Alabamians have witnessed a phenominal industrial growth. Since 1924, 196 new industries, with plants valued at $70,370,000, requiring 25,010 employees and annual payrolls of $21,620,000 have located in Alabama.

Cleveland's Novel Relief Plan

Employment of a "man-a-block" is the goal of Greater Cleveland in an effort to help relieve the jobless crisis. The movement was inaugurated by a group of Cleveland citizens and reports reveal that efforts of the first week of the committee resulted in pledges of 11,500 hours of work in scattered neighborhoods. In the illustration O. E. Luzius, secretary of the movement, is seen taking applications for jobs.

Need for Side-Dressing Cotton Is Greater Than Ever Before

A remarkable contrast. The heavy rows in the rear were side-dressed with Chilean nitrate of soda. Thrifty, fast-growing plants like these will set a heavy crop before the weevil has a chance to do its worst damage.

The light application of fertilizer under cotton makes side-dressing the most necessary thing to be done this year.

The need for side-dressing cotton is probably greater than ever before. Last year's crop, which averaged 200 pounds of lint per acre, removed a tremendous amount of plant food from the soil, which means that the present crop, with little or no fertilizer under it, started the season under a serious handicap. Everything points also to a heavy boll weevil infestation, as a result of the mild weather of last winter.

Side-dressing with quick-acting nitrogen will supply the plant food the crop lacks and help it to get ahead of the weevil. The method most farmers follow is to use 100 to 200 pounds of Chilean nitrate per acre as soon as the crop is chopped. The young plants take up the nitrate as soon as it is applied, with the result that growth is speeded up and the crop is set before the weevil has reached its most destructive stage.

The president of the class presented to the school a gift of several pieces of furniture given by the class, also $15 for a tuition scholarship for one semester. The subject of chief interest during the past week in Thorsby, was closing days for the school year at Thorsby Institute, the first item being Senior Class night, when the said class put on a play that had a lot of merit and showed much ability in the art of acting by all who had a part in it. In fact, one seldom sees a play by amateurs that runs as smoothly as "The Early Bird," which was full of action from start to finish.

Thursday, May 26th, was commencement day, and as if to grace the occasion, was all that could be desired in the way of weather. Exercises opened promptly at 10:30 a.m., when the entire student body marched in, preceded by officers and faculty and the speaker of the day, Rev. Treacor Mordecai, pastor of Congregational Community Church, Birmingham. Those having a part in the program, together with members of the graduating class, took seats on the rostrum, while other members of the school were seated at either side of the rostrum in the auditorium, which was otherwise well filled with people interested in the school, including many from out of town.

Below is given names of graduates and the subjects on which each contributed an essay, which had previously been read to us at chapel, a few weeks previous. Those written by Misses Wilma Goodgame and Hellen Diefenderfer were read at commencement, as coming from winners of college scholarships for highest credits in the Senior Class this year. Both essays were accorded consderable prase by those who heard them.

The singing of the school as a whole, and the Girl's Glee Club, was spirited and very much appreciated. The graduating class, consisting of 14 girls and 7 boys, was the largest in the history of the school, and brought the total number of graduates to 183. Owing to the lack of educational facilities in rural schools in Alabama during the early years of Thorsby Institute, there were very few students in high school grades, but within the past few years the school has only accepted students of high school grades.

Dr. Mordecai's commencement address was given great applause. The communty dinner on the campus under auspices of the Ladies Guild of Thorsby was a banquet that will be long remembered.

BLEED THROUGH

J. E. WALLACE WRITES

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to send a note of cheer to my friends and the citizens of our beloved county who seem to be so much discouraged in the pursuit of their happiness in their various and sundry occupations of life.

While going about over the county, I notice a marked degree of discouragement and dissatsifaction among our people everywhere I go. I want them to know I deeply and keenly sympathize with them in their condition of restlessness. I wish I could find words to express my feelings to you through this letter which I am asking Mr. Wyatt to publish this week. I would like to write a lengthly letter, but time and space will not permit at his time. My heart goes out for those who are in distress because of the condition of the so-called "depression." Depression comes to a home because of two things, namely: lack of funds and lack of confidence. A person who is without either of these is in an awful condition and needs help and sympathy along with the free advice which is given sometimes by those who are very largely responsible for the lack of confidence which is demoralizing this country and wrecking and ruining the sanctity of many of our lovely American homes.

My mother, whom I lost two weeks ago, always taught me to never give up under strenuous conditions when my actions were being prompted by a noble purpose. She said "There is always a silver lining behind every cloud." There is dynamic power in this great principle and it is dearer to me now than ever before, and I want to put it over to my many friends and insist that you put it into action at once. I know that there is a solution for all this trouble, and it will soon begin to shape itself in the minds and hearts of our people in this country. I think I can see the light dawning now. I have been studying hard and deliberately for months on this perilous journey we have been taking for sometime. I believe this condition of ours is to a great extent, providential. We have been thrown in this panic because of our wickedness.

I came to this county about twenty years ago as a rural school teacher, and have been very closely associated with the farmers and business men of this county ever since. I taught for a number of years and have been postmaster at Maplesville since, and during this time, I have never failed to make a crop and am actually doing dirt farming now. I am in a position to fully understand the many perplexing problems that come to the farmers of our county. Every industry and every institution in our land is very largely dependent on farming and we should be proud of this relationship that exists between us and the other classes of servants. We farmers feel very humble in our service sometimes and lose sight of the fact that our services are vitally important in the progress of the entire world, and the civilization of our people along with the beautiful preparation for the life beyond.

During the twenty years I have been in this county, I have noted some very radical changes. Some I have noted with pride and some have caused me to feel sad, and I have wondered what it all meant, and what would be the result. But all the time I have tried to keep faith in the purpose. If the purpose of our people is noble, I know that these changes made by them will be for the best and I want to insist that we keep this principal in mind at all times, and be sure we do not undertake that which is not in line with the dominant thought of my humble letter directed to the distressed people of our county, and whom I love and respect. I shall be glad to give you the next if this is published and I feel constrained to write as I was this time. I would like to see and read some letters from others in this county that would tend to incourage the down-trodden farmers of this land of ours. With the very best wishes for the entire citizenship of our county, I am.—Yours for prosperity, J. E. Wallace.

WRITES FOR DEVAUGHN

Editor Union-Banner:

Please permit us space to say a few words to the voters of Chilton county in behalf of O. L. Devaughn, who is candidate for commissioner of the fourth district. We wish to say, first, that Mr. Devaughn is a young man, 42 years old, in good health, of good morals and a man of good sound business judgment and ability. Knowing him as we do, we believe that he is fully competent to fill the office to which he aspires and that he is worthy of your consideration and support in the run-off primary on June 14th.

We have always known him as a Christian gentleman, and a man who has always taken considerable interest in public affairs pertaining to the betterment of our community and adjoining communities. Mr. Devaughn is a good carpenter and knows what a building job is worth, and we think this would be an advantage when it comes to bridge work and such like.

We believe that if Devaughn is nominated and elected that he would administer the affairs of the office of commissioner with equal fairness to everyone in the district and county. We do not believe that he would be led or dictated to by any man or set of men, but would be willing to listen to, and consider any good advice from any person.

Now in conclusion, Devaughn carried the 4th district over his opponent, Mr. Duke in the first primary, May 3rd. It appears therefore, that the people in the 4th district want Mr. Devaughn, so we are asking the people out of the 4th district, will you help us nominate him on June 14th? I do not believe we could select a better man for the place.

Hoping you will consider these facts and turn out to the polls on June 14th and cast your vote for O. L. Devaughn. We are yours very truly,—C. R. Wells, A. T. Davis.

Mrs. Marvin Walker, of Bibb County, was here Tuesday for medical treatment.

BIRMINGHAM GIRL WINS STATE HONORS WITH ESSAY ON MEAT

Chicago, Ill., May 30.—An essay entitled, "Facts About Meat," has won for Miss Tilly Christie, a Birmingham high school girl, first place in the State of Alabama and a substantial cash award in an essay contest conducted in high schools of the United States under the sponsorship of the National Live Sstock and meat board, a research and educational institution. Announcement of the award has just been made by a committee of prominent home economists assembled in Chicago as contest judges.

Miss Christie's essay was selected as one of the best 48 in more than 14,000 entries.

The judges committee for the contest was composed of Miss Frances Swain, supervisor of household arts in the Chicago city schools and president of the American Home Economics association; Miss Alice Cline, professor of home economics at the University of Missouri; and Mrs. N. B. Nichols, associate editor of the Woman's Home Companion.

This was the ninth annual contest. The event has the full endorsement and support of the bureau of home economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and state agricultural colleges. Its purpose is to assist teachers of home economics in conducting their meat classes.

Teachers in 742 high schools cooperated this year, according to the board's figures. Their students wrote on all phases of the subject of live stock and meat. The majority of stories dealt with meat cookery. A great many wrote on meat in the low cost diet in view of the fact that meat prices are lower today than they have been in 35 years.

TIMELY GARDEN HINTS FROM JULIAN BROWN

Auburn, Ala., May 30.—Vegetable gardens have done well this year but summer and fall—which are difficult seasons for gardens—are in the future. To keep gardens producing vegetables throughout the summer and fall, Julian Brown, extension horticulturist at Auburn, offers several practical suggestions.

"First," said Mr. Brown, "planting, cultivation and fertilizing should continue. Successive planting to produce vegetables should be made provided the garden is well fertilized and grass and weeds are controlled by frequent cultivation."

For planting in Alabama gardens during the early summer Mr. Brown named beans, sweet corn, cucumbers, egg plant, leek, peppers, pumpkins, squash, salsify, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, gherkins and okra.

Arrange for watering or irrigation where feasible. Lack of water is a big handicap to vegetables during summer and fall.

A supply of sweet corn can be assured by successive plantings three weeks apart. Some of the early maturing varieties may be planted as late as 10 to 12 weeks before the usual date of killing frost.

Watermelon vines should be examined every week or two and the mishapen melons removed to permit the strength of the vines to go into good melons. An application of bordeaux mixture to cantaloupe vines will prevent foliage diseases.

Sweet potatoes may be started in June from vine cuttings. Where these cuttings are made from disease-free plants there will be no disease in the potatoes produced.

Strawberry plants rooted in June and July will produce twice as many berries next season as those rooted in the fall. The largest and finest berries are produced from early runners planted about 12 inches apart in a single or double row.

CHURCH CONFERENCE IS PLANNED AT AUBURN

Auburn, Ala., May 30.—The second nanual rural and town church conference at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute is scheduled for August 29 to September 3, as announced today by Prof L. N. Duncan, extension service director.

The program is being prepared and the conference will be conducted with a view to serving the rural and also urban ministers of Alabama.

The first conference of this kind at Auburn was held in June of last year. It was attended by a large number of ministers and others interested in church work. Prof. Duncan extended an invitation to all who are interested to come to Auburn for the second conference.

AUBURN WORKER TELLS ABOUT BETTER CANNING

Auburn, Ala., May 30.—Warning against dipping precooked or balanced vegetables and fruits in cold water "as in former years" is issued by Miss Helen Kennedy, extension nutritionist at Auburn.

"After vegetables and fruits are precooked or balanced," said Miss Kennedy, "pack immediately while steaming hot in hot jars. Fill with boiling water used for blancing and completely seal the jars at once before processing in a steam pressure cooker.

"This method preserves color in vegetables and insures a full jar of liquid. Care must be taken to see that jars, vegetables and water are piping hot. This method does not include tomatoes."

The Alabama Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo is scheduled to take place at Mobile Bay, August 8, 9, 10. This is an annual affair being sponsored by the organization with the assistance of I. T. Quinn, commissioner of conservation at Montgomery.

ALABAMA FARMERS ARE OPERATING MORE FARMS

Alabama farmers are operating 5,000 more farms, an increase of about 2 per cent over last year, reports the state crop reporting service of the department of agriculture.

"The cause of the increase in the number of farms is obviously the effort of a good man person to seek a means of livelihood on the farm moving thereto from industrial employment," declared Seth P. Storrs, commissioner.

F. W. Gist, statistician, reports that about 262,000 farms are being operated this year compared with 256,000 as found by the 1930 census. "About 8,000 families moved to the farm while 3,000 left the farm leaving a net gain of 5,000 farms."

UNITED STATE GREW 62 PER CENT OF COTTON

The United States last year produced 62 per cent of the world's crop according to F. W. Gist, statistician of the department of agriculture.

"The total crop of the world is fixed at 27,500,000 bales of which foreign countries produced 10,404,000. The crop produced in foreign countries last year was materially decreased, while the crop in the United States was much larger than the three years previous," Gist said.

"The world's acreage to cotton is fixed at 82,700,000 for last year a reduction of 4,000,000 acres from the year before. Of this acreage the United States harvested a fraction more than 48 per cent so that the yield of cotton per acre in the United States averaged considerably larger than foreign countries.

"India grew twenty-three and a half million acres and produced three and a half million bales. Russia was next with 5,300,000 acres grown and a crop of 1,800,000 bales. Egypt grew 1,700,000 acres, on which there were produced 1,300,000 bales. All other countries grew less than a million acres."

BARK BEETLE EMERGING SAYS STATE FORESTER

Montgomery, Ala., May 30.—Bark beetles which transform from larvae and in their adult stage attack new trees are now emerging from beneath the bark of their host trees and are seeking new timber to destroy, according to investigations made by Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester of Alabama. This is the principal cause of the death of many pine trees in residential and suburban districts, points out Colonel Bunker.

The adult beetle matures in the spring and early summer, drills outward from under the bark leaving a small clean round opening like a shot hole. It flies to other trees and proceeds to bore a hole through the outer bark into the cambium layer which lies between the wood and the bark. This layer is rich in the kinds of food upon which the young beetles thrive. The parent beetle deposits its eggs in this part of the tree. The eggs are hatched into small grub like larvae which feed as they burrow along the cambium layed leaving galleries which in the long run completely girdle the tree causing death.

The entrance holes made by the parent beetle are often characterized by exuding pitch or resin. These pitch tubes are a sure indication that a tree is being attacked. In the case of lawn or shade trees or other pines which it is particularly desired to preserve, it is worth while to inject carbon bisulphide into each of these pitch tubes as soon as formed. This will kill the beetles at any stage of growth. In the case of large infestations which would cost too much to be treated in this way, the best remedy is to cut out the infested and peel and burn the bark. If this is done quite generally by adjoining owners of groves and woodlands, the infestations can be stopped.

DAIRYING

FEEDING COWS IMPORTANT

Pastures 12 per cent under normal, cows below average in condition and milk production, say the government figures—and no market for canners! What's a man going to do in a situation like that, is the question confronting cow owners today, according to R. J. Howat, well known authority on dairying and head of the dairy department of Purina Mills.

"The only thing profitable he can do," says Howat, answering the question, "is to take his mind off the milk market over which he has no control and concentrate on handling his cows so they'll hold up in flesh and production and keep checks coming in regularly during the pasture season.

"Many a farmer who feeds his cows nothing but pasture during the summer says he's getting 'free' milk. But there's no such thing as 'free' milk. Milk made on pastures alone is milk on credit. The farmer has to pay later in the season with plenty of interest when he finds his cows have run down in milk yield and he has to roll the feed to them.

"There are just two ways of making milk on pastures. It can be made of grass plus cow flesh, reducing cows to canners that are worth little today. Or it can be made of grass plus a well balanced grain feed supplement leaving the cow in good shape and producing well all season:

"It is no more possible to hold up a cow in flesh and milk production all summer long on grass alone than it would be to keep her in shape all winter on nothing but hay. Pasture is really hay with the water still in it—80 per cent water at that. It should be considered as the roughage part of the ration and supplemented with a milk making feed as is done with hay in winter.

"Such supplementary help is especially needed today when pastures are being reported below normal and cows below average in condition and milk production.

"Only a little grain feed is necessary at first while the grass is choice and fresh," advises Howat. Each cow should receive about half as much grain feed as the winter ration. This should be about 1 lb of a feed like Bulky Cow Chow for each 6 to 8 lbs. (3 to 4 qts) of milk. As summer approaches and pasture begins to get short and dry the Bulky Cow Chow should be increased just enough to keep cows in flesh and hold up milk flow—say about 1 lb for each 4 to 5 lbs (2 to 3 qts) of milk.

"With dry or closely cropped pasture 1 lb of Bulky Cow Chow should be fed each 3 to 4 lbs (1 to 2 qts) of milk. When the weather is unusually hot or dry a little succulence like Bulkylas should be fed with the grain ration, the amount depending upon the condition of the pasture. Here it is best to give the cows the regular winter feeding of grain.

"For the dairyman who raises grain, the above directions are equally as good but instead of feeding Bulky Cow Chow a ration of one part of grain and one part 24 per cent Cow Chow is fed."

Bulky Cow Chow, Bulky-las, and 24 per cent Cow Chow are sold locally by J. L. Ruffin.

SOME DAILY REMINDERS

This is the last call for the planting of sorghum or other silage crops to be used in filling the trench silo you should dig in August. Do not forget that each dairy cow kept during next winter should have 2 and one-half to three tons of silage and one ton of legume hay. You can figure on producing 8 to 10 tons of sorghum silage per acre on fairly good land.

Do not forget the late July and August drought when pastures burn out. Sudan grass, on fertile soils will be ready to cut or graze by August and will furnish a lot of succulent feed to supplement the short grazing during the dry period.

Keep cream clean and cool and deliver often during the hot summer weather. Keep your cream can in a spring or in well water. Do not mix fresh cream with old cream until it has been cooled. This will result in a quality product and will help to stimulate butter consumption. This will increase the price of butter fat to you.

Can you produce a pound of butterfat as cheap as you can produce a pound of cotton? If not you had better cull out your low producing cows and replace them with higher producing cows. Low producing cows cannot possibly pay a profit at the prevailing price of butterfat.

Have you a purebred bull out of a high producing dam at the head of your herd or in your community? If not you had better assist your county agent in organizing a bull association. Four bulls placed in four different communities in a county and rotated every two years will give you the use of four bulls for the price of one. We should have at least one bull association in each county and now is your time to organize.—F. W. Burns, Auburn, Ala.

THRILLS OFFERED AT BIG AIR CARNIVAL

Special railroad rates of $1.00 a round trip from all points within a 150 mile radius of Brmingham and special reduced rates at Birmingham hotels for those using these railroad excursions have been put into effect for the Air Carnival, to be held June 3-4-5, at Birmingham's Million Dollar Municipal Airport under the sponsorship of the Birmingham Aero Club.

The railroad rates are good only on trains June 4 and returning June 5, but the carnival will start Friday night June 3, with spectacular night demonstration.

Members of the 540th Coast Artillery under the command of Col. Bramlett, and planes of the 106th Observation Squadron, Alabama National Guard, are putting on the demonstration of the night attack, being assisted by the 69th anti-aircraft Regiment of Fort McClellan, Anniston.

This demonstration of war tactics will take place at the airport at 8 p.m. Friday. Searchlights will play over the city from sundown until 8 p.m. searching for enemy planes. At the prescribed time, the signal will be given that they have been sighted. The anti aircraft guns will charge into position on the airport as the enemy planes make their appearance and attempt to bomb the anti-aircraft gunners, they will train the four machine guns and four 3-inch guns on the attacking planes.

In addition, on Friday night, there will be a parachute jump by searchlight, and a spectacular display of 300 5,000 candlepower flares shot from airplanes in flight and illuminating the city for miles around.

Saturday noon, all airplanes assembled on the airport will make a mass flight over the city, giving the signal for the start of the day's events. This will be Army and Navy Day, when planes from Maxwell Field and from the Naval Air Station at Pensacola will give exhibitions of the latest air maneuvers and tactics. One of the features will be the famous squirrel cage, where six planes loop in rapid succession one after the other continously, giving the appearance of a giant hoop spinning in the air.

On Saturday afternoon, also there will be civilian aerial acrobatics and a parade of the newest types and models of planes, from the tiny Heath Parasol, the smallest plane manufactured and sold, to the giant Ford and Fokker airliners. As these planes are shown to the public, an announcer will explain their various features to the crowd over the specially installed public address system.

Another feature will be the parachute contest, where a number of parachute jumpers will attempt to land in the exact center of the air port. Prizes will be offered for the winner.

On Sunday afternoon there will be races for planes of the same model and make. Eight Stinsons, cabin monoplanes, have entered one of the races, and since these planes are of the same type and motor, it will be a contest of pilots skill. Some of the best known fliers in the South have entered.

Another thrilling feature will be the group parachute jump, Sunday afternoon, when several parachute jumpers will leave a huge plane at the same time and come floating to earth.

A military review of the 106th Observation Squadron and salute to military cammanders will be another feature.

Special parking arrangements have been made to handle the crowds and street car and bus transportation to the airport have been provided. A nominal admission charge will be made.

Wilkins Favors Election of County Superintendent By The People

To the voters of Chilton County:

You remember that on June 14th, which is only a short time off, you will go to the polls and cast your vote on who shall be nominated for member of the school board. I fully appreciate the honor that has been conferred upon me by being selected as one of the two who are to make the run-off.

I most earnestly ask each and every voter to give me an earnest consideration. I wish that I could see every voter in the county. Those whom I have already talked with, and those who I have never met. I have lots of work to do at home and can not see all of you. I am taking this means of re-stating more clearly what I stand for. I am not well enough acquainted with the different phases of the school system to make a detail as to what I would do, should I be elected.

I promise that I will exercise the very best judgment that I can in seeing that the schools in the county are operated with the most rigid and strict economies, that is consistent with the interest of every child in the county. Two things that will be first in my mind will be the interest of the children in the county and the interest of all taxpayers in the county.

I want to say here that it will be my honest intention to see that every child in the county, regardless as to where it lives, will have an equal opportunity to attend school. I believe that the school funds of the county should be divided as nearly equally between all children of the county as it is possible for it to be

I believe that Chilton County has an opportunity of developing one of the greatest school systems of any rural county of Alabama. I want to pledge myself that I will do everything to see that our county takes no backward steps in our educational program.

There is one question about which I have been asked how I stand many times, and I want to re-state what I said before the primary on May 3rd, that I fully believe that the question of selecting a county superintendent of Education should be settled by the voice of the people. I want to pronounce here that I will stand for and urge that the people be given a voice in the selection of the Superintendent of Education.

The board of Education does not have to wait for a law requiring that the Superintendent be elected by the people. The people could select who they want and then the board of education should cast their vote according to their decision. I earnestly believe that this would give a better satisfaction and would be for the betterment of the schools as a whole. I would like to see more of our people interested in the work of the school board to the end that they would visit the board meetings to see what is being done.

If I should be nomiated and elected, I shall be there to serve the people and want you to feel that you would be welcome at any time the board should be in session. May I ask that you investigate my record as a school man, and as a citizen. I consider the vote a man gets at his home to be the best recommendation that one could have.

I wish to say, not in a boastful way, that I am proud of the fact that in the recent primary I received every vote polled out of 83 at my home box, except 3.

Upon this record and my former records of life, am I asking the voters to consider me for a position on the school board. If I am found worthy and capable, I most earnestly solicit your vote.—C. L. Wilkins.

(Paid political adv., by C. L. Wilkins, Verbena, Ala.)

PLEADS INNOCENT

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to inform any friends I may have in Chilton County that I have been falsely accused of burglarizing the camp house of one Dr. Hayes of Clanton. Having had a preliminary trial and the case was held over for the grand jury to decide through the perjured testimony of two irresponsible witnesses. But in fair justice to me be it known that since my preliminary trial Dr. Hayes has found out who the real perpetrators of the crime are and that I am innocent.

I am a stranger in your state. I came here to spend the winter and spring to recuperate from an illness. I have been advised by my physician to go south and escape the rigors of the winters of the north. I have no one to make bond for me here so I will have to spend the summer here in jail until next fall when your grand jury will meet again.

Thanking your sheriff and also Probate Judge Reynolds for their kind treatment and interest shown me, I am yours.—Andy Gerber.

BRIDGE TEA GIVEN IN HONOR OF MISS ORR

One of the prettiest social affairs of the season was given at the attractive home of Mrs. Lawrence Gerald, when Mrs. Gerald and Mrs. John C. Page, were joint hostesses, complimenting Miss Madelyn Orr, bride-elect, with a bridge tea shower.

Floor baskets of delphinium and roses, silver baskets of gladioli and bowls of sweet peas were arranged throughout the home. Attractive tallies of June brides were passed by Miss Peggy Page and a number of auction bridge games were played at ten tables. At the conclusion of the games the highest score was held by Mrs. John Browder, who received two linen handkerchiefs. The bride-elect was also presented a box of dainty handkerchiefs.

The tea table was beautifully appointed. A color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the mints and decorations. The table was centered with a crystal bowl of delphinium and on each side were silver holders with tall pink tapers. Pretty bowls of tulle were tied to the chandelier and ends were extended to each corner of the table where other bows were made. The bows of tulle were showered with dainty white blossoms. Presiding at the tea table were Mesdames Arthur Johnson, Grady Reynolds, Hance Alred and Grady Broadhead, assisted by Misses Celia Gerald and Peggy Page.

During the tea hour the honoree was presented with a parasol completely covered outside and inside with hand-made handkerchiefs for every occasion.

The bride to be was an admired figure in shell pink lace fashioned with a jacket and a full circular skirt which touched the floor. Her picture hat was of pink with a touch of bright blue.

The following guests were included in this affair: Mesdames J. C. Jones, J. Watts Moore, J. P. Hayes, J. W. Hayes, W. H. Lanier, Eric Hart, Hugh Simpson, John Browder, Julius Burnett, Frank Callen, Hance Alred, John Armstrong, John Deramus, Grady Reynolds, Arthur Johnsonson, T. C. McSwain, W. Inzer, H. F. Downs, C. Fenn Jones, Barney Burnett, Omar Reynolds, Grady Broadhead, Hugh Jones, John Mullins, C. E. Stapp, W. M. Wyatt, R. D. Woodson, W. E. Huddleston, Walter Bentley, J. E. Edgar, R. W. Harrison of Guin, W. G. Orr of Birmingham, Grady Heflin, Ernest Brand, J. M. Morgan of New Orleans, J. R. Morgan of New Orleans, J. R. Mullins, B. M. Roberts, M. R. Orr, Stoddard of Selma, James Q. Wade, Misses Virginia Murphy, Jane Roberts, Sara Cummings, Celia Gerald, Peggy Page, Cunningham.

WHEN COMPANY COMES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Mrs. Jackson was using the vacuum cleaner on everything in the house from the rugs on the parlor floor to the paneling on the ceiling. There were no pussy willows in the corners or under the beds when she got through. The window curtains were being washed and everything was being meticulously dusted and put into formal order.

"Now don't throw your clothes on the bed," she called up the stairs to her husband who was taking a bath and cleaning up generally as if in preparation for an important event. "I've just put on a fresh quilt, and I don't want it mussed up."

Company was coming and the Jacksons were getting ready for it. The best table linen would be gotten out, and all Mrs. Jackson's silver, which she used only on rare occasions, would be shined up, and her finest china would appear. There would be much more formality at meals, and more appetizing and more abundant food.

"I wish you'd stay longer," young Jackson remarked quite sincerely to the departing guests when the Jacksons had last had company, "we have so much better things to eat when we have company than we do when there is no one here."

Isn't it so!

We are likely, also, to assume quite regularly company manners when there are guests at the house. Mr. Jackson seats the lady at his right with a good deal of flourish and formality. When they are alone Mrs. Jackson may step or fall into her chair at the table as much as she pleases.

I'm not finding fault with all this. I'm just wondering if it might not make life a trifle less dull and uninteresting if we should not wait always for company to come before we put on our nicest clothes and served the most tempting meals.

Why should we have to wait until company comes before we get out our prettiest china, put on our attractive clothes, and show our finest manners? Aren't the home folks after all just as good as company?

Boll Weevil Prepared to Make Heaviest Attack on Cotton

Infestation Is Abnormally Heavy Because of Mild Winter

The cotton crop's worst enemy is on the rampage this year. Weather conditions have been ideal for the boll weevil, with the result that the crop is in danger of one of the heaviest of all weevil attacks.

In ordinary years only about six out of every hundred weevils hibernating in the winter are alive in the spring. Cold winter weather is responsible for a heavy mortality, whereas mild weather, like the winter this year, is invariably followed by a severe infestation. Another factor we have to contend with this year is the likelihood of a wet summer, following two bone-dry summers in succession. A cold, damp season always produces the most favorable conditions for the multiplication of the weevils.

It has been estimated that the possible number of descendants of one pair of weevils surviving the winter could be 12,755,100 in the course of one season. The female lays an average of four eggs a day and a total of about 140 during her life. It takes only two to three weeks from the time an egg is laid until a mature weevil appears.

Experience of farmers throughout the South shows that the most effective way for getting the crop ahead of the weevil is by side-dressing with quick-acting nitrogen fertilizer. The common application is 100 to 200 pounds of Chilean nitrate per acre immediately after chopping. The nitrate forces the crop so that a large number of the bolls are set before the weevil is able to do its worst damage.

By keeping the crop growing at full speed all summer, a side-dressing makes it possible to produce cotton profitably under boll weevil conditions.

ODD THINGS AND NEW—By Lame Bode

(WNU Service.)

LOW COST AND HIGH YIELD THE ONE WAY TO PROFIT

The result pictured above shows what the American-made nitrate of soda, used as a side-dressing, did for P. O. Bennett of Orangeburg, S. C. Yield increases like this are well worth the investment which nitrate of soda calls for.

WHILE the farmer cannot control weather conditions, floods or insects, he can, and most emphatically should, use extreme care in the selection of his seed and in the selection and use of fertilizers. Good seed and wise fertilization will decide the value of his crops and hence the amount of his profits.

The cotton farmers who will prosper in 1932 are those who will reduce the acreage under cultivation for cotton and who will use adequate amounts of Arcadian Nitrate of Soda on those acres on which cotton is to be grown. For regardless of laws passed by the Federal or State governments, it is good common sense which prompts the farmer to reduce his cotton acreage. The balance of his fields may be more profitably planted with varied crops to produce food both for himself and his live-stock.

The wise farmer, however, will remember that every single dollar invested in good commercial fertilizer may be depended upon to bring him a return of three dollars or more. Omitting the fertilizer, may save a little money at planting time and while the crops are in their early growth stages, but real loss will develop if those undernfed crops are not side-dressed later.

SINGING AT WHITE CITY

There will be an all day singing at the Baptist Church June 12. We invite the public to attend, especially the singers.

SOME NOTES ABOUT SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION

Ideal weather conditions prevailed for the delegates all through the convention, the atmostphere being cleared by cooling gulf breezes. Inside the Coliseum, where seats had been provided for 6,000, huge refrigeration ventilators kept a steady flow of purified air running through the building, making fans unnecessary.

Across the street from the auditorium, all recreation club houses in use by winter visitors during the season, were converted into sub-buildings for the convention. In the huge roque rink structure was located the largest book store in the South where Baptist publications and volumes, thousands of them were on display.

At the Schuffleboard Club House, the building was converted into a first aid hospital. The Chess and Checker Club was used as a substation post office. The Quoit Club was converted into a registration bureau for Baptist messengers, while the Lawn Bowling Club was pressed into use as press headquarters.

Alabama delegates learned on their arrival here that St. Petersburg had established the most unusual weather record in the history of any city in North America, when on April first of this year, it had concluded 436 consecutive days of sunshine.

Delegates were royally entertained away from the regular business sessions. They were taken on yachting trips down old Tampa Bay, to the magnificant bathing beaches on the Gulf. They were dined at the huge casino on the end of Recreation Pier, and they were shown all points of interest that were viewed by other cotton state visitors who came here last winter.

Within recent years St. Petersburg has grown in popular favor with Alabama tourists and annually the number who come here either winter or summer has gradually increased. Contrary to general belief, the weather is never humid on the Florida Gulf Coast, and this particular section is rapidly becoming known as the coolest of summer vacation spots on the entire gulf.

There were 82 Alabama winter vacationists here last season, most of whom have made reservations for their return next winter.

BRIDGE CLUB ENTERTAINS FOR BRIDE-ELECT

The members of the Wednesday bridge club entertained at a delightful affair on last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. Fenn Jones, honoring a member of the club, Miss Madelyn Orr, a popular bride-elect.

The home was beautifully decorated with an array of spring flowers.

At the conclusion of a series of bridge games, Mrs. T. C. McSwain, president of the club presented the honoree with a lovely gift of silver. Mrs. Lawrence Gerald was the winner of the high score prize, a pair of hose.

A tempting salad plate was served by Mesdames C. Fenn Jones, T. C. McSwain, Barney Burnette, Norman Roberts, W. Inzer and Lanier.

Included in this hospitality were Mesdames: J. P. Hayes, H. F. Downs, Grady Reynolds, Arthur Johnson, J. C. Burnett, Omar Reynolds, Grady Broadhead, John Armstrong, John Browder, Lawrence Gerald, J. W. Hayes, Frank Callen, Hance Alred, John Page, H. M. Simpson, James Q. Wade, Hugh Jones, N. S. Johnson, W. H. Lanier, Mrs. M. R. Orr, Miss Sarah Cummings and the honoree.

SINGING AT CORINTH

The singers were called to order at 10 o'clock by the chairman, Duff Devaughn, who was elected at the last church conference. The first thing was to elect an arrangement committee, which consisted of William Jones of Prattville, I. D. Huett, Verbena, A. M. Jones, Corinth and W. A. Jones, secretary. The pianists for the day were: Flora Jones, J. A. Varner, Lee Grant, Lum Robinson. Directors for the day were: J. R. Robinson, J. E. Jones, I. D. Huett, W. L. Jones, R. T. Grant, quartet by Verbena quartet, A. M. Jones, Archie Jones, Archie Devaughn, J. A. Varner. We were then dismissed for dinner by Rev. Hand.

The singers were called back at 1:30 by the chairman, who led a song at that time. Other directors for the afternoon were Lee Grant, O. L. Devaughn, then a quartet picked from the class, consisting of Lum Robinson, Clarence Billingsley, Edward Taylor, Prof. Weldon. A recess of 15 minutes was taken. The singing was resumed with the following directors: Amie Boswell, John W. Cagle, A. R. Robinson, N. J. Jones, W. M. Jones.

All directors sung 2 songs each. It was as nearly perfect weather for singing as any one could wish for. There were not as many people as usually come to old Corinth to singings, but there was as good singing as was ever held here. It was a wonderful day for the singers. We thank the people for their good help and behavior. We thank the people for the nice way they handled their trucks and cars. At no time was the singers interrupted by their noise.—W. A. Jones.

We receive you with a smile. Any time you can come you are welcome.

Early Fast-Growing Cotton Safer From Weevil Ravages

This picture shows the advantage of forcing cotton as a means of getting ahead of the weevil. The plant in farmer's right hand was taken from rows side-dressed with Chilean nitrate, while one at left received no side-dressing. The contrast is also apparent in the rows where the men are standing.

Realizing that the weevil is here to stay, planters have developed methods to grow cotton in spite of him. Improved seed, early planting, and a side-dressing of quick-acting nitrogen have made it possible to speed up the crop so that the bolls are set before the weevil is able to do its worst damage.

A crop that grows off slowly is at the weevil's mercy, particularly in a season like this one when there is an abnormally heavy weevil infestation. A nitrate side-dressing is cheap and effective insurance this year.

OBITUARY

God in His infinite wisdom and mercy has seen fit to call to Himself, our beloved brother and church member, Mr. William Joseph Cummings, and by his death his family has been deeply grieved and has suffered a great loss. The Mulberry Baptist Church, of which he was a member will miss him in attendance. He was a friend to all with whom he came in contact, always ready to help those whom he could.

Mr. Cummings was born October, 1872. He died March 23, 1932, after a short illness. He was laid to rest in the cemetery at the Mulberry Baptist church. Mr. Cummings was born and reared in Coosa County. He joined the church at about 16 years of age, at Concord Baptist church in Coosa County. He was always interested in church work, trying to make God's kingdom a little bigger and better.

His first marriage was to Ella Wood of Coosa County. To this union was born two children. His second marriage was to Ethel Casey, also of Coosa County. To this union was born fifteen children. All of his children survive him, except M. B. Cummings and a little girl.

Mr. Cummings had been in Chilton County only a year and three months, but some of the people here have known him over 30 years.

We sorrow that he is gone, but we know that if we are faithful we can go to him,

Therefore, be it resolved, first, that the Mulberry Baptist church has lost a faithful member,

Second, that the prayer meeting has lost a faithful attendant and worker,

Third, that we bow in humble submission, believing that our great loss shall be heaven's gain, and our loss shall be only for a while, and that we shall have again the splendid Christian fellowship that has been ours,

Fourth, that we revere his memory and commend his life both in example and deed, as that of a most worthy gentleman.—Lorene LeCroy, chairman; Mrs. Ernest McCary, Homer Morgan, Committee.

The "Quest of the Pink Parasol" was very picturesque. The poor poppies died and had to be carried out by the gardener.

J. Mell Martin made a business trip to Montgomery Tuesday.

DAT BLOOMIN PREACHER

Elder Blossom Fills His Appointment At Special Appointment For The 5th Sunday in May

(Note.—We have translated Elder Blossom's sermon into every-day language this week, just for a change. Read it like this and see if you like it better than in the darky dialect.)

This being my first time to preach here, I am naturally at a loss to know just what to preach. If I knew just what your pastor had talked about at his last appointment, I would have no fear of duplication. I have selected for a lesson, Matt. 7:24 to the 29. (Reads lesson).

The text this morning is in Heb. 2:3. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" A startling question. Sin destroys the good and worth-while things in life and eternally dooms the soul. First, this salvation is great, because of the blessed love that prompted it. John 3:16 says that "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasing life." That great love of God for poor lost souls, was what prompted Him to send His son into the world. And through Him set up a plan whereby sinful men could be saved, and if a man neglects his salvation, he also spurns God's love. And second, it is great, because of the way it was purchased. Sinners never stop to think what it cost heaven to provide salvation for them. And the cost didn't stop there, it was necessary for Jesus to undergo cruel mockings and be subjected to all kinds of indignities, and then submit to the awful death of the cross. The cost was great, but the salvation purchased is greater, because everybody can be saved by that one death. Third, it is great because of what it brings to the soul. Salvation brings to man something that he never had before. That is a love for God, and the cause of Christ and a love for His fellowman.

It also begets within him a desire to please God with his life and where there was no hope before, he now has a hope of eternal life. Fourth, it is great because it is the only salvation. "There is none other name given among men whereby we must be saved." There is no salvation in forms, rites, ceremonies, or ordinances, else Christ had died in vain. Neither is there salvation in the law. The law is the revelation of the perfect holiness of God and is given to us as a basis of conscience and to reveal to us our utter helplessness and need of salvation. This salvation is really spiritual. We are saved by grace through faith that, not of ourselves, lest any man should boast. Fifth, to miss salvation all that is necessary is just to neglect it. It is not necessary to sink to the lowest levels of shame and disgrace, just neglect it. The highest moral, standards of living does not even touch the realm of Salvation. In other words, one may keep the law, and live an upright clean life and neglect this great salvation and be lost. Just let me illustrate to you what sinful neglect will do. A party of people are out on the river in a boat, they are above the falls, the waters are rushing over the falls at a terrifying speed. Now just what would be necessary for them to do to lose their lives? Would it be necessary to rock the boat or to push each other out or punch holes in the bottom of the boat? No, no need to head the boat in the direction of the falls and pull on the oars. I'll tell you, all that would be necessary would, now to just sit there, neglect to pull on the oars. We couldn't say that the party of people in that boat wanted to go over the falls, nor that each one was waiting for the other to take the oars and row the boat up the stream and away from the falls. We might think that they saw the danger but felt that they had plenty of time we might watch to see when someone would take the oars and begin to rescue themselves.

Many sinners have said, "I have lots of time yet, I have a long life ahead of me." And then without a moments notice they are called to appear before their Judge in a lost condition, all because they neglected so great salvation. Now how shall we escape? Paul, the author of my text, did not ask the question in an offhand way, just merely to be asking a question. Paul knew that there was absolutely no way of escape if we neglect the great salvation that Jesus brought to us through His death, burial and resurrection. My sinner friends, suppose I went to the county jail in Clanton and asked those prisoners of they wished to escape the punishment for the crime for which they were locked up and if they wished to come out of that jail free men. What do you suppose would be their answer? Of course each one would say yes. Then I would say to them, "I have paid your fine but I require of each of you that you go before the court and acknowledge your guilt, otherwise the money that I paid will not be of any benefit to you." What would you think of them if they should neglect to take advantage of my offer? Now if there was one or more of them that was not guilty of any crime they would tell me immediately that they could not go before the court and acknowledge to something that they were not guilty of. But my sinner friends, there is not a man living or that ever lived, that could say that they were not guilty of sinning against God. Then if all are guilty, no one can escape if they neglect this great salvation.

I wish therefore to impress upon all the fact that, just to neglect this great salvation spells the eternal doom of all. Now in conclusion, I wish to say that usually when we neglect anything our minds are preoccupied that is, we are thinking about something else. I am therefore, of the opinion that a great many good moral people—people who pay their debts, tell the truth, and treat their fellowman right—are today just allowing their minds to be continually filled up with the affairs of this life, and are for that reason neglecting this great salvation.

If I could get you to stop just five or ten minutes and seriously consider your condition, I am sure that you would not longer neglect the salvation of your soul. May God bless this sermon to the saving of some soul. I will now read my poem.

Salvation is not for angels,
But for fallen men.
Those who are estranged from God
All because of sin.

He calls them by the Gospel
From every tribe and nation,
Saying to them, "you can't escape
If you neglect this great salvation.

Sinner, why longer neglect and Continue this strained relation.
When you can become the son of God
By accepting this great salvation.

Stand and be dismissed.

A. A. JACKSON SAYS FAREWELL TO REPUBLICAN PARTY

Editor Union-Banner:

Will you please give me space in your paper to say a few words to the voters of Chilton County, especially to the farmers and laborers.

First, I want to ask what was the condition of county four years ago when the present administration took charge of our affairs? They organized the Federal Farm Bureau and went into the wheat and cotton market. When the bureau began buying wheat was bringing about $1.40 a bushel and cotton 16 to 18 cents a pound. What happened then?

The money kings who had charge of the market began to force a market decline, and as the market declined the bureau went down as the market went down. But the bureau continued to buy until they bought about forty million bushels of wheat and two million bales of cotton. Both wheat and cotton continued to decline in price until the bureau quit buying. The money kings ran the bureau out of the market and left them with their wheat and cotton on their hands. The bureau gave the wheat to poor old suffering humanity and I suppose they have the cotton on their hands yet.

Now, here is the point I want the voters to see. If the money kings are stronger and have more power than the present administration, what hope can we farmers and laborers have for relief from the present Republican administration? Here we are in a land of plenty, and millions suffering for want of food and clothing; millions of homes sold for taxes; millions of homes lost on account of mortgages foreclosed. Who is responsible for such conditions?

Has it not been clearly proven during the last your years that the money kings are a stronger power than the administration? Mr. Voter, open your eyes. Consider what has happened to you in the past four years. Do you want to see conditions continue as they are? Is not any administration supposed to protect the weak from the oppression of the strong? What protection have the farmers and laborers had during the past four years? Now, what are we going to do about it? Are we going to continue to support the Republican party? I for one will not, and will not support any candidate who wants to continue the present Hoover prosperity.

I feel it my duty to do all I can honorably do to defeat the present Republican administration, and the only weapon I have any knowledge of that would hurt a Republican is a Democratic vote.

In conclusion, let me ask the voters of Chilton County, do you want a continuation of present conditions? If so, vote for Hoover prosperity; if not, vote against Hoover prosperity.—Respectfully, A. A. Jackson.

IN MEMORY OF SOLDIERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

This year, on the day when the American people give thought to those who gave their lives for the preserviation of the nation, it is especially appropriate to remember the patriots who died during the Revolution while battling with General Washington for the independence of the American people. In no way could Memorial day better be observed than in thus devoting it to Washington's honor, during this year when we celebrate the 200th anniversary of his birth, and nothing could be more in Washington's own spirit than this tribute to those loyal Americans who gave their lives to the cause for which he fought.

This rite is all the more necessary, according to the United States George Washington Bicentennial commission, because of the curious historical fact that no accurate record was ever made, either during the Revolution, or after it, of the patriots who died in action, in their country's struggle for independence. Washington's hurridly gathered and untrained army had no facilities for the "paper work" that has become an elaborate feature of modern military science.

For example, no count of American dead has come down to us from even so important an engagement as the action at Princeton, which enabled Washington to clear the British out of New Jersey. The best authority on the subject contents himself with reporting the British loss as more than one hundred, and the American loss much less.

One historic fact does sharply stand out, however, as to patriot losses in battle. That is, where Washington himself reports them, they are accurate enough, and their smallness indicates with what economy of men he accomplished his epoch-making results. For example, he records that in the seige of Yorktown, the action that decided the Revolution, there were but 23 of his officers and men killed. At King's Mountain, another pivotal engagement, the British loss was severe, but again the patriots lost but few. The battle of Trenton, to fight which Washington made his famous crossing of the Deleware, and which saved the patriot cause from going on the rocks of public apathy, was bought at the cheapest price of all. Two patriot soldiers were killed, and three officers wounded—one of these was Lt. James Monroe, afterwards president of the United States.

The best count now possible by military experts gives Washington a total enlisted military force of 38,500, but he never had these gathered together at one time, owing to lapses and over-lappings of enlistments and at critical times his forces sank to 3,000. The most accurate count possible today, covering the number of patriots actually shot and killed in battle, fixes their number at 4,044.

Again the Revolutionary army could make no effort to mark the burial places of the dead as in the modern military practice and the sacred places where these heroes lie will never be known. Almost the only graves of Revolutionary soldiers are those who survived the war and were buried in private burial places.

Nothing remains, therefore, of those who gave their lives in the making of the United States except the memory of their heroism. It is the greater reason why on memorial day, in this year of tribute to George Washington, the United States should give a thought to these self-giving men who died that their country might live.

JOSEPH THE WORKER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 41:46-57.

GOLDEN TEXT—Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Making Dreams Come True.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Joseph the Worker.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Rewards of Faithfulness.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Religious Value of Work.

Joseph was not a self-made man, but a God-made man. His masters always attributed the quality of his character and the success of his work to the fact that the Lord was with him.

I. Joseph Serving Potiphar (39:1-20).

1. Sold to the Ishmaelites (37:28). Joseph was sent by his father to his brethren on an errand of mercy. At the sight of Joseph the murderous envy of his brethren was stirred up. They first proposed to kill him in order to prevent his dreams from coming true. Finally the prudent suggestion of Judah to sell him prevailed, and he was carried to Egypt and sold as a slave to Potiphar.

2. His prosperity while a slave in Potiphar's house (39:2-6). This prosperity consisted of:

a. Being accorded the privilege of Potiphar's house. By "house" is meant his private residence instead of fields or public buildings.

b. He became Potiphar's personal attendant (v. 4).

c. He was made overseer of Potiphar's house (v. 4).

d. He brought prosperity to Potiphar (v. 5). The Lord blassed Potiphar for Joseph's sake.

e. He possessed an attractive personality (v. 6.) His fine physique and commanding personality were gifts from God.

3. His temptation (vv. 7-20). Potiphar's wife became infatuated with this handsome slave. He resisted her, unwilling to sin against his master and his God.

II. Joseph Serving in Prison (39:21-40:23).

1. Overseeing the prisoners (39:21-40:4). Being defeated in her wicked purpose, Potiphar's wife accused Joseph falsely. Potiphar must not have really believed his wife's story, or he would have put Joseph to death. He imprisoned him, the least that was possible under the circumstances.

a. The Lord gave him favor in the sight of the keeper of the prison (v. 21). This keeper was none other than Potiphar himself (40:3, cf. 39:1).

b. He was given charge of the prisoners (v. 22). Potiphar knew Joseph's ability and faithfulness, therefore gave him employment of the most important kind.

c. The Lord made him to be prosperous (v. 23). Joseph's success was due to the hand of God upon him.

2. Interpreting the dreams of the butler and the baker (40:5-23). These were two very important officers in Pharaoh's court, their business being to provide the drink and food of the ruler and his household. These officers had disturbing dreams. He interpreted their dreams. His interpretation was favorable to the butler, who gave his pledge to Joseph that he would intercede with Pharaoh for him when he was set free.

III. Joseph Serving Pharaoh (41:1-57).

1. Interpreting his dream (vv. 1-32). For two full years Joseph remained in prison, forgotten by the butler. Pharaoh's dream brought to Joseph a great opportunity. The failure of the wise men of Egypt to interpret the dream caused the chief butler to remember what Joseph had done for him. Joseph was brought out of prison and made known to Pharaoh that it meant seven years of plenty followed by seven years of famine.

2. Advising Pharaoh (vv. 33-36). He suggested to him that part of the produce be stored during the years of plenty. The plan appealed to Pharaoh, and he invested Joseph with authority to execute it.

3. Preparing for famine (vv. 37-52). During the seven years the earth brought forth plentifully. Clothed with royal authority, Joseph went over all the country and gathered and stored the food in all the cities.

4. Selling food to the needy (vv. 53-57).

a. At last the years of fruitfulness ended and then began famine in all the lands (v. 53).

b. Bread was to be found in Egypt only (v. 54). This was the result of Joseph's foresight and preparation.

c. Distribution in the hands of Joseph (vv. 55-57). He opened the storehouses and sold food unto the Egyptians and foreigners.

Sure Remedy

There is no surer remedy for desponding weakness than, when we have done our own parts, to commit all cheerfully, for the rest, to the good pleasure of heaven. — Sir Roger L'Estrange.

Our Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. are doing nicely. We had a good number out Sunday and Sunday night, although we hope to have a larger crowd present next Sunday. Our B. Y. P. U. Social proved to be a wonderful success, at the home of our pastor, Rev. M. Lockhart. We had very good behavior, and a table spread, which contained 13 cakes and 7 pies, which everybody enjoyed. We are hoping to have another in the near future, and we thank our young people for their good behavior.

Don't forget our preaching days, second and fourth Sundays, and B. Y. P. U. every Sunday. Everybody come.

H. S. Firestone, Jr., to Referee $50,000 Motor Speedway Race

Young Manufacturer Selected to Preside Over Decoration Day Contest at Indianapolis

HARVEY S. FIRESTONE, Jr., vice-president of The Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, has accepted the invitation of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway to act as official referee of the 500-mile automobile championship to be held there Decoration Day, May 30.

The invitation to Mr. Firestone was sent by Theodore E. Myers, vice-president and general manager of the speedway. The post is one which has been held in other years by some of the leading men of the business world, including Henry Ford, Harvey S. Firestone, Sr., Charles M. Schwab, Arthur Brisbane, Vincent Bendix, Charles F. Kettering and W. S. Knudsen.

As official referee of the race, Mr. Firestone will be called upon to administer the rules in connection with its running. In the heat of a supreme struggle of this character, with human judgment working constantly in fractions of seconds and nerves pitched to their highest tension, it is inevitable that the regulations governing the race are always in jeopardy of infringement, even though involuntary. In order to familiarize himself with the duties, Mr. Firestone will go to Indianapolis a day or two previous to the race.

Additional interest is given to Mr. Firestone's appointment through the fact that the race has been won for the last twelve years on tires manufactured by his company. In 1925 the Firestones were responsible for the introduction of a new principle in automobile racing at Indianapolis. Two years previous to that their engineers had pioneered and developed the original balloon tire. Extensive tests had convinced their staff of experts that these balloons could be used with greater safety and at higher speeds than the old high pressure tires had permitted. A few trial spins by some of the leading drivers bore out their prophecy. Peter De Paolo, driving a car equipped with the new balloons, won the race that year at an average speed of 101.13 miles per hour, which still stands as the record.

East View News

A very large crowd attended the fifth Sunday rally here and we spent a joyful day. Prof O. O. Mamsley and about 25 others of Haleyville, came and furnished the music and singing. They sang several quartets and duets. Everybody seemed to enjoy the singing. The speakers on the program were Miss Lillian McKee, Rev. E. W. Butler, Rev. J. E. Each, Miss Frances Wilson, Rev. A. C. Nelson and Miss Lula Courtney.

In the closing of the day's program, Rev. Nation spoke about the progress the church had made during the last six years. There were 4 song books belonging to the Haleyville choir that were misplaced some way. It would be appreciated if the parties that has them will return them to the pastor of this church.

Our Sunday school is still growing. We received five new ones to our roll Sunday. This makes a total of 96 on roll. But who will get the old members to attend more regularly.

Mrs. A. C. Nelson returned home from the hospital last week. She is reported to be improving.

Mr. Julius Vinson of Montgomery was a visitor here Sunday.

Mrs. Strength of near Thorsby, has been spending some time visiting relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Prickett were the week end guests of the latter's mother, Mrs. Sallie Strength.

Mr. Otis Coggins was reported to be on the sick list Monday.

Mrs. Ester Moore was the guest of her mother, Mrs. Mamie Griffin on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Loser were the all day guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Price Sunday.

Mr. Joseph Smith was the week end guest of Mr. Kermit Gray.

ENDORSES C. D. DUKE

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space to give a few facts regarding Mr. C. D. Duke, candidate for Commissioner from the Fourth District, as I know him.

I have known Mr. Duke for 15 years, and I have always known him to be a straight and honest man in every respect. I have lived about two and a half miles from him ever since I have been in this county, and I think I know him pretty well; I think I know, also, just about how highly he is esteemed in his community. He is known as an honest and straightforward man; not two faced, talking good to one's face and throwing mud at his back.

I do not believe church matters should enter politics, but you can tell pretty well what a man is by his church affiliations and activities. Mr. Duke is one of the best church and Sunday School workers I can think of anywhere. He is always found ready and willing to take part and bear his burden in everything.

I do not believe Mr. Duke has promised any jobs; he says he has not, and I know him as a man of his word. Also, I think our part of the district is due a commissioner, as it has not had one from out this way in several years. Mr. Duke can not be beat for a commissioner; he will treat all alike.

Thanking the voters in advance for their serious consideration for the place he seeks, and urging all to come out and vote on June 14, I remain, Yours very truly,—S. V. Miller.

GROVER BICE WRITES TO COMMISSIONERS COURT

Editor Union-Banner:

Kindly print a letter which is a copy I have sent to the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, requesting a re-apprasial of every piece of property in Chilton County. I realize this is too late for 1932, but can be completed in advance of the next assessment period.

Mr. Editor will the press and every organization in this county and all tax payers help me impress on the Commissioners Court of Chilton County that to revaluate all property in Chilton County has been made necessary by the depression to bring about tax re-adjustments?

The Honorable Commissioners Court of Chilton County, Clanton, Alabama.

Gentlemen:

As the depression has brought about a condition which affects every tax payer of Chilton County, I feel that it will be just and fair to the tax payers of Chilton County for the Commissioners Court to order revaluation of every piece of property in Chilton County.

Gentlemen, it is an undisputed fact that property is not worth as much now as it was a few years back, and I think it a duty to fellow man and your neighbor who voted for you and placed you in office to lower his taxes when the value of property has been reduced over the whole county. I therefore request that at an early date that the Commissioners Court appoint an appraisal board to re-valuate every piece of property in Chilton County, as re-appraisal is absolutely for tax re-adjustment to all. As a citizen and a tax payer of Chilton County, I make this request.

Yours very truly,
GROVER BICE.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert)

Whether rightfully or wrongfully, it is an undisputed fact that the Congress of the United States is being blamed at this time for having a large part in the continuance of the depression. People from all parts of the country who come to Washington say that in their community the people are hoping for an early adjournment of Congress in the belief that this alone will have a leaders in industry, so they say, are afraid to go ahead with any constructive programs until they are sure that congress is going to balance the budget, and until they see just what kind of tax bill is going to come out of the national legislative body.

The fact that the latest dip in the stock market started about the time that the house of representatives defeated the sales tax proposal and then threw its leadership overboard, has strengthed the convictions of a great many people that the uncertainty in Congress is helping to extend the depression at the present low stratum of business. Most of the senators and congressmen themselves, when one talks to them privately, will admit that they are anxious to get through and go home to prepare for the national campaign this fall. Nearly everyone of them that one meets is sincerely hoping that congress can get through with its legislative program within a reasonably short time and adjourn. It would seem that when this sentiment is no nearly universal in the country and around the capitol itself, that a legislative program fixing taxes and balancing the budget would be put through in short order. But enacting legislation is a long and tedious process at best, and at a time like the present, when neither party has a firm hold on the throttle, it is very difficult to maintain leadership.

Most of us year in and year out repeat the old phase that ours is a government by parties, and that party organization should be maintained. But it takes a condition like the present one in congress to emphasize the importance and truth of this old assertion. When the Democrats or the Republicans have a clean-cut majority in both houses of congress, we get legislation of the kind outlined in the party platforms and on which the people have passed in the preceding election. But when the balance of power is almost even, so that decisions may rest with a little group of independents in one house or the other, there is apt to be a legislative confusion bordering on chaos. The present situation around the capitol at Washington gives abundant proof of the truth of this assertion.

Just how much the present muddled situation in congress is to blame for the continuance of the acute stage of the depression nobody, of course, can tell. But it is undobtedly desirable, even essential, that we get a reasonably satisfactory tax law and a sane balancing of the budget in the near future, followed by an adjournment of congress. Nothing would so relieve the uncertainty in the business world as this. That the country realizes it is evidenced by the almost universal opinion everywhere that congress ought to finish its program and adjourn. President Hoover undoubtedly is of this opinion and so are the leaders of both parties in congress. Backed up, as they are, by the great majority of the people in all parts of the union it would seem that the log jam would break sooner or later. And the sooner the better, in the opinion of 98 per cent of the people of the United States.

MR. JACKSON JUMPS OUT OF THE FRYING PAN, INTO THE FIRE

No doubt the Republican voters will be bowed down with genuine (?) sorrow this week after they have read the papers and found that Mr. A. A. Jackson has done that which we have with fear and trembling expected for many months. He has, so to speak, cussed out the Republican administration and boldly proclaimed that he has plunged head over heels into the abysmal depths of the Democratic party. While this bold, broad and daring proclamation from the sage of Lomax will surely cause the pillars of the Republican party to totter and crumble, we can but enviously contemplate the rejoicing his action will bring to the angelic hosts of Democracy all the way from Lomax to the exalted shrine of Al Smith in Harlem.

As we recall the attitude of Mr. Jackson as he has expressed it from time to time since he ran for Representative on the Republican ticket, we think of a story we used to hear about a man who was bent over in a peculiar fashion.

The man was maimed by some physical ailment so that he was compelled to walk with his body bent forward forming a right angle at his waist. One time he went to Birmingham and was walking along one of the busy streets. A pedestrian who passed by him several times became amused at his peculiar bent-over position. Finally, he stopped, touched the odd-looking man on the shoulder, and said, "Brother, if you are ever going to jump, why in the world don't you jump?"

Mr. Jackson has figuratively jumped out of the frying pan into the fire. He has done what other ill-advised and misinformed voters will do this year if they are not careful of the political propaganda that will be handed out to catch the gullible and unsuspecting suckers who do not or will not or can not think through political processes and economical engimas.

Caught in the net of Democratic deception is the best way we can express the plight of men like Mr. Jackson. The Democrats make men like him believe the whole trouble with our economic situation should be blamed on the inefficiency of the Republican administration. And all the time while they are fabricating their story to fool people, the Democratic leaders in the national councils of the party are congratulating each other because it did not fall to the lot of the Democrats to have responsibility for the affairs of this nation during these times of economic upheaval throughout the world.

The point Mr. Jackson insists upon the voters getting straight is that the present Republican administration does not deserve the support of the country because the money kings have proven greater than the administration. We wonder where Mr. Jackson got his assurance that it would be any difference if the Democrats were in charge of our national administration.

The powers that have brought the present economic conditions (in not only this country, but throughout the world) are powers that can not be controled by any political administration at Washington.

In the confusion of the world-wide depression, and while the Republican administration has been straining every nerve and muscle to combat it, the million-dollar Democratic campaign of destructive propaganda aimed at the president, has swept some people off their feet. Mr. Jackson is a sample of what has happened.

During the past two years, by misleading publicity and personal propaganda, they have made every effort known to Democrats, to lead the people into believing the Republican party responsible for the world-wide depression, and to lay in the lap of President Hoover all the troubles of this country and the world.

The insincerity of the Democratic fabrication is so obvious and exposed that it is discernible to any who want to be fair. They will not be able to fool any but a few here and there who want to be fooled.

Bitter denunciation of the President and the administration, but not a word of constructive suggestion is all that comes from the Democrats. That is the tune of Mr. Jackson. He has learned from them his rote of denunciation, a lot of which he quotes in his "farewell address." But he stops short when it comes to telling how the Democrats have proven to him their ability to do better for the country than Hoover and the Republicans have done.

The only hope of the Democrats is in the depression, and they admit it. Democracy added to depression will surely bring disaster, and we believe the country knows it.

Will the Republican party and the people of this country permit the calamity of a Democratic administration to be added to the distress of the world-wide depression, simply because it takes courage and energy and hard work to prevent it? We do not believe it.

In saying good-by to Mr. Jackson as a member of the Republican party of Chilton County, we would suggest for him this slogan: "If you want a bigger and better depression, vote the Democratic ticket."

MORAL ECHOES

(By D. W. Haskew)

A citizen in one of the Central Alabama towns was visiting a friend in a distant city. On Sunday she went to church with her friend, and was charmed at the friendliness of the people with whom she worshipped. She resolved that on returning to her home church she would speak to strangers and give them a glad hand and a warm welcome. The first Sunday after she returned she went into her church glowing with the spirit of friendliness that she had met in the church in the far away city. She seated herself in the audience and observing that she was sitting by one whom she did not know, she touched her hand saying, "My friend I have not met you, but I want to tell you how glad we are to have you worship with us today." The lady spoken to never lifted her eyes from her prayer book, but snapped back, "That is nothing to your credit my lady, for I have been living in your town twenty years." That reply produced instantaneous freezing. Often have we been thrilled with zeal and good intentions to have a bucket of cold water dashed over us. When people want to be hateful and ugly they can pull it off to perfection. But it is not worth it.

I was pastor in a thriving little city for four years. I had a member in my church who had complained much because the preachers would not come to see her. I resolved that I would do what other preachers had failed to do. I visited this home four times each year for four years and left fifteen cards. I knew that the lady was at home some of the times, but she never answered the bell. On my sixteenth call a servant came to the door and I asked that she tell Mrs. Closed Door that Brother Haskew was at the door. The servant was gone about one minute and she came back with this query, "Mrs. Closed Door wants to know what you want." I lost my speech for the present, but after turning my hat a hundred rounds on the end of my thumb I had presence of judgement sufficient to hand her the sixteenth card. Then some folks wonder why a pastor never calls. When folks want to be hateful and ugly they can pull it off to perfection. But it is not worth it.

In South Alabama there was a family of cultured people. They thought themselves to be of the elite, the select and they put themselves up as the spokesmen of the community. This family became offended at the message that their pastor delivered on Sunday. He spoke against drinking parties and dance halls and warned his people against the snares of the wicked. Every other family in the little village were delighted with their pastor, but this self chosen elite decided that this pastor must go. He nosed about and was successful in stirring up much strife. The man of God was crushed, the community was filled with shame and regret and all because one man who hated and who had power, decided that he would rule or ruin. When folks want to be hateful and ugly they can pull it off to perfection. But it is not worth it.

I attended the court trial of a black fiend who had cut the throat of a young Presbyterian preacher because he shot his dog while prowling around in his back yard. Feeling was at the highest tension and a lynching was feared. Every person entering the court room, white or black, was examined and if he carried knife or gun it was taken away from him. On the person of one negro the sheriff found one gun and six razors. This disarming of dangerous weapons was a precaution against possible danger. In many of the public dance halls in Chicago no man is permitted the priviledges of the floor until he is first examined by the authorities to see if he carries a kip flask. When one is found the man must give up his flask or be refused the privileges of the floor. Whiskey is as dangerous to society as a negro is dangerous to the jublic when he is loaded down with guns and razors. I had rather risk a negro at the steering wheel of a car with his pockets full of pistols than to risk him with his stomach full of rum. A concealed flask of whiskey in the hip pocket is evidence of a law breaker and any man who goes thus armed to kill should be dealt with as such. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

My brother had a bad goat. He would chew up our clothes, he would butt you in the back, he would eat up our flowers and he would keep us up at night by his bumping and plundering. One day my father sent that bad goat away where all bad goats should stay. Brother missed his goat and set up a yell for his return. He was told that his goat was a nuisance and that he would never come back. That did not satisfy my brother, he wanted his goat. That is the way with a lot of folks on the whiskey question. Their bad goat was too bad to stay in decent society, and so Uncle Sam sent him where all bad goats should stay. The world is now full of these big brothers of ours who are bawling like fury for the return of their goat. They care not how much he butts or hurts, they want their bad goat. Suppose that we bring him back, he is not fit to stay. He smiles bad and acts worse. Just as well be positive with those goat lovers and tell them that their goat shall not return.

The Junior Baseball League

Another little thing which is destined to grow into a great thing in the next few years is the Junior Baseball League, sponsored by the American Legion Post here. This movement for the good of boys in their teens began only a few years ago, but has grown so rapidly that now it is nation-wide in scope. American Legion Posts all the way from suave New York to sun-baked Mud Corners are getting behind the move—getting boys within the age limit, under 17 years of age, to come out and form teams to compete with other communities. This movement has many good points. It gives boys in cities something to do besides stand around on the streets, and gives farm boys a chance at much more amusement than has been theirs in the past. The boys are provided with real play-grounds, instead of having to play on someone's back alley or a pasture. The teams are under competent instructors instead of having to learn all they can from each other. And, maybe, ever so often a real baseball player with the stuff in him from which big league timber is made, will be discovered. Heads of the major leagues are all interested in the movement; they are just as anxious to discover real baseball talent as boys are to possess it. Join hands with the local American Legion and let's have a good team here. It has been some time since we had any baseball to speak of around here. For one, I like to see a good baseball game as well as the next one, and I am sure there are others who feel the same way. Let's get behind the movement—but not too far behind it.

How Cheaply Do You Work?

Every once in a while I hear some fellow griping about how cheaply he has to work, just as if he was the only person in this whole wide world bothered with such troubles. About nine-tenths of the time, these gripers are a lot better off than the person to whom they are relating their woes. Just read the following, let your think tank operate a little, and then see if you can decide you are in better shape than most folks. In a local grocery store last week, one item I noticed on sale was salt— packages of 1½ pounds net for two cents each. It just happened so that I had seen the refinery where that particular brand was packed, so I was more than usually interested. Just think—somebody had a job of gathering the raw salt, another carried it to the refinery, people employed i nthis plant had the job of refining and boxing it, the transportation company hauled it all around the Lord only knows where, the wholesaler handled it, the retailer sold it; too, there was the item of boxes in which the salt was packed which had to be considered—somebody had to make them. After all these different people had handled this salt, I bought it for two cents for a pound and a half. Somebody didn't get much for his work in that deal. Come to think of it—don't you believe we can much better afford to grow and pick cotton for a nickel a pound or strawberries at a jitney a quart than to grabble salt at that rate? Let's don't wail so much—we're well off and don't know it.

The Depression Model Still

Believe it or not, hard times have been knocking at somebody's door, and hit him right where he lived, too. Somebody found that he could manage about a little bread and meat, and a new pair of pants every once in a while, but then there was the business of getting his hands on his early morning "eye opener"—there was nothing left with which to purchase that. But he just had to have that, too. So he sat himself to the task of providing it. He took a kettle, stuck a cob in the spout, soldered a copper tube in the top of the lid, coiled the tube 'round and 'round in a gallon syrup bucket, jabbed a hole through the side of the bucket just above the bottom, and—there you are! As neat a little liquor still as you ever set your peepers on. True, it was a little one, and wouldn't make much at a "run", but, by now, most of us have become accustomed to getting our supplies in small batches. It was a nifty little outfit—all copper, and everything.

Who's Who—Cohen E. Stapp

Cohen Elbert Stapp was born five miles south of Carrollton, Pickens County, Ala., September 22, 1896, the son of J. M., and Floried Stapp. He received his elementary education in the rural school near his home, and finished Pickens County High School, at Reform, in 1915. He entered Alabama Polytechnic Institute, at Auburn, the following fall, taking his B. S. degree in Agriculture there in 1919. He was supervisor of a chain of 15 farms for A. E. Bell, of Pickens County, until November, 1919, when he took up County Agency work in Lamar county, holding that position until June 1923. He married Miss Lillie Seay, of Fernbank, Lamar County, April 11, 1920. In May, 1918, he was called into army service and sent to Fort Sheridan, Ill., where he remained until September, 1918; at this time he was commissioned 2nd Lieutenant and sent to Austin, Texas, where he remained until discharged from the service. Leaving County Agent work in Lamar County in 1923, he took up this work in Etowah county, holding this position until November, 1926, when on account of the ill health of his father, he returned to his home to take charge of his father's farm. In August, 1927, he was called to take charge of County Agency work in Chilton County, and has been with us since that date. Since coming to Chilton County, Mr. Stapp has built for himself an enviable reputation, as has his wife, who has been employed in welfare work here for some time. Mr. Stapp's services have been of inestimable value to the farmers of the county. Mr. and Mrs. Stapp are considered two of Chilton County's finest people—unselfish, self-sacrificing, and real assets of the community in which they live and serve. Mr. Stapp is a Mason, and a member of the local Kiwanis Club; he is Chairman of the Boy Scout Council for the Chilton County Area. Recently, he was made chairman of local Red Cross work, in Chilton, and Bibb Counties. His untiring efforts in relief work in the storm area made many warm friends for him. In a letter to Mr. L. N. Duncan, director of extension service, at Auburn, Mr. Maurice R. Reddy, assistant national director, disaster relief, of the American Red Cross, praised Mr. Stapp and his service most highly. The people of our county have come to consider Mr. Stapp and his work as true measures of value. Next week's Who's Who subject will be Mr. J. Renfroe Mullins, merchant, of Clanton.

Not Ripe Yet

While a few miguided Democrats are ripping up the woods and yelling for a Democratic victory in the forthcoming National election, the big shots of that August body are going about their business of making sure that nothing of the kind happens. They feel that the Democratic apple is not ripe yet—that is, they feel that the period of depression is not yet close enough to the end of the rope for the Democrats to take over the reins of government, even if they could. These real heads of the Democratic party are well aware of the fact that no matter whose hands the government is in at the present time and in the immediate future, prosperity will return only in its own good time, and cannot be rushed. So, inasmuch as there is even now a tendency to lay the tight times to the credit of the Republicans, the smart Democrats are seeing to it that their party shall not risk complete annihilation by taking over control of affairs during such a crisis; they are seeing to it that all strong contenders for leadership are blocked, one against the other, which will insure a Republican victory. By thus blocking these strong contenders for Democratic leadership, giving assurance of a compromise candidate who has not a chance to win, their party will have four more years in which to get their house in order, and give the depression four more years to run its race, before they even try to take over government control. Pretty smart idea, at that.

He's Gone and Done It.

Oh me! Oh my! Woe is us! "Disgustus" has gone and done it, at last; left the poor old Republican party flat on its back. That makes it just too bad for us that he has seen fit to withdraw his support from us, and place it with the Democrats, as if they didn't have enough liabilities already. You know "Disgustus" tried, as a Republican, to be elected to represent Chilton County in the State Legislature a little while ago, but the Republicans just couldn't focus him, and now "Disgustus" says, like the fox, "Oh well, I'll bet those grapes were sour, any way". But space will not permit of real lamentation for his recent decision—we'll leave that over for the nest week. One thing I must say, though—NEWS is something which comes unexpected. In that case this is not news—we have expected it all along. Coming events cast their shadows before them, you know.—Man in the Moon.

SENSE WILL RETURN

Congressmen and senators will continue to make political speeches, but should not be taken too seriously. Just now Washington is suffering from what may be called mob physchology, but individually our representatives in house and senate are not such fools as they occasionally make themselves appear.

It is only a question of time before the common sense will prevail.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

It costs the country $2,490 for every hour that the senate is in session, which indicates that Hooey Long may turn out to be the most expensive luxury the country has had in a long time.

The Man on the Corner

Some Sights He Saw—
and Some He Saw Not.

Found a Bean Picker

I have found a picker for the beans that are going to grow on the telephone wires I told you about last week. The find was made quite unexpectedly. I went into a print shop the other day. It was a big building with steel girders, rafters and guy-wires overhead. Up among the stringers I saw a funny looking object swinging back and forth and jumping from post to post. "What is that up there?" I asked. "That is Bozo," said the foreman. "Who is Bozo, your pet monkey?" Came the reply, "No, he is our printer's devil from Georgia; but he looks so much like a monkey he has to get up there and jump around a while every morning to start off the day's work." That's my bean picker, I thought, quick as a flash. I will tell Mack Broadhead where to find him when the beans are ready to pick.

Good Crowd At School Meeting

Keller and Harman, our distinguished educational leaders, were greeted by a good crowd last Saturday afternoon. The people showed intense interest in the school subject which these gentlemen were discussing. At the close of his address, Superintendent Harman recommended that school officials do not make any plans for opening schools this fall until they know they are sure to get their money from the State, and just when they will get it, and how much. It is rather difficult to state how the people were impressed by the speakers. There are so many complications in our school business that it is hard for the average man to see through.

Not Necessary, I Thought

Hill Foshee came along Monday and extended me an invitation to come over into the Democratic party and help them out with their elections this year. I assured him that would not be necessary. Since Mr. Jackson has jumped the fence and gone to the Democrtic party that ought to be sufficient to make victory certain for the Democrats this fall.

Mrs. Yeager Visitor Here

Mrs. Yeager, owner of the Yeager Studio at Montevallo, was a visitor to Clanton Monday afternoon. "What class of pictures does she make?" I was asked by a man after she had gone. Mrs. Yeager's pictures remind me of the story about the little school boy who worked out a difficult problem in arithmetic, getting the correct answer, and receiving the approval of his teacher that his solution was "pretty good." "Purty good, h—l," he said, "its perfect." If you don't believe her pictures are perfect, stop and look at the samples in Upchurch's window.

Six Months of "Martial" Happiness

What strange things a typesetter can make you say sometimes. Last week our "chief operator" set a line that told about six months of martial happiness enjoyed by a couple that got married. According to some authorities it may not be so bad wrong after all to call it martial happiness. Martial means something about war. You know what Sherman said war is. I have heard of some martial ventures that turned out to be more or less belligerent. I do not know whether it is vindication or incrimination of the typesetter for me to say that he is not married.

Boys Will Be Boys

The other night I went to the picture show. A little boy was sitting in front of the building wishing he could get in. I bought him a ticket. As I was writing this column the same boy eased up by my side and asked me to lend him a nickel. When I asked him what he wanted with it, he did not know. Some months ago a little negro boy wanted to borrow ninety cents. When I asked him what he wanted with ninety cents, he said I've got a dime and I want ninety cents to go with it to make out my dollar. Who could invent such weighty business schemes better than an aimless idle boy?

It It is our opinion that the Pulitzer prize this year ought to go to the man who doesn't have a program for ending depression.

Somehow or other those attacks of speaker Garner on President Hoover sound more lige cough drops than verbal bombshells.

Its a good bet that when the reparations conference meets at Lausanne in June they will fix it all up by asking Uncle Sam to do the paying.

Now the scientists say that before long we will be able to get our electric power from the wind. When this time comes maybe congress can be made to pay for itself.

Just think what a boon it would be to the cotton trade if the girls should all take to wearing old fashioned petticoats again.

In some Nebraska counties a bounty of sixty cents a dozen is paid for crow's eggs while the farmer only gets eight cents a dozen for hen's eggs. This ought to fire every little chicken with the ambition to grow up to be a crow.

ALABAMA'S GREATEST TORNADO

It was March the twenty-first, just about the close of day,
When the people of Chilton saw the tornado coming their way.
Some were at the supper table eating their evening meal.
They never realized the storm coming across the field.
Some looked and said, "Oh, Lord, this is more than we can stand,"
As they saw the mighty storm sweeping across the land.
There came a mighty roar; there came a mighty thunder,
The people's little homes were left a mass of plunder.
Some were left rejoicing; some were shouting and crying,
While among the debris many souls were dying.
The good doctors took charge of the wounded and dead,
And the kind people everywhere said, "the living had to be clothed, sheltered and fed.
When this was over, my house was demolished; my cow was carried off in the air.
But in my arms was my precious family as if there had been no storm there.
Remember, dear people, such of this would not have been,
If only we could keep our hearts clean and pure without the strain of sin.

BOY SCOUTS IN ANNUAL CAMP

John Ezell of Clanton Will Have Part In Camp Activities

Opelika, Ala., June 1.—Every precaution for the health and safety of attending Boy Scouts will be exercised by those in charge at Camp Spring Villa, June 4 to 25. As heretofore, the Lee County Health Unit and the County Medical Association will cooperate with Dr. Julian Palmer of Opelika, camp health and safety chairman, to give the Scouts the best medical service during their stay at Spring Villa.

Dr. A. H. Graham has made arrangements whereby a definite check may be made on the weights of the campers when they come in and leave camp.

Dr. Palmer has arranged for physical visit to each camp to give any necessary medical service to all campers. He will also inspect the sanitary conditions of the camp.

Every safety precaution, both at the swimming pool and at the marksmanship range, will be taken. Eagle Scout, Franklin Ward, who has charge of the swimming and life saving, has made a large Buddy Check board to be used by all those who use the pool. By this system each scout keeps in touch with one other scout, his "buddy" throughout the swimming period.

The fact that the Scouts will have hot shower baths through the cooperation of Dr. B. F. Thomas and the Alabama Natural Gas Company is another evidence of the activity of the health and safety chairman and his committee.

First aid supplies will be on hand and the old axiom of "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" will be followed.

Again this year, through the cooperation of the city and the local telephone company, the camp telephone will be placed in the Headquarters Building. In case of an emergency, doctors may be called immediately.

An ample supply of snake serium will be kept on ice for instant use in case and Scouts are bitten.

NOW ORGANIZING ADULT SCHOOLS

Three White and Seven Negro Schools Have Already Been Located

Prof. H. A. Harris, director of the Adult School program for Chilton County, reports that plans are rapidly developing for the conduct of ten schools for whites and ten schools for negroes this summer. Indications now are that the plans will be completed and the schools ready to open about the 11th or 18th of July.

According to Prof. Harris, schools for white people have already been definitely located at Cross Roads, near Cooper, Pilgrim Rest, and Free Springs. These have sent in the required list of pupils.

Other white schools in prospect are at Mullins, Mt. Pisgah, Oak Grove, County Line, Mineral Springs, Pate's Chapel and Baker. These communities are working on their plans. A community, in order to get one of the schools, must give assurance that at least 15 pupils will attend regularly the sessions of the school. Mr. Harris urges all communities that want a school to get busy and meet the requirements, as the number of schools will be strictly within the limit of ten for whites and ten for colored.

The colored schools already assured are at Johannah, Verbena, Thorsby, Lomax, Big Springs, Clanton, County Training School. All of these have filled the required list of pupils and meet all requirements. Others in prospect are at Chilton Belle, New Convert, Stanton, Jemison. There are more applications for negro schols than can be filled.

MRS. ANNIE DYKES DIED

At 5:00 o'clock p.m., May 25th, 1932, the death angel visited the home of W. D. Dykes, of Verbena and bore away the sweet and loving spirit of his mother, Mrs. Annie Dykes, wife of Rev. J. M. Dykes, who passed to his reward some 18 years ago.

Mrs. Dykes at the time of her death was 63 years of age, but was until a few minutes of her death apparently well and healthy. Death came almost without warning.

Mrs. Dykes possessed in a very marked degree the attributes of the old fashioned mother. She was a Christian lady, who met the world with a smile, and always bearing her burdens and dissapointments with good grace and unusual patience and a ready smile; always trusting in Him who is able to support.

Mrs. Dykes was twice left a widow, and therefore was compelled to fight a great part of life's battles alone but she never murmored nor complained, but always in that simple Christ like manner, did what her hands found to do, and trusted God.

She was a mother of seven children. Two by a former marriage and five by the latter, all of whom survive her going. They are: Mrs. Mary Mensleve of Tuscaloosa; J. E. Wyatt of Houston, Texas; W. D. Dykes of Verbena, Rev. B. F. Dykes, of Avoca, Indiana, Mrs. M. M. Gray of Sylacauga, S. C. Dykes of Birmingham, and Mrs. T. E. Gray of Verbena.

To these children and her friends I would say weep not, for we believe she is, as it were in the arms of Jesus, who will wipe all tears away and where there will be no more sorrow and no more pain, but emulate her life and in just a short while you too will cross over and enjoy the great bliss with her throughout the eternal ages. One who loved her.—J. Z. Mims.

BURIAL FIRM FAILS TO WIN MANDAMUS SUIT

Judge Jones Upholds Greer's Contention For Regulating Insurance Society

Upholding demurrers by State Superintendent of Insurance Charles C. Greer, to the amended petition of the Brown Funeral Homes and Insurance Company, of Birmingham, seeking a writ of mandamus to require the State Bureau of Insurance to issue the company a license, Judge Walter B. Jones of the Montgomery Circuit Court, in a decree issued yesterday, sustains Superintendent Greer's contention in the matter of the premimum rate and reserve on the type of policy of burial insurance proposed to be issued by the company.

In his decree, Judge Jones points out that the petitioner is a mutual aid company which does a burial insurance business, and rules that in the conduct of such business, it is controlled and governed by the laws of Alabama which regulate companies engaged in the life insurance business, "where the same does not conflict with the State mutual aid laws, nor with the act approved July 2, 1931."

It is then set out the certificate the company issues, states its purpose is to furnish a casket of the value of $250, adding that it can furnish a casket of that value, and also the other services called for and contracted for in the certificate, at a cost to the company of only $75, also that the reserve which it is required to maintain should be calculated on the basis of $75 and not upon the basis of $250.

As to this contention, Judge Jones holds Superintendent Greer very properly ruled the company's reserve should be based on the sum of $250, the face of the certificate. Citing it appears the company issues policies to persons "of all ages between 18 and 100 years," for the same premium rate, and that the contention of Mr. Greer is that this practice is improper and constitutes an unlawful discrimination, Judge Jones states that apparently the recent decision of the Alabama Supreme Court in the case of Greer vs. the Aetna Life Insurance Company, leads to the conclusion that the premimum need not be graduated according to age or expectancy of life, "provided the flat rate charged is actuarily sound," that is, the aggregate of premimums to be collected will be adequate and amply sufficient to cover the risk assumed by the burial or insurance company.

He adds, however, that while in the Aetna case, that proviso appeared without dispute, "it is not clear in the case now before the court that petitioner can safely continue to operate on the basis of the flat rate charged by it." He states also in this connection: "While the ground of refusal taken by the respondent insurance commissioner on this point, that is, that there was an unlawful discrimination in the matter of the premimum rate, seems to be answered against him" in the Aetna case, "still this court would not grant a petition for mandamus unless it appeared that the aggregate of the premimums to be collected would be adequate and ample to protect against the risks assumed." — Montgomery Advertiser, June 5, 1932.

STATE SERVICE COMMISSIONER IS COMING TO CLANTON SOON

LEGION CONDEMNS BONUS MARCHERS

Resolution Passed By Chilton County Post No. 6 Monday Night

Action by Chilton County Post of the American Legion in its monthly meeting Monday night indicates that the Legion is bitterly opposed to the rackets that have been raised by unemployed ex-service men marching to Washington and insisting upon the payment of the soldiers bonus.

The local post Monday night drafted the following resolution dealing with the subject, and requested its publication:

In view of the fact that the public attention has been recently drawn to the action of a number of ex-service men who have gathered themselves together and in an unorganized manner going to Washington presumably to demand of the government the immediate payment of the soldier's bonus, the Chilton County Post of the American Legion believes that such action on the part of ex-service men at this time is unwise, unsound and un-American. The American Legion does not approve of nor sponsor such action, and we feel that it is in justice to the American Legion to let the public know that the Legion is not in any way connected with the movement of this group of men who are perhaps not affiliated with any officially organized group of World War veterans.

Chilton County Post of the American Legion, according to the Preamble of our Constitution, hereby reaffirms our allegiance to the constitution of the United States, and declare ourselves to maintain law and order in everything and to perpetuate one hundred per cent Americanism.

We, of course, would welcome the payment of the Government's obligation to ex-service men, but we do not approve of the methods of certain unorganized groups in attempting to demand certain things of the government in the manner that has been recently attempted. We believe our government seriously recognizes its obligation to ex-service men, and will fully discharge those obligations as soon as is reasonable and consistent with the general interest of the people of our country.

PREACHED AT FAYETTEVILLE

Last Saturday Rev. J. Robert Bean went up to Fayetteville in Talladega County, where he visited his daughter, Mrs. Beulah L. Robinson, on Route 1 from Fayetteville. Saturday night Rev. Bean preached at the home of Mr. Giddins near the home of his daughter. Sunday at 11 o'clock and Sunday night at 8 o'clock he preached at the Fayetteville Baptist church. There were good crowds present at each service. Sunday night, after the word had gotten broadcast that there would be preaching, there were folks present from two counties other than Talledega—Coosa and Shelby. The audience was both large and appreciative.

Rev. Bean reports that he enjoyed the visit immensely and was very glad to make the acquaintance of the many good people in that community.

The Chilton County School Page

We want to call the special attention of our readers this week to the Chilton County School page which appears in this paper.

From now on this page will be a regular feature appearing in the paper one issue each month.

Briefly stated, it is the purpose of those who compile the matter on the school page, to help the people of the county to become better acquainted with the facts about our schools.

From time to time there will be articles and stories on this page dealing with different phases of our schools. The articles treated will be very important in connection with our schools. The articles are written by people who know their subjects, and who are intimately connected with the schools. Every article will bear the name of the writer.

We believe it is very important for our people to have a better understanding of the school situation. We need to study our schools more in order that we may know more, about the very great and important task that confronts us in the education and training of our children.

Owners of Available Farm Lands Are Asked to Furnish Information

Land In Alabama Desired To Be Used In Program Whereby Unemployed Industrial Workers May Produce Their Own Necessities

Editor Union-Banner:

Your publication of this request for information from land owners is requested.

In view of the prospect of indefinite continuation of general employment, we are undertaking to assemble data for a program of relief to be based on self-sustaining farm units. As a first step it is essential that we ascertain whether privately owned lands are immediately available on terms such as stated below, assuming the necessary cooperation by state and relief agencies. Relief agencies in other states have requested us to make the inquiry as comprehensive as practicable, in order to determine whether the program can be extended to aid industrial unemployment in their area.

Owners of available lands are urgently requested to communicate the fact immediately to the secretary, with a view to the beginning of trial units without delay. The following conditions are proposed:

(1) The legislature will be requested to exempt lands formally subjected to the plan from taxation for a reasonable period. If this shall not prove feasible, the plan will assume the taxes.

(2) Units of 10, 20 or 40 acres or more will be allotted a family group, according to size and capacity, but continuous acreages of large area are desired, although suitable small tracts or individual farm units would be wholly acceptable.

(3) An option will be granted each family to purchase the unit, so long as a stipulated standard of work is complied with. The option will run for a liberal period. Meanwhile, the family will have the right to occupy the unit rent free, assuming compliance with proper conditions.

(4) The option prices will be as agreed between the owner and the relief committee. The owner should state this price, but it is hoped that much of it can be made available without charge, or for a low price, on condition of its development under the program.

(5) The committee is attempting to arrange for the minmum necessary housing and equipment and aid until self-sustaining basis is reached.

Land owners willing to cooperate in this movement are urged to supply us with immediate descriptions of the land, giving a plat, if available showing location on or available to railways and highways; also the following:

(a) Existing or available water supply.

(b) Timber, if any, for fire wood.

(c) Whether land is well drained.

(d) Whether now or heretofore cultivated.

(e) Whether any habitable buildings are on the land. If so, describe same.

(f) Nature of soil and whether adaptable to garden crops and to farm commodities which are now imported in substantial quantities for consumption within the state.

(g) A general description of the land and to what extent, if any, the owner will be in position to assist in aiding, with lumber or likewise, the necessary housing units and equipment.

There are immediately available for an adequate program of this nature a very large number of families. Inquiry by relief agencies in other states indicates that if the program we are formulating can be worked out so that there will be reasonable assurance that the beneficiaries will be enabled to become self-sustaining, they will make the necessary reasonable contributions and that worthy families in large numbers are available for such settlements.

Assuming that suitable lands are made available and that the program can be developed along the line now being considered, ther is no reason why the settlements proposed would not be in every way desirable for the state and locality concerned as well as further the improvements and sale of the lands or adjacent lands for the owner. Owners submitting lands would greatly expedite consideration of the matter if they would accompany the report with a letter approving the tracts submitted from the County Demonstration Agent or similar local authority. All offers of farms or acreages will be considered as tentative merely, pending further development of the program and definite agreements with the owners.

The committees connection with the matter is entirely in furtherance of relief work. Only lands in Alabama and Florida are desired for the program at the present time.

DRASTIC PRICE REDUCTIONS BY CHICAGO SALES CO.

Broadcasting to the people of Chilton County what is declared to be the most drastic price-slashing sale in many years, the Chicago Sales Co., of Clanton this week is bidding for dry goods business on a scale rarely attempted by a merchandising house in Chilton County.

The whole county has been sowed down with advertising matter about this event, and added to this is a dobule-page advertisement in this issue of The Union-Banner.

Mr. Reedie Taylor, manager of Chicago Sales Company says, "We know the people of this territory will not have to ponder long to see that the values we are offering are rare and exceptional. Our prices are low, and the merchandise is every bit of high standard and first quality. We have the goods here for our customers, and we want them to come and look us over."

This special sale starts Friday morning, June 10th. The Clarkson Sales System is in charge of the event. Mr. Clarkson is well-known here, and he has heretofore proven his keen ability as a manger of merchandising events of this kind. There are no catch-penny propositions to this sale. Just a plain case of merchandise at ridiculously low prices.

CLANTON LADIES TRYING FOR THE I. G. A. PRIZES

The ladies of the Clanton Methodist and Baptist churches are trying for the prizes offered by the I. G. A. grocery stores. They are saving coupons and are urging everyone else to do the same, and deposit them in one of the I. G. A. stores in Clanton.

The prizes run from $100 down to $5. Also skooters are to be given away. This is a nation-wide contest, but competitors will have to compete only with Alabama.

In order to stimulate interest, the ladies of the two churches here are giving away next Saturday and the Saturday following; June 11 and 18th, one cake at each I. G. A. store here. Any one bringing in five labels will be allowed to write their names on a slip of paper and deposit them in a box. A name will be drawn at 6 o'clock in the afternoon of each Saturday, who will be the winner of the cake.

If you haven't already been doing so, begin now to save these coupons and help the church ladies win a prize. They stand an excellent chance of winning one of the valuable prizes, if all will help.

R. W. Scott of Thorsby was a visitor to Clanton Tuesday.

HARRIS SAYS HURRY IF YOU WANT A SCHOOL

Prof. H. A. Harris announces this week that half of the allotted number of adult schools for white people have been definitely located, and that a number of communities are bidding for the others.

The time is drawing to a close, and Mr. Harris reminds all who are interested in securing a school in their communities to get busy and get up the required list of pupils.

All of the negro schools have been definitely located, according to Mr. Harris, and he adds that the negroes wanted more schools than he could give them.

By next week Mr. Harris hopes to have everything completed so he will be able to announce the definite locations of all schools, and the list of teachers who will have charge of them.

COMMISSIONERS REQUEST MORE INFORMATION

Charge of Graft In Road Business Brings Question From Court

Addressing a letter to "The Man in the Moon," the Commissioner's of Chilton County request that he specify and name the overseers or any other parties who have been crooked with the county's affairs, and who have padded payrolls or who have charged the county with work that was never done.

The request for further infirmation comes from the court as a result of certain statements in "The Man in the Moon," column of The Union-Banner of May 19, in which the writer stated that there are practices in the county road business that amount to graft.

The letter from the Commissioners Court to "The Man in the Moon" is as follows:

Dear Sir:

The attention of the Commissioners Court has been called to your article in The Union-Banner of May 19th, the part of your article referred to being, "Graft in the Road System." Of course we, as members of the commissioners Court, are charged with the duty under the law of protecting the people's interests and the taxpayer's money and it is our duty to find out any and all facts in this matter and bring proper action or take what other steps our duty might be in the premises.

Among other statements you had this to say: "And yet the overseer's close friends were hired, with their teams, and the little fellows left out in the cold, with nothing. That is wrong. That is favoritism. That is one form of crookedness. That is graft. And then there has been instances where it would appear that the pay rolls have been padded—that is, men's names and amounts entered on accounts against the county when such men never saw service on the road; and in some cases where they were hired, the account showed maybe three or four days work, when the men worked only one or two days." We presume that you are interested in the county's affairs and we would like for you to specify and name the overseers or any other parties who have been crooked with the county's affairs and who have padded pay rolls, or who have charged the county with work that was never done. We do not know the source of your information, but it would be of benefit to the Court in investigating this matter, if you would give us the names of your informant as to these facts and also give us the names of any and all persons that might or would give us any information whatever regarding this. We feel that in justice to the Commissioners Court and to the people of the county, that the people should have the above information and we hope that you will be as free and frank in giving this information to the Court as you were in publishing the same in the newspaper.

The court understands that the "Man in the Moon" is Mr. Chester Mims.—Signed, L. H. Reynolds, Judge of Probate; J. E. Cobb, J. M. Mims, J. L. Burnett, A. P. Vinson, Commissioners.

THE AMERICAN FLAG

June 14, Flag Day, has ever carried the deepest meaning to every true American. This year the day will carry a tenfold significance, as the nation celebrates the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington. For to General Washington, tradition credits a leading part in the very designing of the flag, and what he did to give it meaning is and will be known to every American as long as our country lives.

On June 14, 1777 congress resolved: "That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, the the Union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

In these simple words, authority was given to General Washington to design the flag, and on the same day tradition has it that he went to the house of Betsy Ross on that visit that has become one the finest pages of American folklore. With him, according to the account, went Robert Morris and George Ross, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and the uncle of Betsy Ross's deceased husband.

On entering her modest house in Arch Street, Philidelphia, they are said to have found Mistress Ross busy at her needlework and humming a tune—softly, however, so that she might hear the tinkle of the bell on the door of her shop at the front of the house—and General Washington thus simply stated his errand.

"Mistress Ross, we have come to ask you to help in making a flag for our country. We do not feel pleased with the grand union flag because of the King's colors in the canton, so we have planned another."

The grand union flag referred to by Washington was the one he himself had designed and first flung to the breeze on January 1, 1776, during his seige of Boston. This was at a time when the revolutionists still felt they were fighting, not the British king, but his ministers; hence Washington's flag consisted of the thirteen alternate red and white stripes, but bore in its canton the king's crosses of St. George and St. Anthony. By 1777 the revolutionists were fighting solely for an American nation, and they wanted an American flag.

Mrs. Ross it is said, undertook the making of the flag eagerly, and with an exalted sense of the unusual honor conferred upon her. Not only that, she even suggested to Washington a slight correction in the design, which bore six-pointed stars instead of the five pointed type of heraldry. With a snip of her scissors she cut a folded paper and held forth a perfect five-pointed star to show what she meant. For a few minutes longer the design was discussed, and as quickly as nimble fingers could execute the task, Mrs. Ross had the flag in being.

So, in this homely fashion which so well suits the American spirit, was born the emblem designed by Washington, coming almost like a direct gift from him, to fly ever since over the nation that he also designed. Today, every American is privileged to ponder on the stupendous human events and influences that have flowed from this simple incident to the house of Betsy Ross a century and a half ago.

When that flag was designed and made there was not a true republic in existence. Since then the principles set in motion by George Washington and his fellow patriots have extended themselves to the uttermost parts of the earth. More than an emblem of sovereignty, the flag that Washington planned has been a symbol of human freedom, of equal opportunities, and political liberty wherever mankind has sought and fought for these things.

Flag have flown for the vanity of kings. Flags have been hated by millions of people, as representing nothing but conquest and oppression. Many of the cruelties, prejudicies, injustices that men have forced on each other have been wrought under the sanction of some similar emblem. The flag that will fly from thousands of masts today, is the one given us by George Washington, to float as the first bright banner of unstained honor, over a people for whom he prepared a great destiny.

It drew the early patriots from comfortable homes, from the security of their occupations and from the love of their families, to fight for the larger world which we inherit. What to them was a far ideal, is to us the great reality. No good American will neglect to ask himself how well he preserves the courage, the spirit of sacrifice belonging to those men and women who gave us this priceless heritage, on this returning anniversary of the day when their flag was born.

Hardly had the American flag appeared when it begun to play an immortal part in our history. It first was flung in the face of the enemy less than two months after its creation, at Fort Stanwix, on August 3, 1777. It was first carried into battle by George Washington's troops at the battle of the Brandywine, September 11, 1777. It was first saluted by the British at the surrender of Burgoyne, October 17, 1777. On February 14, 1778, John Paul Jones took the first salute to the flag as a naval emblem when he sailed the Ranger into Quiberon Bay, France. On April 24, the same year he forced the first striking of colors to the American flag by the British Drake in a British port. In 1787 the flag was first carried around the world by the ship Columbia, sailing from Boston. It was first flown in battle in the Pacific by the U. S. Frigate Essex in 1813, and in the next year it inspired Francis Scott Key to The Star Sprangled Banner.

Once, in 1794, when Vermont and Kentucky joined the Union, the stars and stripes were increased to 15, but in 1818 congress fixed the final form of the flag as thirteen stripes, with a star to represent each state. On April 6,1909, Admiral Perry planted the first American flag at the North pole. Since then Admiral Byrd carried it to both poles. Wherever it has gone it has meant honor and achievement, but this year it floats in honor of the greatest of Americans and the greatest of achievements—George Washington, and his creation of the United States.

A. A. Jackson Blames Republicans for Depression

Editor Union-Banner:

Will you be kind enough to permit me space in your paper to reply to your Frying Pan Editorial which appeared in last week's Union-Banner.

Now, Mr. Editor, I shall be somewhat plain, and as pointed as possible, as you should know that is the way we old farmers like to have things.

As to your editorial, I can see nothing that pertains to the benefit of the laborers and farmers. But I can see a lot of punky stuff that I call propaganda.

Any fair-minded and honest person who read my article and your editorial that apepared in the Union-Banner of last week knows that you agree with the text of my article when you said:

"The powers that have brought the present economic conditions are powers that can not be controlled by any political administration at Washington."

Now, my dear Editor, would you think for a moment that the voters of this great nation, or even the voters of Chilton County, would believe such propaganda?

Mr. Editor, you say that I am caught in the net of Democratic deceptions and that the Democrats make men like me believe the whole trouble with our economic situation should be blamed on the inefficiency of the Republican administration.

No, Mr. Editor, you are mistaken, when you say the Democrats are responsible for the lesson I have learned.

I got the lesson by costly experience by the Republican administrations.

If I thought as you say that no administration at Washington could do any thing with the present depression, I would not care who ran the affairs of our country, whether he be Republican or Democrat. Neither would you.

Now, Mr. Editor, don't you know if you put out such propaganda that you don't believe yourself, that the voters of this county will not believe it?

Mr. Editor, you say that there is no political administration at Washinton that can do anything to change present conditions. And then wind up your editorial by saying: "If I want a bigger and better depression I'll vote the Democratic ticket."

You admit that the Democrats could make conditions worse. Then why not admit that any power that can make a thing worse could make it better. You know it is true.

Now, Mr. Editor, in concluding my tributes to your editorial, I will say so far as your burlesques and criticisms are concerned, I take them all with a smile, as I know they are worthless.

Now just a few words to the voters of Chilton County and I will bring my few remarks to a close. If you haven't, I want you to read the editorial that appeared in the Union-Banner of last week, telling about A. A. Jackson jumping out of the frying pan into the fire . If you will investigate this old Republican frying pan as I have, you will find that it is so hot with Republican depression, you will do as I, and thousands of others have, and will do. I jumped from that old Republican frying pan that has been frying and stewing the people's substances out of their possession and concentrating it into the hands of the few.

Such a jump will give some ease, regardless as to where you land.

Mr. Voter, remember the Bible says, "When the wicked rule, the people mourn. But when the righteous rule, the people rejoice."—Respectfully, A. A. Jackson.

IN MEMORY OF MOTHER, OUR GRANDMOTHER AND CECIL

Dear loved ones you've gone from our midst. We miss you, oh, how we miss you, though we feel that our loss is heaven's gain, but it was so hard to see you go. There will always be three vacant chairs in our home, no one can ever fill them.

Mother, when you left us, the dearest best friend on earth went from us. We know no one can ever take your place. You always stood by us so faithful, and it was so hard to give you up. We miss you so much but we know you've gone to heaven and we're striving to meet you there some day. We feel that we have a precious goal to reach and you'll help us reach it.

Grandmother, you stayed with us a long time, yet it was so hard to see you go. As we come into our home it is so hard to never see your dear sweet face or to know we'll never see it again on this earth, though we know that you've gone to rest and if we serve God every day we'll meet you some day.

Cecil, dear, we miss you. You were always so kind and sweet, especially to mother, ever doing something to help her. We loved you like a brother. It was so hard to give you up, while you was so young. Though God knows best and he had a reason for calling you home to dwell with him. We know that God always does the thing that is best for us and we're striving to meet each of you in heaven, when he see's fit to call us home.—W. H. Headley and children.

Mother of 7—Still Young

THE woman who gives her organs the right stimulant need not worry about growing old.

Her system doesn't stagnate; her face doesn't age. She has the health and "pep" that come from a lively liver and strong, active bowels.

When you're sluggish and the system needs help, don't take a lot of "patent medicines." There's a famous doctor's prescription for just such cases, and every druggist keeps this standard preparation. It is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Take a little every day or so, until every organ in your body feels the big improvement.

The next time you have a bilious headache, or feel all bound-up, take this delicious syrup instead of the usual cathartic. You'll be rid of all that poisonous waste, and you haven't weakened the bowels. You'll have a better appetite, and feel better in every way. The constant use of cathartics is often the cause of a sallow complexion and lines in the face. And so unnecessary!

Would you like to break yourself of the cathartic habit? At the same time building health and vigor that protects you from frequent sick spells, headaches, and colds? Get a big bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin today. Use often enough to avoid those attacks of constipation. When you feel weak and run-down or a coated tongue or bad breath warns you the bowels need to be stimulated. Give it to children instead of strong laxatives that sap their strength. It isn't expensive.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

EXTENSION WORKERS DUTIES INCREASED

Auburn, Ala.,—With the purchasing power of farm products now half of what it was before the World War, thereby making it more difficult for farmers to send their sons and daughters to college, Prof. L. N. Duncan says that the duties and responsibilities of extension workers have increased enormously. The reason, he explained, is that county agents carry college teachings direct to those with whom they come in contact individually, in clubs, and in other organizations.

Prof. Duncan decried the fact that agriculture is as greatly out of kelter with industry. Official figures for April, 1932, show that prices paid by farmers were 114 per cent of the pre-war average while prices received by farmers were only 59 per cent.

"This means that the farmer's purchasing power in these 20 years has been reduced by half," he said.

"It has the same effect on agriculture as a 50-per-cent wage reduction would have upon a wage earner with no change in the prices of things he has to buy."

"Unless this condition is adjusted, business must suffer more than agriculture. When farmers can't buy, merchants don't sell, jobbers can't sell to merchants, and manufacturers can't sell to jobbers. When manufacturers can't sell they must shut down their machines, and throw laborers out of employment, thereby destroying their ability to buy and causing distress and suffering."

Prof. Duncan called attention to the well known fact that agriculture is basic not only as a business but as a producer of markets for manufactured products. If the purchasing power of agriculture can be restored to where farmers can buy a normal amount of merchandise, merchants will do good business, banks will have good deposits, manufacturing will be busy, and laborers will be employed, thereby restoring good business conditions.

CULTIVATION FACTS TOLD BY FUNCHESS

Auburn, Ala.—A farmer who is a persistant student of his work and his business wants to know how long he must cultivate cotton, corn and other crops and the kind of cultivation that produces best results. He is interested in reducing his cost and increasing production.

His question is answered by Director M. J. Funchess of the experiment station at Auburn by saying that "the best cultivation is that which does the best job of killing weeds and grass and at the same time does least damage to the roots of the plants being cultivated."

This answer by Director Funchess is sufficient to guide any farmer in his cultivation. It means that cultivation should be aimed at killing weeds and grass. It should be continued as long as control of grass and weeds is essential. Then it should stop.

Director Funchess reminded that late cultivation of corn or cotton may do more harm than good. If, for example, the cultivation is deep a great many roots are broken and the damage to the crop being cultivated is more than the good accomplished by killing grass and weeds.

"Shallow cultivation is best," he said. "It should be just deep enough to kill grass and weeds and no deeper. Very shallow cultivation when grass and weeds are small will kill them."

As a concluding remark Director Funchess said "Continue cultivation until the battle with grass and weeds is won, keeping in mind the fact that cultivation which does the best job of killing these enemies to crops and the least damage to the roots of the crop itself is the best and is the one that should be applied."

BRIEF NEWS NOTES

Building permits issued in April this year in 568 cities throughout the United States were 70 per cent below those issued in April of 1931, or 19.7 per cent above the March figure.

A recent Chicago dispatch said "Members of the Board of Trade at Chicago expect the wheat pit to become again an attractive speculative center; eastern speculators are taking more interest in the market."

Good terraces protect land against washing and thereby save enormous losses on rolling land in cultivation. The cost of such terraces is very small in comparison to their value.—J. B. Wilson, extension agricultural engineer, Auburn.

Pig iron production in Alabama for April was 2,361 tons daily as against 2,197 tons in March and 6,218 tons in April, 1931. Pig Iron production for the United States averaged 28,430 tons daily in April, which was a drop of 9 per cent from March and 58 per cent below the rate for April, 1931.

A press dispatch says that in an effort to bring prices back to a profitable scale, Brazil has undertaken not only to buy and destroy 12,000,000 bags of coffee, but between 300,000,000 and 400,000,000 coffee trees. Funds for the purchases are obtained from a tax on exports. Only the best grades are allowed to leave the country.

C. R. Arnold of Ohio State University says that extreme declines in prices for farm products are not due to increased production. Reasons: The gross volume of all crops produced in the United States during the three years of 1929, 1930, and 1931 averaged about 3 per cent lower than an average of the five years from 1924 to 1928.

IN MEMOMRY

The great tornado swept into the home of Mr. Monroe Headley, and snapped the brittle thread of life, taking from our midst, Cecil Bridges.

Cecil was was nineteen years of age, February 7. He was the only son of Mrs. R. A. Williams. Cecil was loved and is missed by all who knew him. We miss him so much when we go to church. We never went by that we saw Cecil and T. J. We hope to have T. J. back with us soon, but Cecil's dear face is gone from our midst, and there's always a vacancy—one that can never be filled. Our hearts are heavy when we think of it and realize he has and we can't see his sweet face again on earth, but we know that God has a purpose for everything and he had a purpose for taking Cecil home, when we felt he was just in the prime of life.

Dear ones weep not for Cecil, for we feel that our loss is heaven's gain. And if we just serve God, some sweet day, we'll meet him face to face again. Cecil leaves to mourn his loss, his mother, Mrs. R. A. Williams, two brothers S. A. and Allen Williams; six sisters, Mrs. Lee Smith, Ruth, Victoria, Mary Ruby and Peggy Williams, besides a number of friends and relatives.

It was hard to give Cecil up, but he's paid the debt we all must pay sooner or later, and dear mother, brothers, and sisters, let's not grieve more than we can help for we feel that he is better off.—Written by a friend who loved him.

FARM AND GARDEN QUERY BOX

Q.—Please give directions for the planting of sudan grass for use as summer pasture.

A.—Sudan grass can be seeded in June or earlier. Prepare a well harrowed seed bed, and sow fifteen or twenty pounds of seed per acre. Harrow this in. It should be ready for light pasturing by midsummer. Be sure to get seed that is free from Johnson Grass seed. The two kinds of seed look much alike. If the crop is cut for hay, it will furnish two or three cuttings. It is one of the best grasses for use during the hot, dry summer. It is relished by livestock as pasturage. If grazed closely, it grows rapidly and will supply feed for two or three head of cattle or horses per month after well started. Fifteen or twenty half-grown hogs can pasture on one acre all summer.

Q.—What is the best method of poisoning garden insects which eat the leaves of plants, such as potato beetles and bean beetles?

A.—Arsenate if lime is now considered the best. It can be dusted on the plants early in the morning when the dew is on or after they have been sprinkled with rain. Mix the poison with powdered lime at the rate of one part of poison to ten parts of lime dust. For salad plants which are to be eaten without cooking, instead of the above poison use Berium Fluo-Silicate dust to mix with lime.

Q.—Is Japan Clover a perennial or an annual? How is it started?

A.—Japan clover or Lespedeza is an annual plant. It readily reseeds itself after it is once started, and many farmers think it is perennial for this reason, as it grows year after year in the same pasture or hayfield. It has fine stems and makes splendid pasture and hay, but the yield is not very heavy. The Korean variety produces a heavier yield than others. It will thrive well on most any farm soil, even on poor soil. It carries its own inoculation. It can be sown on well prepared soil at the rate of about ten or more pounds per acre. It is often mixed with other grasses such as are found in the pasture or hayfield. When grown for seed, it is often sown with small grain or just after small grain is harvested. If sown with small grain, it grows slowly until the grain is harvested, then it makes a good crop of hay or pasture very soon.

Mr. William Leon Evans, of Kansas City, Missouri arrived Sunday evening to be the guest of his mother, Mrs. G. T. Evans, for several days.

FAVORS ELIMINATING INCIDENTAL FEES

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

Since I have been so busy with my crop, it has been impossible for me to visit each voter and talk with you personally, in regard to my sampaign for member of the school board. So I am taking this means of asking you for your vote and influence in the Primary Election which will be held next Tuesday, June 14th.

I realize the responsibility attached to this office, for I feel that our children are our most valuable assets and I have always been interested in our schools which train their minds to make our future citizens. I assure you that if I am nominated and elected, that I shall do all in my power to give every child in the county an equal chance.

I am anxious to see incidental fees eliminated, and if I become a member of the school board, I shall work to eliminate this fee and try insofar as I can, to have the schools free.

I recognize the fact that board members are only servants of the people, and if I am elected, I assure you that I shall always be glad to have you meet with us so that we might be able, at all times, to carry out the wishes of the majority. I further promise that if I am elected, that I shall visit the schools and become personally acquainted with the teachers and trustees. In doing this, I feel that I will know the needs of each individual school and that I shall be able to cooperate with them and the patrons.

In closing I wish to thank you who voted for me in the primary, and I appreciate the strong vote I received. I will also greatly appreciate your vote in the election on June 14th. I wish to say further, that I will certainly appreciate the vote and influence of those who did not vote for me nor my opponent in the first primary. I hope that I shall have the privilege of serving you as a member of the county school board, but if I am not the nominee, I shall do all I can to elect the entire ticket this fall, as I have always been a loyal Republican and have always done all I could for our party.

Respectfully.

J. L. SMITH.

DeMabel's Beauty Salon Installs a New Permanent Waving Machine; Steamer

Today women demand speed, simplicity and perfect results in permanent waving. They want a curl that is soft and natural, one that is easy to set. DeMabel's new permanent waving machine meets this demand of the people. DeMabel has installed one of this kind, a Bonat machine. This machine produces a wave that sets itself and eliminates finger waving, or the use of finger wave lotion. It cannot frizz or kink, cannot burn the scalp when getting it, produces perfect ringlets and pushes up beautifully without effort. Waves successfully over dyed or bleached hair, blond and gray hair.

Uses 40 per cent less heat and 40 per cent less strength in lotion, which are two very important factors in satisfying a customer. All this is obtained by using the Santurello E-Zee self winder, which winds the hair like no human hand can do, and produces results with speed and perfection, impossible to obtain by any other method. It ties, winds, and applies pad in one operation without the use of accessories. Eliminates the use of strings, metal clips, and that tedious and tiresome way of twisting and winding by hand, together with the worry and grief over burns and failures. The Bonat wave is given with organic oils which give the hair a real oil treatment and therefore reconditions the hair. The Bonat wave has won first prize at the last three beauty trade shows which speaks for itself as to the beauty it gives the hair surpassed by any other method now used. It has taken the place of the croquignole wave which for a short time has been given but did not prove as successful as should.

Now for those who have trouble with dandruff, falling hair, dry, brittle and lifeless hair, or any trouble of the scalp can get a real steam oil scalp treatment with DeMabel's new Arnao Steamer. The Arnoil treatments are wonderful for conditioning hair to take and hold a permanent wave, and if the scalp is given several arnoil treatments before getting a wave, your hair will produce a beautiful wave, more lasting and more admired. If your hair has a natural wave you will find the depth and softness of the waves greatly increased after an Arnoil treatment. The marvelous value of Arnoil treatments cannot be over exaggerated and after having one treatment you will not only be convinced that what is said about them is true, but that no mere words could begin to describe your satisfaction and the increased loveliness of your hair.

These two new improvements which DeMabel has added to her shop shows that she is up to the minute in keeping up with the latest and best equipment for giving the ladies of Clanton and surrounding communities the best of service which cannot even be surpassed in the larger shops in the cities, and Miss Mabel will greatly appreciate everyone patronizing her shop. It is up-to-date in every respect, and she wants you to visit her shop and find out more about the new and latest method of waving the hair and about her new scalp steamer.

DEVAUGHN WRITES

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space to say a few words to the people of Chilton County, as it is only a short while until the run-off primary election in which the Republicans of Chilton county will nominate a man for Commissioner of the Fourth District and also a man for a member of the county board of education.

I wish to say in the outset that I am running on the same platform that I entered the race on. I entered the race, first, because many of my friends from different parts of the county requested me to run; second, because I have a desire and believe that I could be of service to the district and county as commissioner.

I wish to again thank all of my friends who supported and assisted me in any way in the first primary on May 3rd, and ask that each of you continue your confidence, by lending me your support in the run-off on June 14th. To those who supported either of my opponents in the first primary, I do not hold any ill feeling or grudge against any one for doing so, because I regard this as your privilege and sacred right. However, I am asking your most serious consideration before you cast your ballot on June 14, and if after consideration you can favor me with your vote and influence, I assure you it will be greatly appreciated, and if I am elected, I will consider myself a servant of the people and as near as possible administer the affairs of the office in a fair, open, straight-forward manner, with equal fairness to all and special favors to none.

I wish to say in conclusion that I believe in the principles of the Republican party and have always supported the ticket straight and have done all I could for what I thought to be to the best interest of the party, and I assure you that whether I am the nominee or not you will find me ready to do all I can to put the entire ticket over in a big way in November.

Let me insist that every Republican in the county turn out on next Tuesday, June 14th and cast your ballot for what you think to be the best interest of the county and the Republican party. Thanking you one and all for the past favors and trusting that you may favor me next Tuesday, June 14th, with your vote and influence.—I am yours very truly, O. L. Devaughn, Republican candidate for Commissioner of the Fourth District.

THORSBY SECTION

Fruit Growers Association reported Monday of loading the 5th car of Irish Potatoes and the 2nd car of green beans, neither of these farm products have been grown in Thorsby heretofore in quanities permitting carload shipments, although almost anybody knows they can be successfully grown in this section. They may not produce the net returns that strawberries do in good seasons, but they help some as a money crop for late spring. At any rate, better than to have nothing coming in, and likely to afford some profit over actual cost.

Frank Nelson, whose home is about a mile north of Thorsby, and one that was badly damaged by the storm of March 21st, has so far restored it that he intends to move in this week.

Walter Littleton and son, Arnold, moved into the Bob Martin house, near Thorsby Hardware Company store, with a married woman to keep house, whom we have been told is a married daughter of Mr. Littleton, hence they are somewhat rehabilitated, and are probably planning to "carry on."

ENDORSE DEVAUGHN FOR COMMISSIONER OF 4TH DISTRICT

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

We, the undersigned voters and taxpayers of Beat four, also in District 4, of Chilton County, hereby declare our endorsement of Mr. O. L. Devaughn for Commissioner of the Fourth District. We have known Mr. Devaughn for a long time, and know him to be a straight, honest and upright man, fair and square in all his dealings with his fellowman.

Mr. Devaughn wants every man to have what is coming to him, and he has always stood true and firm to the Republican party. You will not have to live in the same community with Mr. Devaughn to get your roads worked. We believe he will give every man in every part of his district his due portion of road work, and not give special favors to his own community.

Mr. Devaughn has made good at every undertaking he has started. So we feel that he will make an able Commissioner of Chilton county. We do not believe he has made any promises to anyone that he will give them a job in order to secure votes.

We ask the voters to consider the fact that Mr. Devaughn has already won over his opponent, Mr. Duke, in the first primary, so far as the Fourth District is concerned. He got more votes in the district he is to serve if elected, than did his opponent. We ask the other districts to seriously think of this before casting your vote on June 14. The fourth District has already said that Mr. Devaughn is the man to serve as Commissioner of that District. Then why not the other districts of the county support him?

We believe Mr. Devaughn will be a servant to all the people of the entire county in any and every way he would have opportunity to do so as a member of the board of Commissioners; and we believe the Republicans of the county will be proud they have such a man as Mr. Devaughn in this very important office. We hope you will give him your support on June 14.—Yours for the success of the Republican party, J. E. Miner, J. A. Culp, W. A. Blalock, R. F. Holly, C. Hand.

WHY SPOIL A LOVELY GESTURE?

Eugene Meyer, governor of the Federal Reserve board, protests against the Goldsborough bill. His objection is based on the reason that in directing the board to restore the 1921-28 commodity price level the bill would be ordering a miracle beyond the power of the board to perform.

But from the congressional viewpoint this is a curious objection. Doesn't Mr. Meyer see that all congress wants is to be able to go home and tell admirnig constituents that it ordered prices up and if they don't obey, it isn't congress's fault.

LUCKY LOOTERS

Bandits invaded the business office of a newspaper. They were very fortunate as they escaped with every cent they had brought in with them.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert)

Every once in a while we see statements in the news papers written by prominent leaders, urging the members of Congress, on account of the seriousness of the national economic situation to forget politics, settle down, pass a tax bill, balance the budget and go home, to give business a chance to start on a much needed recovery. Then we see in reply, indignant statements from members of Congress to the effect that Congress is not playing politics and that there is really a bi-partisan effort to put through adequate financial measures.

This square disagreement would seem to indicate that somebody is mistaken, but it is possible that the leaders inside congress and out, are not so far apart in their statements as would seem likely at first thought. There may be politics in both branches of congress and without doubt there is, but it not partisan politics, but selfish personal politics. The politics that is being played is not being furthered by the leaders of the two great political parties, who have positions of authority going along with their leadership. Most of these leaders are really anxious that congress complete its program and go home. They well realize that the best thing for the future success of the party to which they happen to belong, is to have that party's representatives in congress help advise a real constructive program and hasten on through with it to completion..

Then why isn't something of that kind done? The reason is not too much partisan politics, but too much personal. There is not too much party discipline in congress. In fact, there is not enough of it, either in the Republican or the Democratic organization. The proof of this is to be found in the pitiable plight in the house at the time a majority reflected the manufacturers sales tax and then went haywire, with each individual or little bloc promoting a policy of its own. The partisan leaders in congress were not responsible for this plight of congress. In fact they would have prevented it if they could from both patriotic and partisan movements. The politics which has mussed things up in congress is not partisan politics, but selfish, individual politics. Too many legislators have been trying to legislate from the local rather than the national viewpoint. They have not asked for themselves the question, "What is the best thing for Uncle Sam? but, "what will get the most votes in my district or my state next fall." This has not been the case with all our legislators or even with the majority of them but it has been the case with enough of them to seriously upset the regular party programs. These statesmen with the localized viewpoint have not stopped to think that if Uncle Sam goes down, their districts and their states will go down along with him.

So what we have had in congress has been too much non-partisan, personal politics and not enough party discipline. With too smoothly working old-time political organizations in the house and senate, we would have had a balanced budget long before this. Each week that congress fails in its accepted task of balancing the budget the more serious the national situation becomes. Business men in America are afraid to start any sort of constructive program until they know what sort of legislation is coming out of congress and Europeans have become suspicious of our congress that for several weeks that have been withdrawing their gold from the United States as rapidly as possible. Isn't it about time we begin to consider the United States first rather than Podunk county? For if the United States does not get back to normalcy it is a sure thing that Podunk County won't, either.

MARKHAM JUST A PIKER

Markham's "Man with a Hoe," is said to have been the world's most profitable poem, netting the author $250,000 in 33 years. If he dug that much with a hoe, think what his return would have been if the poem had written about the man with the steam shovel.

MORAL ECHOES

(By D. W. Haskew)

While holding a revival the colored minister emphasized the fact that the devil was in and all about his church. To make his messages real, one of the deacons decided to dress himself up like his satanic majesty, and when the parson was in a "Reeling Way" warning his flock against the devil as he walks about as a lion seeking whom he may devour, to walk in the door of the church. At the right time the deacon made his appearance, and as the congregation or the preacher were not expecting to see him in his visible form, there was much excitement. Negroes trampled over each other and leaped in scores from every window in the building. The devil advanced down the aisle unmolested and by the time he had reached the altar in the church, he and the preacher were the only two people in the building. The devil struck the communion table with his can and said, "Well." Then the parson addressed the devil in winning tones, "Now look here Mr. Devil, I knows dat you think dat Ah am agin you, but deep down in my heart I am wid you." Then advancing toward the window he said, "Now if you will jes let me off dis time, there will be no udder time." I fear that there are a lot of folks who are like the negro preacher—"They kinder appear to be fighting the devil but deep down in their hearts they are with him." Appearing good in public and being mean in private is the sin of today.

Some pesky sparrows made a resort and a convenience of the vines on my front porch. I tried hard to break them from making this place a play ground, but nothing seemed to do any good. One day I secured some black strings and platted a large black cord, making it about three feet long and dolling it up so that it looked very much like a snake. I stretched this cord along the the vines. A bird darted in but did not fold his wings before he screamed and went to the top of the tallest tree in sight. Other birds came to inspect and went away to scream and curse what they thought to be a snake in the vines. As small as a sparrow is the little bundle of flesh and feathers seems to have more sense than great big grown men nad women. They know danger when they see it and they keep their distance, while so called wise men and women will see things that they know to be filled with death and danger, and yet they plunge in to see how it feels. When we are as wise as sparrows we will not drive and drink like devils. When the snake is in the vines, you had better stay out. That is sensible.

When the Tuggle Institute was giving, "Heaven Bound," in the auditorium of the High school one of the girls standing before the rostrum fainted and fell before the audience. She was rushed downstairs and stretched upon a table. A white lady asked a boy who was standing near if he would run to a drug store for some ammonia. The young lad tilted his nose and walked away. It was beneath his dignity to run for medicine for a fainting colored girl. Standing nearby was a Clanton Scout, clad in his uniform, and on seeing the action and spirit of the other boy, he stepped before the lady and asked, "May I not go for the ammonia?" "Yes you may," replied the white lady, "and God bless you Scouts." What do you think of a boy who will tilt his nose in scorn and refuse aid to anyone, and what do you think of a Scout who will serve regardless of color or class? It is awful when any one will make himself less a human being. With that white lady I say, "God bless our Scouts."

Was walking down the street with a friend when a little girl of three crossed over and joined us on our way to the business section of town. She was bright of face, happy of heart and she could and did talk with all the fascination of childhood. She told us that she was in luck for that was her second time to go to town that morning. We asked her why she had made the other trip to town. She replied in the innocency of her little heart that "Mother just had to have some cigarettes and she sent me after them." About that time the little darling was seized with a violent spell of coughing. I said to her, "You seem to have a terrible cold, where did you get it?" She lifted her eyes to mine and replied, "My Mudder has a bad cold and I guess I caught it from her." I looked with pity apon the beautiful lad and prayed that she would not catch her mother's cigarette habit. It is more than I can understand to see what examples are set before the little angels that come into our homes. They not only catch colds from us, but they catch habits as well.

Have you ever heard about that stingy old farmer who raised chickens for the market? At first he fed then on corn meal. Then he discovered that he could mix a little saw dust in with the meal and the chickens would grow right on. He kept adding more and more saw dust until he was feeding fifty-fifty of meal and saw dust. He put his eggs under the old hens for hatching, and when the time of hatching came he went out to view his product. He was very much astonished to find some of the little biddies had wooden wings, some of them had peg legs and there were a few wood pecks scattered about in the brood. Some parents seem to think that they can economize on the question of educating their children. Just any kind of mental food will do. No wonder there are wood chucks and wooden heads.

The MAN in the MOON

Looks Over All—
Overlooks None.

In Regard to "Road Graft" Article

In this week's issue of The Union-Banner you will read a letter from the Commissioners Court, a copy of which was mailed to me, regarding an article which appeared in this column recently, entitled "Graft in the Road System". In writing this article, it was not my intention or desire to cast any reflection on the Court or any individual. Nor was it my intention to try to start an investigation of the manner in which the Court was conducting the affairs of the County. Further, I do not intend to go into any lengthy discussion of the matter through the columns of the paper, but at the proper time and place I will put before the Court my sources of information. Until that time, the Court and my readers may rest assured that I was not "talking through my hat", nor just to see how it would look in print.

The Veterans and the Reds

For the last few days I have been reading of the "army of unemployed veterans" who have gathered at Washington in an effort to have some kind of bonus bill passed, which would give ex-service men some relief in these days of depression. The veterans say that they are prepared to stay until they get some results. One veteran says: "When we were in France, the song ran 'And we won't come back 'till it's over over there', and the same applys in this case. We will not leave until something is done". Communist leaders, or "Reds", as they are generally known, saw at once that here was a good chance to spread their propaganda, and they began their work. But be it said to the credit of the veterans, they did not let such propaganda get well started until they halted in good old doughboy style; they threw the Communist agitator off their train, with these words: "We want only what is due us and what we have been promised, and we don't need any advice from the Reds on how to get it, either". More power to the boys, if that's how they feel about it.

Times Looking Better

One morning last week when I picked up the day's paper, a big head-line to the effect that stocks and bonds had taken a surprisingly big jump hit me square in the eye. The big jump has caused money powers to believe that we are about to realize the beginning of the end of depression. Such News is cheernig and heartening to everyone, I am sure. A lack of national confidence is all to blame, any way. We have in the United States, just as much money, just as much property and other assets as we had in better times. But now, with confidence at such a low ebb, anyone who has a little money is afraid to turn it loose. Just as soon as confidence is restored—just as soon as people can see where their next money is coming from, they will not be afraid to buy, and conditions will start the climb back to normalcy. And, just as the big break in the money market was the fore-runner of our serious economic condition, the climb back must start with a return of confidence to the big interests, from which it will spread to all parts of the country, and then, and not until then, will we see better times.

Pullin' 'Em Across

I like baseball—like to see it played, and like to listen to play-by-play reports over the radio. In listening to such reports, I hear them given by various announcers, but the best, or one of the best I have ever listened to is "Bull" Connor. (I suppose that is the way he spells his name). "Bull", whose home town is Plantersville, announces the road games of the Birmingham Barons over WBPC, in Birmingham, and what a kick he gets out of it, and puts into it. "Bull" don't know how to give up—the game is "still young" even if it is the ninth inning with two out and none on bases, if the Barons are behind. I have listened to him when it seemed that all was lost, and that guy set up such a "pull" for a run or two, and before you could wink your eye something would happen and defeat would be turned into victory. That same thing happened no later than last Sunday. Listening to "Bull" as he "pulls 'em across" has just about made me a believer in this mental telepathy business I've heard so much about. Some of these days I'm going up to Birmingham and drop in to see "Bull", and when I do, I intend to ask him about using a little of that "pull" to bring back better times. I really believe he could help some. He's good! Just listen in on him some time—you'll agree.

Who's Who—J. Renfroe Mullins

John Renfroe Mullins was born near Jumbo, in Chilton County, December 15, 1880, the son of W. L. and Sarah (Wells) Mullins. The following year the family moved to Kincheon, and J. Renfroe's first schooling was at the old Wyatt school, near the present Shiloh church site. Will Johnston was his first teacher, Mrs. Mollie Bowdoin was the second, and Prof. H. L. Davis the third, at Fairview school — some of his class-mates were W. L. Popwell, Walter Popwell, and ex-Judge E. B. Deason. In 1892 he moved to Clanton and attended the school taught by Prof. McMorries. Here he took two medals for marks in English. Mr. Mullins entered Howard College in 1898. He took a medal in the Franklin Literary Society, graduated in 1900, and was second honor man and class salutatorian of that class. In 1901 he entered Bryant and Stratton Business College at Louisville, Ky., on a scholarship given him by Mr. Frank Crichton, then editor and publisher of The Banner. On December 10, 1901, he married Miss Blanche, only daughter of Mr. W. Hugh Foshee; they have two sons and one daughter. After finishing the business course, Mr. Mullins went to work in his father's store in Clanton, where he stayed until August, 1917, when he formed a partnership with Mr. J. Watts Moore, this firm being known as Mullins and Moore; he is still in this business. Mr. Mullins was a member of the city council during the administrations of Dr. E. A. Matthews and Mr. N. A. Kicker, as mayor.; he was a member of the city council at the time Clanton's fine water system was installed in 1914. He is a member of the Clanton Baptist Church, and has been a member of the Board of Trustees of this church since 1912. He is a Mason; has passed all chairs in the local Masonic body, and holds a life membership in Clanton Commandery of Knights Templar; he was elected representative to the 57th Imperial Council Session of Shriners, held at Cleveland, Ohio, in 1931. J. Renfroe Mullins is one of the best known and most highly esteemed men in Chilton County. In his business connections he has been the mainstay of numbers of farmers—he has been especially valuable to his community along this line. That one of the places on the city council was his for several years proves his fellow townsmen's confidence in his business ability; that he has been a trustee of the Baptist church for the last twenty years bespeaks the respect that body holds for his honesty, integrity and general ability. In short, to relate the history and affairs of Clanton and Chilton County for the last 25 years would be impossible without bringing out in bold relief the real worth and merit of J. Renfroe Mullins. If possible to get the needed information in due time, our next week's Who's Who will concern Rev. E. W. Butler, of Thorsby.—Man in the Moon.

COMMISSIONERS ASK FOR FACTS IN MATTER

The Commissioners Court of Chilton County have requested "The Man in the Moon" to give them more light concerning his assertions in the paper of May 19 relative to graft and unfair practices in the conduct of Chilton County's Road business.

"The Man in the Moon" says he has grounds upon which to stand for making his statements, and will give the Commissioners what they have asked for .

The statements of "The Man in the Moon" did not charge that the Commissioners were guilty of any bad practices; nor even that the Court or any member thereof had any knowledge of same.

But the Commissioners are entirely right in asking "The Man in the Moon" to lay the cards on the table and call a spade a spade. If there are any leaks in the county road business, the Court ought to know it, is entitled to know it.

And we are sure if "The Man in the Moon" is able to reveal anything as serious as his former statements would indicate, the court will be prompt and thorough in applying the necessary correction.

DISCIPLINE IN CONGRESS

In an interview with a New York Times correspondent, Speaker John Garner, of the National House of Representatives, in explaining the present theory used in governing the House, is quoted as stating that the days of speaker-czars are over, and as asking the question, "If the House is not permitted to work its will, what is there left of representative government?"

In view of the pitiable plight which the House has found itself in on frequent occasions during the speakership of Mr. Garner it might be well to ask what is left of representative government, anyhow?

Certainly with Mr. Garner having lost complete control of his majority on occasions, with the members of the house running wild, kicking holes through the legislative program and emasculating the contructive legislation brought before it, we have had anything but representative government.

The theory of representative government is that the members of congress and the senate are delegates of the people, sent to Washington to express in the legislation the will of the people. Yet we doubt whether even Mr. Garner would assert that the things which have gone on in congress during the past few weeks because of a lack of majority leadership, have expressed the will of the people or had anything to do with representative government.

What seems to be overlooked is the fact that in the United States popular government is expressed through political parties and when a party has a working majority in congress it has a responsibility for carrying out the will of people as entrusted to it through the elections. In order that the will of the people be thus expressed there must be party discipline and party organization in congress. This can only be brought through strong leadership, call it czardom or what you please. In running wild because of lack of firm direction congress is not expressing the will of the people nor is it exemplifying the principles of representative government.

During the past several administrations when the Republicans had a working majority in the house and during the Wilson administration when the Democrats had a house majority, there was no running amuck. There was strong, heady leaderships and things were accomplished.

It is barely possible that a little czardom on the part of Mr. Garner at this time would add rather than detract from the possibilities of representative government. It is not merely a question of meaning well, of intending to do the right thing. What is needed is getting the right thing done, and that usually takes discipline and efficient organization.

The Man on the Corner

Some Sights He Saw—
and Some He Saw Not.

Children Always Get My Sympathy

As I started to write this column a young mother passed my window on her way to the jail to see her husband who is confined behind the bars. Holding to her hand and stubbing its toes over the rocks in the road was a little golden-haired girl about four years old. I got up and went to the back door so I could see them as they looked up at the window and talked to the man upon whom their only hopes for the future of this life depend. As I looked at them I thought enough things to fill a dozen columns. Even if a man has gotten mixed up with the law, it seems to me surely, when he looks out through the bars at his helpless wife and child who are dependent upon him, he might be moved to renounce evil and rededicate his life to the noble impulses which are kindled by the aspirations of youth. Children always get my sympathy.

Excuse Me, Tom, If I Tell It

Tom Rockett was among the many Clanton folks who went to the airplane show in Birmingham last Sunday. As I was leaving the airport Sunday afternoon, the last thing I saw was Tom and Grady Reynolds as they boarded the big passenger plane for a ride over the city. I know Tom don't care for folks knowing he rode the airplane. In fact, I am quite sure he would not care for everybody knowing everything he did while he was up there (I mean up there in Birmingham). The only thing Tom wants kept secret is the payment of the two dollars passenger fare for a ten-minute ride. That is just too much extravagant waste of money for Tom. Therefore, in order to save his face, I will call it a free ride, or say that Grady bought both tickets.

Merchandising Events This Week

Passing up and down the street Tuesday, I got a hankering notion that something unusual is fixing to happen right soon at the store of Chicago Sales Company. I see that fellow Clarkson diking up a lot of signs with big blasting words and funny pictures on them. Reedie Taylor refused to commit himself, but his look betrayed his innocence. Then my suspicions were further confirmed when I saw the double page advertisement in this issue of The Union-Banner. Big doings for the customers of Chicago Sales this week. The fun starts Friday morning.

Lande Also in the Ring

Maurice Lande, of The Leader, next door to Chicago Sales Company, must have got somewhat suspicious of what was going on across the alley. He comes out with a big ad in this week's paper, telling the folks he is going to "open a keg of nails" at his store this week. I wonder how folks ever tell whether to buy things at the Leader or at Chicago Sales Co. Those are two real hustling business houses that go after business, and they get it. They are not afraid to advertise. God bless 'em. May their tribe increase.

Two Things Are Certain

Two things are certain—death and taxes. Did you ever see anybody who could get by the tax collector? You just as well look for a man who will never die. I see by the papers more taxes are to be put on. Before long we will be working one day out of each week to support our government. I guess Brother Jackson will read this and wonder again why I don't join the Democrats. Well, let him wonder about that if he wants to. I am worrying about how and where I can get the money to pay my taxes before Will Culp sells my chicken coop out from over my head.

What About Huckleberries?

How is your huckleberry crop this year? Marcus Polk says he is fixed up for buying them in any quantity from a quart on up. He is stationed at Marion Gore's corner. If you have any to sell, bring them in.

Educated Blackberries

Prof. Montgomery gave me two quarts of the latest style dewberries last Saturday. They are the kind that are being cultivated to some extent in Chilton County now. They are grown for shipping purposes. Maybe they will take all right with folks who live where the good old-fashioned blackberry is not known. They are nice all right. But I prefer to have my blackberries, the kind that grow wild on nearly every hillside in Alabama.

Acting the Fool

In plain English, my opinion is that the bonus marchers who have set out to take the United States government by storm and collect the soldier bonus are acting the fool. From what I have been able to learn, the crowd engaged in the effort are nothing but a discontented and ill-advised group made up of a little squad from widely scattered places, and unidentified with any of the reputable organizations of ex-service men. It is the old Coxey's Army idea, and will amount to nothing, other than causing lots of serious minded people to wonder what kind of notions have got into the heads of some of the ex-soldiers. I am glad that the American Legion does not countenance, encourage, or support such methods.

A Danger

It is not clear just what Alabama might do by imposing an income tax, following in the wake of the dizzy federal income taxes which are provided for in the new tax measures. It certainly looks as if Washington intended licking the income tax platter clean. Four per cent on the first $4,000 and 8 per cent on $5,000 and a gradual surtax beginning with 1 per cent additional beginning with $6,000. Under the new provisions a single man with an income minus exemptions of $5,000 would pay $400 a year and if the state should put a like affliction upon him he would pay $800 a year. The governments are going to keep up develing the taxpayer until the time will come when nobody will rise when the band plays. "The Star-Sprangled Banner."—Selma Times-Journal.

A DISCUSSION OF SCHOOL FINANCES

Where Does the Money Come From To Carry On Our Schools?

(By B. Lawrence)

I realize that in dealing with figures or statistics in an article for the press or in a speech, there is danger of dryness. In this article it shall be my purpose to avoid this fault insofar as I can. The figures given are of vital interest to everyone interested in the improvement of our schools.

Let me ask that in consideration of the sums spent for the various objects you remember also the relative size. At one time some of the members of the County Board of Education and I were in Montgomery. We had dinner at a cafe. One member of the board ordered fish. When the waitress brought the fish to him it was longer than the large platter (not plate) on which it was lying, the head over one end and the tail stretched out over the other. "What a fish!" he exclaimed.

We walked out on the street and saw a boy driving a Shetland pony and exclaimed, "What a little pony!" The horse weighed thousands of times more than the fish. "What a fish!" "What a horse!" Ten thousand dollars would be a big sum of money to most everyone of us, but when that sum of money is spent for 200 or more different places and purposes it immediately shrinks into units of $50.00.

According to the school census of 1930 (the last census) there were 7,368 white children and 1,343 negro children in Chilton County. If these children enter school and pass a grade every year, there are 12 years each one of them must be taught. A very few years ago only a small number indeed thought of going beyond what was then the seventh grade. Now most of these children and parents as well, are planning for high school graduation. Our schools are crowded. Teachers are overloaded in many, many of the schools, but it takes 147 white teachers for them and 32 negro teachers.

Now the thing you naturally begin or should begin to think about is where the money comes from to finance this program. As in all departments of government the answer is found in the sources and amounts of taxes collected. So fas as the advalorem taxes are concerned, you can look at your tax receipt and tell something about it. Looking at it you will find like this: State (going to the state) .65; County gen. 50c and Special Road 25c and going to Commissioners Court .75; County special school tax 30c and a district school tax 30c and going to board of education .60.

Both the Commissioners Court and the County Board of Education have lost heavily as a result of the decreased assessed valuation in Alabama Power Company property. The school revenues are those which we are interested in just now.

There are two sources of revenues for the schools; those coming from the county taxes and those coming from the state. The following are the county sources: County 3 mill tax, $40,369.64; district 3 mill tax, $37,736.14; poll tax, $1,765.50, total, $79,871.28.

Te revenues have been greatly reduced this year as mentioned above. The state revenues for Chilton county are: General fund, $45,571.06; bonus fund, $3,000; revolving fund, $1,000; county high school fund, $4,500; attendance fund, $7,933.23; rural high school fund, $7,052.85; vocational education, $8,589.92; total, $74,647.06.

The general fund is made up from the state three-mill tax, the interest on the surplus revenue fund from the Federal Government, the interest and income from the 16th section land grant fund. These revenues are collected the year previous to the one in which they are spent. In other words, the funds supposed to be available for the scholastic year 1931-1932 were collected in the fiscal year 1930-1931, but $17,256.42 of this fund has never been paid to the county by the State of Alabama. Neither has any part of the rural high school fund nor the $3,000 bonus, the attendance or rural high school fund, for this year. Only a part of the county high school fund has been paid. We hold other miscellaneous warrants that have not been paid.

The bonus fund is a legislative appropriation made to each county which votes a county-wide tax. One thousand dollars for each mill of county-wide taxes collected is paid. Chilton County levies and collects a county three mill tax and receives $3,000 from the bonus fund. Most counties of the state have a 4-mill county tax and therefore get $4,000 of the bonus fund.

The revolving fund is for elementary supervision. The first step toward equalization of educational opportunities is to be found in this fund. The state has created a much larger equalization fund. However Chilton county does not get any part of this because we have not yet helped ourselves as far as the counties have which share in it.

The attendance fund is appropriated on the basis of average daily attendance. We have but one condition to meet in order to share in this fund. Any county in order to draw the full amount of this fund must employ a child welfare and attendance officer. The employment of this officer brings the county $7,933.23 more than we would otherwise get.

Almost every day someone asks why we are not getting the state appropriations. The State of Alabama has one terasurer for all funds. Not enough money is being collected to take care of every department of state with its present program. The state officials, convict department, Bryce hospital, health department, and every other department of the state is being taken care of while schools must wait. This is in the face of the fact certain revenues are collected specifically for education. The remedy for this, no doubt, must be found in creating a separate treasurer of school funds. This could be done without creating a new department and without extra expense. In this way school funds would not be mixed with the other state funds and therefore no opportunity to spend school monies for other than school purposes. The friends of education would not be making the complaint they are if schools had shared on a basis with other departments of state. The fact is they have been made the goat. The children would have been the ones to have carried the loss had it not been for school officials and teachers stepping forward and in a sacrificial way, unsurpassed and unmatched by any other professional group anywhere, assumed the responsibility and taken the loss themselves.

New Trustees Elected For County Schools

(By W. L. Sanders, Member of County Board)

The board of education is glad to recognize the newly elected trustees and they welcome you into the educational field. I feel that they will pledge you their cooperation in promoting educational interests in Chilton County.

There is a great deal that can be said in regard to a trustee and his work and right here I am going to take advantage of this opportunity.

For a man to be a good trustee he must be of a sacrificial spirit, always ready to quit his work when duty calls him to his school. He should be of a leading spirit to get the cooperation of his fellow patrons. He should be reasonable in the assessment of incidental fees and see to it that all pay alike. He should in a public manner have the books audited, showing the receipts and disbursements of all incidental funds, therefore clearing away the idea (as some have it) that the money has been misused. A trustee should prove to the patrons that it is economy to keep the building in good repair, to obtain a good library, to have the best equipment possible, sanitary water fountains, sanitary out-buildings, and the yards in a clean and neat condition. All of this "when carried out" will mean much to the community as well as to the individual child.

A trustee should never conceive the idea that he is going to satisfy everybody, for this is almost impossible, but always be ready to return a smile for every criticism he may receive. The trustee should remember these words that "where there is no sacrifice there is no reward."

Home Economics

(By Miss Leacy Newell)

The evolution of Home making education is as interesting as the evolution of the scientific invention of today. When the work was first put into the schools, only cooking and sewing were taught, that is, just the preparation of food and the fundamentals of serving. Later the course was known as domestic science, and as the work grew and more phases of home making were added, it was given the name of home economics. The field has broadened, and today it includes all phases of home making. It is these home making courses that vocational schools offer.

Three years of home economics are offered to the student. The chief purpose of the first year's work is the personal development of the high school girl and the solving of her personal problems. This instruction is given in units of personal relationship, house, clothing, and foods.

The second year's work is based on the interest, ideals and skill developed during the first year. Family living and art applied to home and clothing are emphasized. The units offered this year are: health of the family, food, family relationship, applied art and clothing.

In the third year instruction given in the other two years is made use of with emphasis on organization and management problems of home making. These units are: home management, child development, house, clothing and foods.

School instruction produces small results unless practical application is made. Home economics has been criticized because the girls did not put into operation at home the knowledge that they are supposed to have attained at school.

It is through the home project work that interest in home work is stimulated. In this phase, a minimum of sixty hours is required of every girl taking vocational home making education. One-half unit of credit may be given on the home project provided the girl does one hundred and fifty hours of high grade work, and that she includes three phases of home economics in the project. A girl also must be in good standing in school, that is, she must make good grades in all subjects before she is allowed this ertra credit on home work. Home projects help the teacher and the student. The teacher finds out if she is teaching material that may be used by the girl, and the girl finds out how well she is understanding school instruction and whether or not she is able to use it at home.

Vocational home making education schools have three or more rooms set apart for teaching this work. Rooms and equipment are very important factors in teaching home making. One room is used for a clothing laboratory; the second is the dining and living room combination; and the third is the food laboratory. These rooms should be as attractive, sanitary, and convenient as possible. The food laboratory is divided into unit kitchens. Each unit kitchen is equipped as a single kitchen in order that the girl may become experienced in preparing and serving foods under as nearly the same condition as she would at home.

Vocational home economics strives to reach the adults not only through the students, but through adult evening schools. The schools aim to acquaint the home maker for the job with scientific easy and practical methods affecting her work and give opportunity for the members of the class to pass on to other useful information they have gained through the experience of outside study.

The schools in Chilton county offering vocational home economics are Jemison High school and Isabella High School.

ORGANIZED CHILD WELFARE WORK IN STATE OF ALABAMA

Child Welfare Means Family Welfare; The Attendance Officer Is the Link Between the Home and the School, Tying Together the Home, the School, and the Community.

(By Mrs. C. E. Stapp, County Welfare Worker)

The State Child Welfare Department was organized in December 1919. A brief statement of its duties as provided by law included a plan for: (1) The promotion of higher standards of work in all child-caring agencies; (2) enforcement of laws to prevent premature exploitation of children; (3) individual care and treatment in cases of dependent or neglected children who would otherwise grow up in ignorance or crime; (4) rounding out of a coordinated program of all agencies public and private, for socially handicapped children in Alabama.

Prior to the time the State Child Welfare Department was established, a Sate-wide Juvenile Court Law was enacted first in 1907, rewritten in 1909, 1915 and again in 1923. It was apparently the first intention of the legislature that the development of children's work in the counties should center around the juvenile court. As far back as 1919, however, there was a noticeable change in the trend of thought putting the emphasis on school attendance, family welfare, recreation and suitable work in prevention of dependency and deliquency, the recognition of the physical and mental defects, the correction of the first and training of the second, rather than on the particular functions of the court. At that time the first compulsory attendance law was enacted and after arranging for appointment of attendance officers the act set forth the provision that this should make possible the employment of persons by the court of commissioners and the board of education jointly.

The county child welfare board act was passed in 1923. This made a definite shift from the court to the welfare board as the center for the development of child welfare work in the county. At this point the quality of the work began to be judged more by the number of cases which were adjusted away from the court rather than on the number taken into the courts. The day of probation officers who were regarded as police officers dealing with the child offender has passed. The board is not a new one imposed on the county, but is largely made up of existing boards, the judge of the juvenile court is chairman. One member of the board of commissioners is appointed on the board. The county superintendent of schools and the president of the county board of education are members and the judge has the responsibility of appointing the three remaining members at least two of whom must be women. In many counties it has become the custom for health officers, farm agents, home demonstration agents, etc., to become advisory members, thus making it possible to correlate and co-ordinate the activities of all the units in meeting the needs of children. It is the right of the county board of child welfare to employ a county superintendent of child welfare and assistants and to fix their salaries with the consent of the county board of commissioners and board of education. It is their responsibility to arouse community interest in the needs of the handicapped and to organize the social forces of the community to meet these needs. They should also give direction and guidance to these activities through consideration of specific cases and problems. They should provide a contingent fund to meeet the problems of emergency relief. Judge L. H. Reynolds, Commissioner Cobb, Superintendent B. Lawrence, C. C. Conway, I. J. Quinn, Miss Zora Guy, and Mrs. Pope Payne are members of the Chilton County child welfare board.

In 1927 the State Board of Education adopted the county child welfare board plan and also prescribed the qualifications for the county workers employed for attendance work, this being their duty by law. The State Child Welfare Commission, who, under the law, provides the qualifications of the person employed by the county child welfare board as probation officer, concurred in the action of the State board of Education setting forth the following qualifications: (1) graduation from a recognized college or university; (2) three years teaching experience or experience in some organized social agency; (3) definite social training.

Child welfare means family welfare. We cannot seperate the child from the family today with the expectation of getting the best out of the embryonic citizen. Today we in Alabama know what we didn't recognize ten years ago, and that is that greater emphasis should be placed on preserving the child's family and kinship ties.

By reason of the organization of the county child welfare board the county child welfare superintendent performs not only the service of probation officer to the juvenile court, but that of attendance officer for the public schools. The school is the avenue through which all children must approach citizenship. The home is the alpha and omega of his journey. If the home be too weak to serve the school, can the school itself overcome this weakness? It is doubtful! If the home be unfit, unworthy, can the child himself, in his turn, set up a more worthy home? That is doubtful too! The attendance officer is merely the link between the home and the school, supporting the teacher in her work, encouraging the home to overcome its weakness, and finally tying together home, school, and community. Until the home can be brought to the level of the school, until the community's influence may be made constructive forces and not destructive, we shall continue to let child life go to waste and continue to use the tax payer's money in vain.

The school attendance officer cannot, in any given county, of herself, do all the things needed to be done for the children, but there are supervisors, there are parent-teachers associations, there are missionary societies, there many, many individuals and agencies who can lend a hand.

ELEMENTARY SUPERVISION

(By Mrs. Reid Mullins, Elementary Supervisor)

In the spring of 1928, the County Board of Education, for the first time, employed a supervisor of elementary schools. The present supervisor began work in this county, September 1928. The employment has been for a term of nine months until this year, when it was cut one month. The fund given by the State to the County Board of Education for supervision is called the Revolving Fund, and is given to counties only when the county puts on supervision.

The duties of the supervisor are to the elementary grades in all schools in the county. It is her duty to keep in as close touch as possible with the teachers and pupils. When the supervisor makes a visit to the school room, she goes not as an inspector, but as a helping teacher. She observes the lessons to determine to what extent the children are learning. It is the purpose of supervision in this county to help the child get the most there is to get from the time spent in school. Immediately after each class-room visit, the supervisor and teacher have a private conference, in which they study the child and the effect of the teaching upon the child. Since the supervisor spends her entire time in the study of children, she is able, after hearing them recite, to assist the teacher in making further plans for the work of teaching the child so that he may get the most in the shortest length of time. This also helps the teacher in organizing her work so that she will not have unnecessary burdens.

Every year there is an outstanding objective toward which teacher and supervisor work. Up to this time most concern has been placed upon reading. It is a settled fact that the child must be taught to read, and to read rapidly and understandingly, if he is to be able to grasp the thought in the other subjects which he studies. Much stress is put upon the value of good silent reading, that is, reading silently and then making a report or answering questions about the subject matter read.

According to the regular reports sent to the State Department of Education from this county, the following are some statistics which deal with activities for the year:

Two hundred and fifty-three visits were made to class-rooms; 522 conferences were held with individual teachers; 48 1-2 days were spent in the office making plans for the year; 4 supervisors conferences were attended.

RIGINAL

BAT BLOOMIN PREACHER

Elder Blossom Fills His Appointment On the 1st Sunday in June 1932

It is remarkable how some people will fool themselves, or let Satan fool them. My Subject this morning is "Nakedness." So we go to the first part of Genesis for our lesson. As you read along you will see where Adam and Eve pinned some fig leaves together and made aprons for a covering. And then just a few verses further on you will see where God made them clothes from goat skins. The first pair there in the garden was for God's glory. God made man for that purpose, but they were too weak for the test. They transgressed His law, and by that transgression brought sin into the world.

It would be hard for me to make you believe that all would have been joy and peace and happiness, if they had been strong enough to have resisted that temptation. I am sure that there would never have been a hospital in that garden. There would have been no doctors there. There would have been no graves there. No tomb-stone agents. I feel sure that lightening would never have struck anyone. I don't beleave that the trees in that garden would have been blown down by a cyclone. The children would never have known what a fly-swatter was, and as for devorces, you may be sure no one would ever have wanted one. How different everything would have been, if sin had not made its appearence in the world.

When Adam and his wife transgressed God's law, they discovered that they were naked and tred to hide from God among shrubbery. Their bodies were naked or unclothed. They must have felt badly about it. I am sure their sin was causing sorrow and anguish, and their futile efforts to hide themselves, and their failure to do so must have added to their sorrow. Then Satan prompted another action that proved a failure and that was to pin fig leaves together for an apron. Now friends, do you know that you are just as naked in a spiritual sense, as they were in a physical sense. There were no clothes for them; none had been provided, because none were needed until after they transgressed the law.

So it was with their souls. A redeemer was not needed because they had not sinned. Now see how God went to their rescue. God loved them so He made for them clothes of goat sins. God had compassion on them He saw how they were trying to make themselves presentable, but failing in every effort because their aprons just covered a part of their bodies. How good it was of God to make them some clothes that would hide their nakedness. But the most serious part of it all was that they stood condemned before God. Even though their bodies are now covered, their souls were naked. Some provision must now be made for their redemption. There was no covering for their souls. Then the great heart of God went out to them in a great wave of love and compassion. God looked down through the ages to our day and beyond, on to the end of time, and could see the teeming millions of men, all lost, with no provision made for their redemption.

Would it not have been an awful thing for all men, women and children to come into the world and live out their lives in sin and then be forever banished from the presence of God? An awful thing to contemplate. Just think, friends, what an awful condition this world would be in if the religion of Jesus Christ had never been known in the hearts of men—the souls of all men standing naked and condemned in the sight of God. With sin in every known form, running its full course, this world would be a seething hell, filled with the exultant laughter of demons dancing in their glee over their triumph, rejoicing over the fact that they had outwitted God. Sin in its lowest form would be the rule instead of the exception. Men would have no conscience, have nothing to check them. This world would be filled with gambling and drunkenness, there would be no marriages, all children would be illegimate. Oh my friends, the picture is revolting in the extreme. My heart is sickened at the thought.

Let's turn the other side and view it, see it's beauty, it's purity and loveliness. God comes to the rescue. Let's hear the first promise, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpents head. Jesus was born of a woman just as other men are, the seed of a woman, and in his temptation in the wilderness, came out triumphant, thereby, bruising the serpent's head or subduing the forces of evil in the world, and through Him, God placed His spirit in the hearts of men and gave to them knowledge of good and evil and a sonscience to check them in their downward course. If a man will put on Christ, he is covered completely. He is a hiding place for sinful men. God con't see a man's sins through the blood of Jesus. Friends, why go on day after day naked or unclothed condemned before God, when there is a covering for you just for the asking. It will not cost you one thing, because the price has been paid already. I assure you that if you will take this covering which is so freely offered you, you will never be put to the trouble of procuring another. It will not only last throughout this life, but will answer for every need when you are called to appear before your God. Are you going to continue to tdy to hide from God by wearing an apron of wilting and decaying fig leaves, which is the devils excuse for a man's sins? Let me beg you to hear the call of the gospel today, and break away from the cluthches of Satan, who's greatest delight is to keep you in a naked and condemned condition in the sight of God.

May these words be used of God to bring some to a knowledge of the truth, is my earnest prayer. Will you now listen while I read my poem.

Why will men dress in their very best
When they are to meet their friends,
And stand before God, naked and condemned?

Get rid of those improvised excuses.
Those worthless aprons of decay,
Which will fall down from around you
And leave you exposed on that day.
Hear the gospel of the Son of God
As it sounds today in your ears.
That offer you a robe of righteousness,
That you will not be ashamed to wear.

Stand and be dismissed.

COOPER DEFEATS DEATSVILLE

On last Saturday, June 4, Deatsville came up to Cooper with the thought of administering defeat to the latter, having received a set back by Cooper earlier in the season. At the first of the game it looked as if they were going to be successful, having scored three runs in the first inning. Rutland, pitching for Cooper did not seem to find himself at the first of the game. Deatsville scored one run in the 2nd and one in the 3rd inning. Foshee relieved Rutland at the first of the fourth inning and held them the rest of the game, allowing only one run.

Cooper's scoring was scattered all through the game, scoring one run in the second, one in the third, three in the fourth, two in the seventh and one each in the 8th and 9th. Those who did the hitting for Cooper were Ray, Morgan, Watkins and Tatum. The stars in the field were H. Rutland, Penson and Morgan. Those hitting best for Deatsville were Cox and Lewis. Lesson for June 12

JUDAH THE TRUE BROTHER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:18-45:15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!

PRIMARY TOPIC—Keeping a Promise.

JUNIOR TOPIC —Benjamin's Big Brother.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Boys and Girls Can Do for Their Family.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC —True Brotherhood.

I. Joseph Severely Tests His Brethren (42:9-44:17).

Driven by sore need because of the famine, Joseph's brethren came to Egypt to buy food. As Joseph personally dispensed the food, he immediately recognized his brethren upon their arrival in Egypt, but they did not recognize him. In this test Joseph

1. Accused them of being spies (42:9-17). He declared that they had come to see the nakedness of the land. In spite of their protests of innocency, he cast them into prison and demanded that their younger brother be brought as a proof of the truthfulness of their word.

2. He kept Simeon as a hostage (42:18-38). Joseph declared that because he feared God he sent the rest home with provisions for their families, demanding that Benjamin be brought to him. To further impress them with his wisdom and power, Joseph ordered the money of every one to be restored in his sack. Upon the discovery of the money they exclaimed, "What hath God done to us?"

3. Benjamin's peril (44:2-13). By a clever device Joseph's cup was placed in Benjamin's sack and was used as an occasion for bringing them back on the charge of theft. Convicted now of their sins and realizing the seriousness of their situation, Judah pleaded for the release of Benjamin. Benjamin was now being held as the one supposedly guilty of theft.

II. Judah's Pleas (44:13-34).

1. For the turning away of Joseph's anger (vv. 18-32). In this plea he recited the history of the family, their coming to Egypt, and appealed to Joseph on the basis of the effect upon Jacob, their father, if Benjamin were not permitted to accompany them home. In most powerful and persuasive language he set forth the love of Jacob for Benjamin, the son of his old age, and the sole survivor of his beloved wife, Rachel. His plea was as much for his father as for Benjamin.

2. That he himself might be kept in slavery instead of Benjamin (vv. 33, 34). In this he showed his true worth, that is, as being worthy of the trust reposed in him by Jacob his father.

III. Joseph Reveals His Identity (45:1-15).

After such a plea as Judah had made it is not surprising that Joseph could no longer restrain himself.

1. He declared his identity (vv. 1-3). This act on the part of Joseph troubled them. It ought to have made them glad. Under ordinary circumstances this would have been a time of exceeding joy, but their sins were in the way. This not only affords a beautiful example of forgiving love, but most beautifully illustrates Christ's dealing with his brethren, the Jews. When the seven years of famine came his brethren who had left him and sold him were compelled to come to him for aid. Joseph dealt severely with his brethren to test them and to bring them to repentance.

2. He bade his brethren come near to him (vv. 4-8). When he revealed himself to them, the remembrance of their sins pierced them through. How just it would have been now for Joseph to take vengeance upon them. Joseph's first question was about his father, showing that his desire was to put their thoughts far away from their crime. He invited them to come near unto him and assured them that God had overruled their crime for salvation. They meant it for evil, but it was part of God's plan for good. He comforted them. This is exactly what Christ will do for his brethren, the Jews. He will become reconciled unto them and become their Saviour and Benefactor. Just as all Egypt was obliged to come to Joseph for sustenance, and become the servants of Pharaoh through him, so will all the world come to Christ for his blessing and be reconciled to God through him.

3. Joseph sent his brethren away with good news (vv. 9-15). As soon as Joseph's brethren knew him and were reconciled to him they were sent with glad tidings to their father. As soon as the Jews come to know Jesus Christ as the Messiah he will send them away to the ends of the earth with the good news of his saving grace.

Stick to It

COOPER WINS OVER MARBURY

On last Friday afternoon, June 3, Cooper mowed down the much hearlded Marbury base ball team with a 5 to 2 licking on the latter's field. The game got off at a slow start with Cooper spotting. Marbury had a two-run lead in the second inning. This seemed as far as they could go, for there were no more scores for the Marbury team the remainder of the game. Foshee replaced Watkins in the 5th inning and hurled superb ball the rest of the game. Not to be outdone, Cooper scored two runs in the 5th inning, which tied the score. Again in the 6th they scored two more runs. The 7th inning ended the scoring, when Cooper scored one more run. The last run was made off of H. Dennis, and the first four, being made off M. Dennis. At the end of the 7th Coach Bodiford decided that his boys had had enough for the day, and with the consent of Manager Thornton of Coopers, called the game off at this time. Marbury had already suffered defeat at the hands of Cooper on the previous Saturday at Cooper.

The batteries for the game were: for Cooper, Watkins, Foshee, Ray and Allen. For Marbury, M. Dennis, H. Dennis and Mitchell.

- At the Theatre -

"The Road House Murder," At Wadesonian Friday and Saturday this Week

Reversing all conventional methods of plot development, "The Roadhouse Murder," coming to the Wadesonian Theatre with Eric Linden and Dorothy Jordon in the featured leads gives a startling new treatment of the ever popular mystery theme.

In this RKO-Radio picture, the central characters, blunder upon a double murder in a desolate country roadhouse and discover the identity of the killers. This information is shared with the audience and there is never any mystery as to who actually committed the crime.

The film's amazing story complications result from the hero's weird plan of assuming the guilt for the murderers and the lement of suspense centers about the uncertainty of his fate. When the evidence that means the hero's safety disappears, the suspense reaches a tensity which never relaxes until the final fade out.

Linden takes the part of an adventurous young reporter on a New York newspaper and Miss Jordon has the role of the girl who shares his thrilling adventures. They are supported by Rosco Ates, stammering comedian; Phyllis Clara, blonde newcomer from the New York and London stage; Bruce Cabot, Purnell Pratt, David Landau and Rosco Kearns. J. Walter Ruben directed.

One real husband and three reel husbands is the matrimonial score chalked up to Helen Twelvetrees within the lest few months.

Weddings both plain and fancy have featured her screen life and her real life. It started with "Millie" in which she became the bride of James Hall. Next she said her "I do's" for William Blakewell in "A Woman of Experience." Then she went away and became Mrs. Frank Woody.

These weddings were all simple little affairs, even the real one, but in "Bad Company," her new Pathe picture at the Wadesonian Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, June 15 and 16, she is involved in a wedding to John Garrick that makes up in lavishness for all of the others and has some splendor left over for several pictures to come. It is the kind of wedding that a girl would dream about if all the money in the world was at her disposal.

Rose-colored arbors cover the carpeted aisle to the altar and a huge blossom covered bed opens at the finish and releases cooing doves all over the church. Orchids and gardenias are carried by the bridesmaids and the bride wears a wedding gown especially designed by Gwen Wakeling Pathe's costume expert.

"Bad Company" is an adaptation of Jack Lait's, exciting story "put on the spot," and it is being directed by Tay Garnett. Ricardo is seen in a featuring role completing the trio which attained such success in "Her Man."

Miss Madelyn Orr and Mr. Curtis Are Married

The marriage of Miss Madelyn Orr, daughter of Mrs. Franklin Orr, of Clanton, to Vester B. Curtis, took place on Saturday at the Presbyterian church, in the presence of a large assemblage of guests from over the state. Dr. Donald C. McGuire, performed the ceremony. The decorations were of much beauty. The decorations within the chancel were of palms and ferns, which made background for jing gladiolia and pastel shaded roses and snapdragons. Standards were placed at intervals down the center aisle, and to these were tied boquets of delphiniums, in soft shades and pink rose buds. The altar held candelabra buring tapers and in the center was a huge basket of pink gladioli, showered with rose buds.

The first of the bridal party to enter were groomsmen and ushers. These were Dr. John Martin, James Boyd, Lawrence Rutter, all of Montgomery, D. M. Corley of Birmingham.

The bride's matrons were Mrs. A. B. Curtis and Mrs. W. G. Orr of Birmnigham; Miss Sara Cummings maid of honor, of Clearwater, Fla. Mrs. Curtis was in a gown of Spanish lace, shaded from pink to blue, designed by Emmett Joyce; Mrs. Orr was in a gown of peau de Agne, of pale blue; Miss Cummings was in crepe Elizabeth made with pannels of Chantilly lace, in peach color. They carried bouquets of snapdragons, roses and delphiniums, in shades matching the gowns.

The junior bridesmaids were Celia Gerald and Peggy Page. They were in frocks of pink and blue, respectively, made on princess lines, of taffeta with flared skirt of net. They carried colonial boquets of roses and snapdragons.

Margaret Wade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wade, of Russellville, was flower girl. She wore a frock of pink net over taffeta, made in colonial style, and carried a basket of rose petals.

John Burton Higgins, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Higgins, was ring bearer. He wore a suit of ivory satin.

Train bearers were Jean Mullins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Renfroe Mullins and Martha Higgins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Higgins.

They wore ankle length frocks of pink net over taffeta, made in colonial style. The neck was cut round and worn off the shoulders.

The bride entered with her brother, William Gray Orr, of Birmingham, who gave her in marriage. Mr. Orr had for best man, Arthur B. Curtis, of Birmingham. The bride wore a lovely gown of ivory bridal satin, made in long lines, of princess mode. A scalloped cutting was a lovely detail of the gown. Molded to the figure, the knees, it flared in gracefullness, into a train two yards long.

The bodice had a square neck. The sleeves were long and ended in points over the hand.

The veil of ivory bridal illusion had a cap of princess lace, and to each side were clusters of orange blossoms, which extended in a half wreath across the back of the head. The bridal boquet was of orchids, and valley lilies showered.

The music was a beautiful part of the impressive ceremony. Alonzo Meek, organist, of Selma, was director of the program. Soloist was Ernest Leatherwood of Selma. "Because," (d'Hardolet), was sung, and at the conclusion of the prayer, "Prayer Perfect," was sung. Misses Jane and Helen Roberts, violinists, played selections.

The reception which followed at the home of the bride's mother, assembled many guests. The house was decorated in flowers arranged in tall standards.

The bride's table was centered with the cake, made in tiers, and embossed in valley lilies and pink roses.

This rested on a plateau of valley lilies and maiden hair fern.

Antique candelabra on the table held ivory tapers. Salvers were filled with wedding bonbons in form of flowers. Presiding at the table were Mrs. R. B. Harrison, of Guin, Mrs. E. B. Rockwell of Selma.

Miss Sara Cummings was in charge of the bride's book. The reception line was composed of Mrs. M. R. Orr, Mrs. L. A. Curtis of Cullman, the bridal couple and their attendants.

Mrs. Orr, mother of the bride, wore black lace, with a crosage of sweetpeas.

Mrs. Curtis, mother of the groom, was in black crepe Elizabeth. Her corsage was of Columbia roses.

Among out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Elsberry, Mrs. W. E. Elsberry, Sr., Mrs. John Martin, Mrs. Bessie E. Rushin.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Lyman of Montevallo; Mrs. L. A. Curtis, Miss Reba Kilpatrick, Mrs. Gladys Murphy all of Cullman, Mrs. C. P. Beddow, Mr. and Mrs. Noel Beddow, Miss Beddow, Mr. and Mrs. Terance Ryan, Miss Ryan, Miss Lampkin of Birmingham, Miss Chadwick of Ensley, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Boyd, Miss Lydia Campbell, Mrs. Pointer, Miss Julia Clark, Mrs. W. W. Harper, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Young, Alonzo Meek, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Leatherwood, Mrs. Harry Marks, Mrs. W. E. Stoddard and Mrs. E. B. Rockwell of Selma.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis have gone on a wedding trip, after which they will be at home in New Orleans, where Mr. Curtis is connected with one of the large wholesale firms of the country.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Curtis of Cullman. He is a member of civic and patriotic organizations. He is of families, which had founding in Texas. His parents were among those prominent in the development of North Alabama. Mrs. Curtis is the granddaughter of the late James Franklin Orr, I, who founded the town of Orrville, Ala., many years before the War between the states. He was an inventor and was originally for North Carolina. She attended Womans College, and has a wide circle of friends in Montgomery. She is vivacious, attractive and talented and has been a leader in life in several phases in Clanton.—Montgomery Advertiser.

ODD THINGS AND NEW—By Lame Bode

THE PRACTICAL JOKER

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Some foreign countries, as highly civilized as our own perhaps, once followed the beneficient custom of transporting out of the country citizens whose procedure was not in accordance with those principles which seemed to tend to the development of the best sort of society. Thieves and murderers and house breakers and those whose moral presence was objectionable were loaded into the proper sort of conveyance and gently deposited upon some remote shore from which escape was difficult or impossible. Thus isolated, many of them grew up into good citizens who practiced economy and built cities and forgot their criminal tendencies.

I am not at all sure but that it was an admirable way to get rid of objectionable characters for whom capital punishment would seem too severe or too lenient; I should at least recommend it for the man who points an alleged empty gun at your head and for the practical joker. I see no good reason why the practical joker should not be wiped out.

He has no sense of humor for humor really is kind, sympathetic, pleasant spirited. A humorous man has no intention of giving anyone pain or discomfort. He wants to laugh, it is true but seldom at the victim of his joke but with him.

A freshman last Christmas, a thousand miles from home and too poor to make the journey across country, was desperately homesick. All his friends were gone, his boarding house was closed, and he was quite alone, away from home at Christmas for the first time in his life. A call came over the telephone and a man's voice spoke inviting the boy to dinner at the home of one of his professors. His gloom vanished, some one had thought of him. When he called at the professor's house no one was there. It was a practical joke which some keen-minded acquaintance had played upon him, and he had no recourse.

Funny, wasn't it?

Low Corn Yields Due To Lack of Nitrogen

A shortage of nitrogen is, to a large extent, responsible for our low corn yields. This has been shown by a summary of more than a thousand field demonstrations in which an application of quick-acting nitrogen more than doubled the average yield.

The most economical and profitable nitrogen application for corn is a side dressing of Chilean nitrate of soda when the plants are knee high. The usual application is 100 to 200 pounds per acre, distributed by hand or machine.

At dangerous railroad crossings it is a good idea to check and double check, and also to watch and pray.

Summer School at Auburn for Teachers of Vocational Agriculture in Alabama

(By J. P. Montgomery)

The work given to vocational teachers at the summer school at Auburn each year, for a period of three weeks, is for the purpose of strengthening the teachers in their work back at the school where he teaches.

Back when cotton was a good price and it was profitable to poison cotton, a practice that grew since I graduated from college, an opportunity was given to learn just when to poison the boll weevil. It was a surprise to me when I learned that you had to open each square to make correct count. I thought that only the squares that were flared open were punctured.

Several summers at Auburn a group of exercises were offered to teachers. They consisted of such work as spraying, terracing, testing milk, culling poultry, etc. If any teacher felt that he was weak on any exercise, he had a chance to learn it thoroughouly.

I worked a part of a summer in a woodshop under a trained instructor, improving myself in woodworking. I worked another part in a blacksmith shop.

Special courses have been offered in landscape gardening and poultry. New practices such as the vaccination of poultry to prevent roup, and the iodine vermicide treatment for worms, were taught along with other fundamentals.

There has been an increasing interest in marketing farm products in the last few years. Several courses have been given to teachers of vocational agriculture on marketing.

Every year at Auburn, the teachers go over the experiment station. There, the experiments being conducted in every branch of agriculture as, dairying, swine, poultry, gardens, orchards strawberries, cotton, corn, etc., are given. Living in a truck section, I have taken an unusual interest in anything pertaining to horticulture and insect control. Experiment station work is the real basis for teaching vocational agriculture.

The teachers of vocational agriculture have an opportunity to hear addresses and discussions from outstanding educators and scientists as, Dr. Knapp, Dean Judd, Dean Funchess, Dr. Hobdy, and other men leading in their particular field of education.

Improved methods and practices in teaching comes in for a fair share of the time at the summer school of instruction at Auburn. Among the improvements in that line has been the basing of the course on a survey made of the farms of fifty successful farmers in the school community. A yearly teaching plan of each subject to be taught was made and as many as 100 daily lesson plans.

A text book is used in the teaching of vocational agriculture, but it is used only as a guide, not as a daily text. The subject matter desired in teaching boys varies from a herd of cattle five miles from the school, which you want the boys to judge, to some farm practice used by a successful farmer or an experiment station test. Teaching vocational agriculture is not a subject that is easily organized. One day you may be away from the school selecting seed corn or teaching the laying off of terraces, another, you may be in the class-room analyzing a fertilizer test on hairy vetch and the next the boy may need to fix a plow in the shop, or make a self-feeder for poultry.

It takes a good deal of planning to properly instruct 30, 40 or 50 boys daily in vocational agriculture. For that reason a good deal of time is given at the summer school to the collection of material for teacing and devising ways and means to present the subject matter in the most effective way.

I have always come back from a summer school feeling encouraged and "ready to go."

EBENEZER—STANTON

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me to say a few words through your paper in regard to church work and depression. It seems that no one can tell when the depression will end, though many make attempts to say. More than a year ago it was said, "We are at the bottom of the depression curve," but we have been going right on down since then. I have watched with interest how people have used the depression as an excuse for everything. Of course, it enters into almost everything, but it is also used merely as an excuse. People use it as an excuse for not attending church. They say they do not have suitable clothes like other folks and that they do not have money for the offering. God does not expect that that we do not have, but that that we have, be it little or much.

The shame in it is not insufficient or unsuitable clothes and no money for the offering, but a lack of proper realization that Christ is counting on His children to carry on the work He has so graciously left to our care. The Gospel must be preached at all times, to all the world, under all circumstances and if we fail any of these we fail to measure up to what our blessed Lord expects of us. The proper amount of pride in matters of clothing, etc., is all right and needed, but we should brush aside over-much pride in matters of clothes and attend the Lord's house. For my part, if necessary, I could preach in clean overalls just as well as in fine clothes, which I have never had.

Next Sunday is our regular church day and I take this means of inviting all true and loyal Baptists to attend church with us. If there are those who are Baptists in name and something else in belief, you too, come and worship with us, if you will.

My subject will be something bearing on the doctrines of Christ. There is a real need for strong doctrinal messages among Baptists in some places especially. Emotional religion is sweeping some people off their feet and we as ministers are the ones who should give our people the real scriptural doctrines and the emotions will take care of themselves. "I was glad when they said unto us, let us go into the house of the Lord."—G. G. Williams.

Tom Thompson, Jr., of Selma is the guest of his aunt, Mrs. Lonza Parrish.

AMERICAN LEGION BEAT THORSBY

Good Game Played Last Friday; More Are On Schedule

Last Friday afternoon at Thorsby Clanton's American Legion Juniors defeated a like team of Thorsby boys by the score of 9 to 5.

Clanton kept a small lead throughout the game. Only in the seventh inning did Thorsby really threaten, when they started a rally which netted three runs, but here the Clanton team jammed on the brakes and the danger was over.

Clanton connected for nine hits off Lyon, while Atchison and Williams of Clanton allowed the Thorsby lads only four safeties. Several costly errors marred the game.

C. Jones and Ashcraft led Clanton's batters, while Robinson, Leary and Pate led for Thorsby.

FIRE DESTROYED J. W. FOSHEE HOME

Former Clanton Man Lost His Home At Kathleen, Florida

Kathleen, Fla., May 31.—Fire completely destroyed the six-room frame house belonging to J. W. Foshee, shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The lass is estimated at $3,000, with no insurance. It was the old Jerry Hancock home, located about three miles noth of Kathleen.

Mrs. Foshee and her daughter, Earline, had burned some trash in the living room fireplace a short time before, and evidently the breeze blew sparks to the roof of the rear of the house. Before the flames were discovered, the roof had fallen.

Four small buildings near the house were also destroyed, and practically all the furniture and clothing were burned. Neighbors formed a bucket brigade and saved the barn and crib.

It will be recalled that the home of Herman Foshee, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Foshee, was destroyed by fire about two months ago. He did not carry insurance. — Lakeland (Fla.) Ledger.

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

Our church is equipped with an electric bell system for the Sunday school work. Each Sunday morning at 9:45 this bell rings. This is new to many for they have the bad habit of coming late. Be on time next Sunday and see how the bell sounds.

Preaching at 11 a.m. and at 8 p.m. by the pastor. We heard two great messages last Sunday by Prof. Haskew. He spoke as a Layman to Laymen.

There will be preaching Sunday afternoon at Isabella at 3.30.

Since the close of our schools the attendance of Sunday school has dropped off. This should not be. Parents show your real interest in the well being of your children by bringing them to Sunday school. hen if you love your children, take them with you into the preaching service. If you want your family to be a credit to you and an honor to your country, you had better train them in the house of God.

Duke and Wilkins Win In Republican Run-off

Devaughn Is Close Behind Winner While Smith For School Board Is Outdistanced Easily By His Opponent Unofficial Returns Show

Unofficial returns from the Republican Run-off Primary in Chilton County Tuesday indicate that C. D. Duke won the nomination for Commissioner of the Fourth District in a very close race with O. L. Devaughn. The majority of Duke will perhaps not exceed fifty votes in the final count.

In the other race, for member of the County Board of Education, the unofficial returns indicate that C. L. Wilkins has a commanding majority over his opponent, John L. Smith. The final count will likely give Wilkins a majority of above 300.

Below we give a tabulation of the two races by boxes as the figures were given unofficially when the returning officers brought in the boxes Tuesday night:

Judge Tate Is Winner By "Close Shave"

Unofficial returns from the three counties comprising the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit early Wednesday morning indicated that Judge F. Lloyd Tate, incumbent, had defeated Arthur Glover by a narrow margin. Judge Tate's lead in Chilton and Autauga counties overcame the lead of Glover in Elmore.

Autauga, in 15 boxes out of 16, gave Tate 768 and Glover 683. Nineteen boxes out of 21 in Elmore gave Tate 1,738 and Glover 1,951. With one small box missing Chilton gave Tate a majority of 183, giving him the nomination unofficially by a margin of 55 votes.

New Tire Tax Heaviest of All Automobile Accessories Says Firestone Dealer

Announcement was made today by Mon Wyatt, of the Woco Service Station, Firestone dealer, that tire prices, now the lowest in history, will remain unchanged until midnight, June 20, when the new excise tax of from 10 to 15 per cent on tires and tubes becomes effective—the highest tax on any automobile accessory.

"A few days remain in which it is possible to save from 10 to 15 per cent by buying Firestone tires now," Mr. Wyatt said.

"The new billion dollar revenue bill signed by the President will have the inevitable effect of increasing many retail prices," continued Mr. Wyatt. "The thrifty will see the wisdom of taking advantage of the prevailing low prices.

"The prices on all grades of Firestone tires will remain at the lowest prices ever known until the date the tax becomes effective as long as our stock lasts, and the car and truck owners who act promptly will have the benefit of the saving."

A Tax Decision

Some of the intricacies of the law are far beyond the capacity of the mere layman taxpayer to understand. The State Tax Commission made a reduction of millions of dollars in the assessment of the Alabama Power Company in Chilton and Coosa counties where the company's great hydroelectric dams are located. It made no reduction in the assessments of the other taxpayers of those counties.

Resenting the action as an injustice and discrimination Chilton County appealed to the courts seeking to compel a re-assessment of the power company's properties.

The supreme court in an opinion delivered by Justice A. B. Foster, who was consel for the Alabama Power Company at the time he was appointed to the supreme bench, has now formally ruled against Chilton County and dismissed the case.

Dismissal was made by the motion of Attorney General Thomas E. Knight, Jr., setting forth that the appeals were not made by him or upon his authority. There were two cases, one brought up by the county officially, and the other in the name of a taxpayer. The court ruled that the county has no authority in such case. "The Attorney General, and perhaps the governor," says the decision, "are vested with the ultimate power conferred by the soverignty to control this sort of litigation."

As to the taxpayer, his appeal is dismissed as "seeking to force the state, by the unauthorized use of its name, to sontrol an administrative function of one of its officers, in respect to a matter which is the prerogative of the state."

The puzzling thing to the average layman taxpayer is that neither a citizen nor a county in its official capacity has the authority to go into court and protest against what they regard as a local taxation injustice and discrimination.—Editorial in Montgomery Journal.

Applying this regulation to our local situation, it means that on and after July 6, 1932, and until July 1, 1934, all first class letters mailed at the Clanton postoffice, regardless of where they are going, shall bear three cents postage for each ounce or fraction thereof.

SPEAKING TOUR IS CONTINUING

Keller and Harman Keep Up Their Bombardment For Schools

The campaign of publicity being directed by the Alabama Education Associaton shifted into high for the week ending Saturday when eleven engagements were filled in eight counties. Opening this week's schedule at Butler in Choctaw County on Wednesday, President Keller of the association divided time with Dr. Harman at Grove Hill on Thursday, where a large group of Clarke County citizens heard the two speakers. Friday night President Keller, in company with Superintendent Dowling of Tuscaloosa County, spoke at Blountsville and early Saturday moved to Marshall County, where the two speakers filled appointments at Albertville, Boaz, Guntersville and at Arab.

On Monday Dr. A. F. Harman, State Superintendent of Education, addressed an out-door mass meeting at Scottsboro and in addition to his speech at Grove Hill addressed an audience at Elba on Saturday, sharing time with President Shakelford of the Troy State Teachers College. On Friday Dr. Knapp, President of Auburn, spoke at Rockford, in Coosa County, and again at Russellville, in Franklin County, on Saturday. At Wetumpka on Friday Dr. H. J. Willingham, President of the State Teachers College at Florence, and L. N. Duncan, director of extension service at Auburn, were scheduled to address a large group of Elmore county citizens.

Three of the topics featured in each of President Keller's addresses of the past week were the economics already being practiced in the administration of the state's schools, the present unhappy plight of the teachers of the state, and the actual cost of education to the Alabama taxpayers. Answering questions which were asked in numbers of places as to the plans followed by other southern states in balancing their budgets, the plans used to date are: (1) A reduction of the expense of state government; (2) certain reorganizations of state departments to reduce overhead expenses; (3) new revenues secured from a levy of certain special taxes, not property taxes.

ENOUGH TO PUT HIM THERE

A man one day was visiting a lunatic asylum, and while walking in the grounds he met a patient to whom he said:

"How did you get here?"

The man replied: "Well sir, you see, I married a widow with a grown-up daughter, and then my father married my wife's daughter. That made my wife the mother-in-law of her father-in-law, and my father became my step-son. Then my stepmother, the daughter of my wife, had a son, and that boy, of course, was my brother, because he was my father's own son, and he was also my wife's step-son, and therefore, her grandson, and that made me the grand-father of my step-brother. Then my wife had a son, so my mother-in-law, the step-sister of my son, is also his grand-mother, because his step-sister is his wife. I am the brother of my own son, who is also the son of my step-grand-mother. I am my mother's brother-in-law, my wife is her own child's aunt, my son is my father's nephew, and I am my own grandfather.

"That is one reason I am here sir."

Mr. Arthur Littlejohn, of Birmingham, is spending several days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Littlejohn.

SECOND REQUEST MADE FOR FACTS

Commissioner Insist the "Man In the Moon" Back Up Charges

At its meeting last Friday the Commissioners Court of Chilton County expected to hear from "The Man in the Moon" with specific facts to back up his charges of "Graft in the County Road System." The Court understood it was agreed with him that he would come before the body and state his case. However, he failed to come. Whereupon the Court adopted the following statement, and ordered a copy of same sent to "The Man in the Moon."

The Commissioner Court last week in a letter to Mr. Chester Mims, known as "The Man in the Moon," requested him to present to the court the facts upon which he based certain statements headed "Graft in the County Road System." The Commissioners Court in its first session after this statement was made by Mr. Mims, requested that he give the Court all information that he had as to any graft in the County Road System, and respectfully requested Mr. Mims to come before the Court and give such information and the names of all parties from whom he might have secured such information. Mr. Mims came to the Probate Office on last Tuesday, June 7th, and stated that he would meet the Court on Friday, June 10th and present the facts he had in hand; and in his column of June 9th, he further stated that he had the facts and would come before the Court.

The Commissioners Court was in session all day Friday, June 10th, the date Mr. Mims stated he would come before the Court, and in fact, remained in session some time after the regular business was finished, for the purpose of allowing Mr. Mims full opportunity to present such matters, but Mr. Mims did no appear at or before the Court, as he had promised to do. In fact the Commissioners Court sent for Mr. Mims, but he could not be found in or around Clanton.

The Commissioners Court again respectfully requests Mr. Mims to present whatever evidence or facts or information or names of informers that he might have to the Court, and the Court might state if the charges are true the gravity of the same will permit and justify a special term of Commissioners Court, and the Court will be glad to assemble in special session at any time that it might suit Mr. Mims' convenience for this purpose.

In conclusion, we might state to Mr. Mims, as well as other citizens of the county, that we are always desirous of getting any information of any alleged wrongdoing or graft in any work of the County, and respectfully insist that such information, if any there be, be promptly brought before the Court, and the public may be assured of a thorough and painstaking investigation and the prompt punishment of the guilty.

THORSBY SECTION

Thorsby had some very interesting visitors last week after nearly all members and students of the faculty and out of town students of Thorsby Institute had left for the summer vacations. Miss Leech, who had remained a few days to superintend setting the dormitory in order before closing it for the summer, had learned that some of her relatives from Minneapolis, Minnesota, were making a tour southward which would extend as far as Thorsby, where they would pick her up and take her with them on their return route, all the way to the place they all called home. They arrived Tuesday night. Two sisters of Miss Leech and a niece of all three sisters.. The eldest of all being chauffeur and the only one in the party who knew how to drive a car, and who was able to make 300 to 400 miles with it, day after day, stoping at night in tourist camps.

This lady was dean of a nurse training school in South Dakota, and had just driven from there to her home in Minneapolis before starting south. The entire trip to Thorsby covered about 2,000 miles. She told us she had driven her car in all, 20,000 miles. They planned to visit several important cities in Alabama, Georgia, and Tennessee, before heading for home. This illustrates the possibilites open to women for delightful travel at low cost, where each pay a share, in vacation days, provided at least one of them is an experienced driver, and somewhat of a machanic, that understands keeping a car in order, or at least knows when it needs attention. The party with Miss Leech, were invited to spend a little time at the Norton home Wednesday night, to meet some of the neighbors and friends, among whom Miss Leech has lived and worked for several years.

These visitors were certainly of a sort that is good to meet, as all of them are people who do things. They left Thorsby, Thursday afternoon.

Cards were received in Thorsby last week announcing the marriage of Iver Sumner Gerald to Miss Emma Valeria McCracken, of Greenville, South Carolina. They will spend the summer at Demorest, Georgia, where Mr. Gerald is an instructor in summer school at Piedmont College.

Miss Elizabeth Robinson, of Birmingham, was a visitor of Miss Marian Fairbanks and other friends in Thorsby. Miss Robinson was for several years a members of Thorsby Institute faculty.

The "spend the day party" at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burt Higgins, under Eastern Star auspices, last week, Wednesday, proved a very enjoyable affair, as well as an aid to the trasury of the organization that sponsored it.

The Ladies Guild of Thorsby will hold their monthly social, Thursday afternoon, June 23rd, at the home of Mrs. Norton.

Mrs. J. W. Powers left Thorsby Sunday morning, accompanied by her niece, for New Orleans by auto, to visit Mrs. Powers' mother, who is very ill at her home in New Orleans.

Mr. E. B. Popwell, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Popwell, G. W. Freeman and daughter, Doris, went to Billingsley on a fishing trip last Thursday.

Is your telephone in your Neighbor's home?

Of course it's embarrassing to ask an obliging neighbor for the "loan" of his telephone, knowing that you cannot return the favor.

But the greatest imposition is on yourself and your family. The home without a telephone is cut off from ready access, especially in these days when friends and relatives live in scattered suburbs and cities.

Your name in the telephone book makes it easy for friends, and business associates as well, to reach you and your family.

Ordering a telephone is easy. Ask any telephone employe to explain straight line and party line service or call the business office. Modern telephone service is so low in cost that it really doesn't pay to try to do without it.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

TAX DELINQUENT LAND IS RARE IN ALABAMA

Montgomery, Ala., June 13.—Alabama is particularly fortunate in that the state is not obliged to carry extensive lands forfeited for non-payment of taxes. The relative condition of the various states in this regard is shown by studies recently conducted by the Federal government and other agencies the result of which have been made available to the Alabama State Commission of Forestry.

In one southern state approximately ten million acres have reverted for non-payment of taxes. In Alabama the area in the hands of the state from this source is probably less than ten thousands acres. In nearly every case someone pays the taxes, whether this be the original owner or some other person who takes the tax certificate with view to later obtaining a tax deed.

Two reasons exist for this favorable condition in Alabama. The first is that for the poorer quality land the tax rate, high as it is, is not so excessive as in various states. The second reason is comprised in the fact that the value of the less fertile lands for timber growing is becoming more and more appreciated. As a result, numerous persons acquired tax lands with this object in view. With the widespread adoption of the forestry idea, it is recognizable that the less valuable lands can easily be made to pay substantial profits through their use for timber production.

BRIEF NEWS NOTES

J. M. Magruder, vice president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank in New Orleans, says that "large areas of very fine grass producing land of Alabama are bringing in no revenue since such lands are not being used for either agriculture or livestock purposes."

By substituting bacteria for chemicals and by adding small quantities of such city waste as sewage to farm waste products, such as cornstalks, straws and hulls, chemists of the U. S. department of agriculture hope to produce building board fiber and fuel and lighting gas by a process which will be commercially feasible, the department says.

With their gardens producing 20 to 30 different vegetables, home demonstration club women and 4-H club girls of Mobile County are now enjoying fresh vegetables in addition to canning for the table next winter. Mrs. Louise Riley, home demonstration agent, is making this a major project. Many are interested in it.

One prediction is absolutely sure. It is that the amount of hay produced in Alabama this year will not be sufficient to feed Alabama livestock one year during the fall and winter and spring. Consequently, late planting of hay crops such as cowpeas, soybeans, and sudan grass is being recommended by the county agents.

A survey made by the Alabama Industrial Board with the cooperation of the State Department of Agriculture, the state department of health and the Alabama Polytechnic Institute revealed that farmers in and around 13 principal cities of Alabama have a market for dairy products, valued at $18,573,470.48 in 1930. The 13 cities are Anniston, Birmingham, Decatur, Dothan, Florence, Gadsden, Huntsville, Mobile, Montgomery, Pheonix City, Selma and Tuscaloosa.

ALABAMA CROPS ARE DOING FAIRLY WELL

Auburn, Ala., June 13.—Farm crops in Alabama have entered the summer with fair prospect as to yields, provided favorable weather conditions continue until fall.

County agents' reports received in Auburn reveal that corn and other feed crops are in fairly good condition. Cotton—the major crop of the state—is not up to normal for late June.

Lack of sufficent fertilizer is being reflected in the cotton crop of the south half of the state and the same will be reflected in the north half of the state as the crop advances. The cotton crop of the state is a little late, and plants are small. Cotton in many fields lacks a healthy appearance, this being attributed to inadequate fertilizer.

Very little interest is manifest by farmers in poisoning for boll weevil control. The feeling seems to prevail that if the boll weevil eat a portion of the crop very little will be lost.

Seasons have been favorable in the rain. Very few localities have not received sufficient rain to date. On the other hand, rains have been excessive in a few counties.

The condition of livestock is good. Pastures, however, have been slightly below normal for the year. A warm winter caused livestock to arrive at spring season in good condition, which they have retained.

Farmers throughout the state continue with their gardening and food preservation. Farm women and 4-H club girls engaged in canning, drying and preserving food—vegetables, fruits and meats—for the winter supply, with a surplus for sale. During June, July and August tens of thousands of cans and jars will be filled; and drying is being done on a large scale.

LARGE INCREASE IN STATE HOME GARDENS

Ninety to 95 per cent of the farm families in Alabama have gardens in which they are producing vegetables for home use, according to F. W. Gist statistician for the department of agriculture, who reports this to be a large increase over the previous years.

Federal statistics for 1930 show that only 80 per cent of farm families in Alabama had gardens.

CHILD need REGULATING?
CASTORIA WILL DO ITI
When your child needs regulating, remember this: the organs of babies and children are delicate. Little bowels must be gently urged—never forced. That's why Castoria is used by so many doctors and mothers. It is specially made for children's ailments; contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. You can safely give it to young infants for colic pains. Yet it is an equally effective regulator for older children. The next time your child has a little cold or fever, or a digestive upset, give him the help of Castoria, the children's own remedy. Genuine Castoria always has the name:

Lesson for June 19

JACOB THE AGED FATHER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 46:1-7, 28-30; 47:7.

GOLDEN TEXT—Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Joseph Honors His Father.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Joseph's Father Blesses the King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How May We Honor Our Parents?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Obligations to Our Parents.

I. Jacob Journeys to Egypt (45:16-46:27).

1. Joseph sends for his father (45:16-24). At Pharaoh's request Joseph sent an urgent invitation to Jacob to come to Egypt, promising to give him the "good of the land."

2. Jacob consents to go (45:25-28). The news that Joseph was alive and "lord of all Egypt," backed up with the sight of the "wagons which Joseph had sent to carry him," induced Jacob to consent to go.

3. Jacob's vision at Beer-sheba (46:1-7).

a. He offered sacrifices unto God (v. 1). As he was now about to leave Canaan, Jacob sought God's guidance and blessing. His soul, no doubt, was moved with great emotion.

b. God's response to Jacob (vv. 2-4). He bade him go to Egypt without fear, assuring him of the divine presence and blessing and his ultimate return to Canaan.

c. Arrival in Egypt (vv. 5-7). Jacob was accompanied by his sons, their wives, their children and cattle. With the meeting of Joseph the family circle was now complete, seventy souls in all (v. 27).

II. Jacob Meets Joseph (46:28-34).

Though the journey was now over, they were faced with perplexing problems. God had promised to be with Jacob, and Pharaoh had promised to Joseph that they should "eat of the fat of the land," but the details were not known.

1. Judah sent before (v. 28). He was sent perhaps to direct them to the Land of Goshen.

2. Met by Joseph (vv. 29, 30). Joseph, being the lord of Egypt, properly traveled in his royal chariot. Though he was Jacob's son, it was proper that he should extend a royal welcome.

III. Joseph Presents His Father and Brethren unto Pharaoh (47:1-6).

1. Pharaoh's invitation (45:16-19). Jacob and his sons were in Egypt by the king's invitation. Joseph, though occupying an exalted position, was not ashamed of his father.

2. Joseph's tact (47:1, 2 cf. 46:30-34).

a. In introducing his father and brethren in a personal way, thus capitalizing his own influence in favor of his kin.

b. In having his father and brethren come to Goshen (45:10). Since possession is "nine points of the law" they were already in Goshen before asking Pharaoh for permission to occupy it (v. 4).

c. In coaching his brethren (46:34). He taught them beforehand what to say because he knew how awkward they would be before the great king.

d. In choosing five, not all (v. 2). In all probability he chose the five who would make the best appearance.

3. Their request to Pharaoh (vv. 3, 4). Joseph anticipated Pharaoh's questions and put the proper words into their mouths to be used in making their desires known.

4. Pharaoh's response (vv. 5, 6).

a. His gracious offer. They were to enjoy the best of the land.

b. Positions of trust offered to capable men among them. He knew how capable Joseph was and surmised that some of his brethren might be likewise gifted.

IV. Jacob Blessing Pharaoh (47:7-10).

Here is an appraisal of true dignity. Though Pharaoh was the great king and Jacob now a suppliant at his feet, receiving natural blessings, yet morally Jacob was above Pharaoh and therefore conferred blessings upon him.

V. Joseph Nourishes His Father and Brethren (47:11, 12).

1. He placed them in the best of the land according as Pharaoh had commanded (v. 11). They were thus ready to go forward in business as soon as the famine was ended.

2. He nourished them (v. 12). Since there was no bread in all the land to be obtained except as dispensed by Joseph, he distributed to them according to their needs. Our Joseph, Jesus Christ, supplies all our needs according to his riches in glory (Phil. 4:19).

BILL—THE SON OF A JACKASS

Over the hill trailed a man behind a mule drawing a Dixie plow. The clodhopper was broadcasting:

"Bill, you are a mule, the son of a jackass, and I'm a man, made in the image of God. Yet here we work hitched together year in and year out. I often wonder if you work for me or I for you. Sometimes I think this is a partnership between a mule and a fool. For surely I work harder than you do. Plowing here we cover the same distance, but you do it on four legs and I do it on two. So, mathematically speaking, I do twice as much per leg as you do.

"Soon we'll be preparing a corn crop. When the crop is harvested, I give one-third to the landlord for being kind enough to let me use one corner of God's universe. The other third goes to you, and what is left is my share. But while you consume all of your third, with the exception of a few cobs, I divide my third among seven children, six hens and two ducks and a banker.

"Bill, you are getting the best of me; 'Taint fair for a mule, the son of a jackass, to rob a man, the Lord of creation, of his substance. And, come to think of it, you only help to cultivate the corn. After that, I cut and husk it while you look over the pasture fence and 'he-haw' at me.

"All fall and part of the winter the whole family, from Granny down to the baby, pick cotton to help raise money to buy you a new set of harness, and pay the interest on the mortagage on you, and by the way, what do you care about those mortgages? They don't worry you any. Not a darn bit. You leave them to me, you ungrateful cuss.

"About the time when I'm your better is on election day, for I can vote and you can't. But if ever I get any more out of politics than you do, I can't see where it is. And in most cases when I vote, I help elect a jackass."—Andy Gerber.

SWEET POTATO GROWERS ARE GIVEN CERTIFICATES

Alabama sweet potato growers are offered free inspection service and certificates permitting them to sell potato plants without voilating the law, which prihibits the selling of plants without a certificate.

The department of agriculture issues the certificates and growers are at present making application for inspection service, reports Seth P. Storrs, commissioner, who states that growers who intend to sell potato plants next year must apply for inspection not later than July 15 this year.

Before the department can issue certificates three inspections are necessary, one while crop is in the field, one while the tubers are in storage and one of the plant beds after the plants are above the ground.

B. P. Livingston, chief of the plant division reports that potatoes and plants which have no black rot or stem rot will be graded A and that those with some black rot and stem rot will be graded B.

He urges that farmers grow seed potatoes from vine cuttings and that they be grown on soil not used in producing seed potatoes for the past ten years.

PROPER RULES FOR CANNING TOMATOES

Auburn, Ala., June 13.—In canning tomatoes—or any other vegetable—much depends upon the selection of the tomatoes to be canned. Along with wise selection must go cleanliness, speed in handling, and observance of fundamental facts governing successful canning.

The requirements are not the same for all vegetables. Consequently, each vegetable must be handled differently. For successful canning of tomatoes we follow these directions:

Select firm, uniform, red ripe tomatoes of medium size. Do not use tomatoes which are overripe or part of which are spotted or decayed.

Blanch in boiling water 1 to 1½ minutes according to ripeness.

Plunge quickly into cold water for an instant.

Drain at once.

Core and peel promptly.

Pack into jars or cans as closely as possible to prevent shrikage and to help drive out air.

Add 2 teaspoonsful of the salt and sugar mixture to each quart.

Use tomato juice instead of water to fill the jars if tomatoes are packed whole. If tomatoes are to be sold under Federal regulations neither juice nor water should be added.

Partially seal and process as follows: quart jars and No. 3 cans, 30 minutes; pints and No. 2 cans, 20 minutes.

Remove jars from canner and seal at once. Tin cans should be plunged immediately into cold water to cool as quickly as possible.

Tomatoes, peas, lima beans, and corn have a mixture of sugar and salt added. Mix in the proportion of one-third salt and two-thirds sugar and put one teaspoonful into each pint and two teaspoonsful into each quart.

ALABAMA FARM WORK IS WELL ADVANCED

Farm work in Alabama is well advanced with farmers doing their own work and making special efforts to grow food for their familes and feed for their livestock.

This is revealed in the June crop report released by F. W. Gist, statistican for the department of agriculture, who found wheat 70 per cent of normal, indicating a yield of 10½ bushels per acre; oats 58 per cent of normal, early potatoes 67 per cent of normal; hay 72 per cent; pastures 78 per cent; apples 30 per cent; peaches 21 per cent; indicating a production this year of 17 per cent of a full crop, and pears 27 per cent.

Milk production on the first of June was slightly above the average of the last three years, being 1.06 gallons per cow in herds this year compared with 0.98 a year ago.

Egg production was reported at 46 eggs per 100 hens. The number of young chicks of this year's hatch was slightly above last year, being 220 per cent of hens in flocks compared with 219 a year ago.

The farm labor situation presents a peculiar condition the supply being 118 per cent of usual, while the demand was only 58 per cent of usual, leaving a ratio of supply to demand at 203. This condition means that farmers are attempting to do their own work without hiring extra labor.

Mrs. Annie Lamar Cole of Birmingham is spending this week with her sister, Mrs. G. L. Phillips.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert)

It is true that the clouds of depression are hanging low over the United States at this time, but when one compares the situation in this country with that in many of the older nations of Europe he will still find abundant cause to be thankful that he is an American. During the past few weeks there have been three governmental changes in three important nations, two in Europe and one in the Orient. The nations which have had these changes are France Germany and Japan. Although foreign affairs are ranking large in each of these nations it is an undeniable fact that a great deal of the unrest which led to change of government was due to economic conditions.

In Japan the militarists got a firmer hold on the government, not alone because of the Manchurian venture, but in a large measure because the people are poverty stricken and living conditions are becoming more depressed. The French change to the left was due principally to economic conditions within the country, which have been steadily growing worse in spite of the fact that France has felt the depression less than any other civilized country on the globe. The foreign policy of the new government is the same as that of the old, which indicates that the change was due to internal conditions.

In Germany the other day the Breuning government fell unexpectedly when it was announced that President Hindenburg had lost confidence in it. A great many people at once leaped to the conclusion that this meant a turn about in the foreign policies of the Reich which would become warlike. Many French papers declared that the Germans had again played a mean political trick on them by waiting until the French had put in a socialist government, and then putting in a nationalist government after it was too late for the French to do anything about it.

But the facts are that the policy of the new government, so far as foreign affairs are concerned, is exactly like that of the Breuning cabinet. Dr. Breuning had announced long ago that Germany could and would pay no more reparations, and he stood for upholding German "rights" in the Polish corridor. The policies of the new government will be exactly the same so far as dealing with other countries are concerned. The change in Germany too, therefore was due in a large measure to domestic conditions. The Breuning cabinet had proposed cutting up the big estates in East Prussia and making small farms of them for the unemployed. It had advocated also heavier taxation, and it was principally because of these two proposals coupled with the depression troubles that the government was forced to resign at this time.

It is not to be understood, however, that the international affairs of these various nations are in a settled state. Never has there been more political unrest in the world at large, in times of peace at least. Japan is penetrating further into Manchuria and getting into the Russian zone of influence. There would doubtless have been war between the two nations long ere this had it not been for the fact that Russia is not yet ready and seeks a few more years of economic preparation for the conflict, which is bound to come sooner or later. An involvement of Japan might easily bring into conflict the French allies on the western border of Russia who would be expected to take a part against Russia. What Germany, Italy and France would the ndo is a problem.

There are danger spots in Europe, too, the touchiest of which is perhaps the situation along the Polish corridor, where the Germans claim that the Poles are trying to get possession of the Free City of Danzig and the Poles claim the Germans are trying to Hilterize the same city. Any trouble here would doubtless bring about a disastrous conflagration.

There are therefore, abundant reasons why we may still be thankful we are citizens of the United States. And abundant reasons too, why Uncle Sam should keep out of foreign entaglements and center his attention as he is doing at the present, on attempts to reknit the economic fabric in the United States.

Remember the good old days when nobody looked at the financial page of the newspaper except, perhaps the town's leading banker.

YES, BUD, YOU NEED A LOT OF 'EM

The Chilton County News last week started off its editorial column by saying "We Need More Men of A. A. Jackson's Courage." That's right. It will surely take a lot of his kind to do the Democrats any good, if we may judge by what good has ever come to the Republican party by virtue of his connection with it.

And as for The Union-Banner (the Republican organ) we say very frankly that the Democrats are welcome to Mr. Jackson and all other "hot air" blowers of his kind.

The Democratic party every once in a while falls heir to some disgruntled Republican whom we invariably find the Republican party is better off without than with. Even in the case of one Mr. J. B. Atkinson, the present high mogul of the Chilton County News, the Republicans figure it was a case of good riddance for us.

Mr. Jackson and Mr. Atkinson found out that they could not stampede the Republicans into following after their wild political ideas; and when they saw they could not rule the Republican party, they thought they could ruin it by going to the Democrats.

We hope the Democrats are proud of them. We are not at all sorry to get rid of them. We beg your pardon, Mr. Jackson, if those words are too plain.

One international authority says that war will break out in Europe again within five years. Come on boys, get read to lend your money again—if any.

Well, the little red schoolhouse may be all out of date now, but anyhow, it wasn't all covered with bond issues.

One easy way to raise revenue would be to assess all the fans in the ball park a dime apiece every time one of the home team makes a home run.

Now if the Republicans and Democrats would just raise a billion apiece to spend in the campaign maybe it would relieve the depression.

TIMES AND TRANSPORTATION

In hard times fewer people ride on the street cars and more ride on the water wagon.

The people of that Washington town that is using wooden money will have to have a lumber yard to do any serious hoarding.

MORE WORK TO BE DONE

A Hollywood authority states that the vogue of the horror film is over, which would be welcome news if so many of the comedies were not so horrible.

EVERYBODY RUNNING

Candidates are getting so numerous it would be easier for the newspapers to run pictures of persons who aren't running for anything except street cars.

Having stopped Mr. Hughes back in 1916 California seems to have repeated this year by stopping Governor Roosevelt.

Pretzels were strewn in the path of the marchers in the beer parade in New York the other day—which indicates that the New Yorkers haven't lost their imagination, anyhow.

NEGROES VOTED IN DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY

The Montgomery Advertiser said Wednesmorning: "Negroes voted in Montgomery Tuesday wherever they were qualified and were willing to subscribe to the pledge that they would support the Democratic nominees. It has been the custom in Montgomery county for many years to allow qualified negro electors to vote where they were known as Democratic voters and were willing to support the Democratic nominee in the general election.

"Though the call for the Democratic primary specified 'qualified white electors,' Montgomery county election officials have for many years disregarded the rule and allowed qualified negro electors who pledged themselves to support the nominees to vote."

This will be interesting information to some of the local politicians in Chilton county who have been insisting that the Republican party is the only party that allows negroes to vote. You will note The Advertiser says negroes have been voting in the Democratic primary in Montgomery for many years.

MORAL ECHOES

(By D. W. Hoskew)

A prospective auto buyer was talking trade with an Irishman salesman when he propounded this question, "And Mike, what part of an automobile do you consider to be the most important part?" Mike thought for a moment and replied, "The nut that holds the wheel." Mike was right. The "Nut" that holds the wheel never fails to determine where the wheels shall carry the car. Before the days of the automobile we often heard this statement, "It's as useless as the fifth wheel to a buggy." This expression has lost its original meaning. The buggies that roll through our streets today have a fifth wheel and it is the most important wheel on the machine. The steering wheel and the "Nut" that holds it, determine as to the course of the other four wheels. Like the automobile, all human life is equipped with a fifth wheel, and this wheel is more important than the other wheels. The fifth wheel of your life, and the fifth wheel of my life is none other than the will power. If the "Nut" that holds that wheel fails to function along right lines of choice, a collision is sure to follow. It is will power that keeps the wheels of life from running us into bad habits. It is will power that keeps us from taking the detours that leave the narrow path of virtue and right. I am begging that the "Nut" that holds every steering wheel in life, grip the wheel and guide your way of life firmly and well.

I overheard a conversation that took place between a customer and the owner of a store. The customer had refused to buy an article that was offered, not because it was not needed, but because the man did not have the money to pay cash. He was told that his credit was good, and that he would be glad to charge the price to him. Then the man in front of the counter made a sensible reply. Here is what he said, "I pay cash for everything I buy. If I cannot pay cash, I do without." That man had the correct idea of breaking the chains of this depression. One of the real fine arts of human life is the art of learing how to do without. When a man's wants are his masters, and he buys without the cash to settle, that man is headed for the rocks. It is any easy matter to want. Even a baby can have as many wants as a grown man. The real test of character and manhood is not in wanting, but in the ability to force yourself to do without the things you cannot afford. One of the real gems in life is to have credit, but it should never be used. Credit like a coffin, should be our last resort. If you will learn the art of doing without, the time will come when you can pay cash for what you need.

A modern father had a modern daughter. She was just sixteen. She flounced into the reading room where her father had just seated himself with his paper. A conversation started that grew a bit loud and heated. At last the father was heard to say, "Daughter, all of your conversations remind me of the early days of married life when your mother practiced the muscial scale." The daughter in a rather pettish mood replied, "Musical scale father, for goodness sake tell me what you are talking about?" "I am saying just this my child, in your conversations you always start with dough and you finish with dough." That is the modern topic with young people when they are talking to their parents. If young life would learn the lesson of doing something first, the getting of dough would not be such a difficult task.

It is said that when Helen Keller was a little babe that her mother would bend over her and talk in baby language to the little one. Mother tears would fall upon the face of the little one, but not a sign of knowledge of recognition would play across the countenance of the babe. The eyes of the babe were dark and the ears were deaf. The little one knew not that her mother was near only by touching. The mother would cry over her darling, saying, "Mother love you, Oh Helen can't you hear mother," All was blank and dark. That is the way our father in heaven is bending over every sinner who is blinded with sin and who is deaf to the affection of God. Our father is bending over evry lost sinner saying, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." O, sinner, can you not hear the call of God?

In the midst of the Crimean war a poor soldier was picked up on the battle front. In the hospital the doctors found that his heart was bad and that he could not take anesthetic. An operation had to be performed to save his life. He told the doctors that he could stand it if Florence Nightengale—the angel of the Crimean war, would come and sit by him and let him hold her hand while the doctors were cutting in his flesh. The nurse came and the soldier boy held her hand while the doctors probed for the bullet. While holding the hand of the angel of every soldier he stood the operation. Many of us are meeting with accidents and trouble along this way of life. There is but one anesthetic that will quiet our spirits and calm our souls, and that is to hold the hand of Jesus Christ. If he will sit by us when the providence of God is probing for the bullet through sorrow and disappointment, we can stand it. Hold thou my hand dear Lord.

Looks Over All—
Overlooks None.

He Wasn't A Democrat

The story goes that a man was out in a strange community and came across a person whom he knew pretty well. He stopped for a conversation; the fellow was busy feeding his dogs. After an exchange of greetings, the traveler said, good naturedly, "Well, I'm going to vote against Hoover this time. How about you?" The guy stopped feeding the pups, squinted up with one eye, and explained thus: "Nope, I'm not a Democrat—I've just got over a bad spell of fever—that's why I look so long-faced."

Diary Of A Candidate

"Here is a story that has gathereed sundry additions in its march down the corridors of time, the latest being about as follows," said H. C. Anderson. "It relates the experience of an Arkansas candidate for sheriff: 'Lost four months and 20 days canvassing; lost 1,360 hours of sleep thinking about the election; lost 40 acres of corn and a crop of sweet potatoes; lost two front teeth and a lot of hair in personal combat with an opponent; donated one beef, four shoats and five sheep to barbecues; gave away two pair of suspenders, five calico dresses, five dolls and 13 baby rattlers; kissed 126 babies; kindled 14 kitchen fires; put up eight stoves; cut 14 cords of wood; carried 24 buckets of water; gathered seven wagonloads of corn; pulled 475 bundles of fodder; walked 4,060 miles; shook hands 9,080 times; told 10,001 lies and talked enough to make 1,000 volumes; attended 26 revival meetings; was baptized four times by immersion and twice by sprinkling; contributed $50 to foreign mission; made love to nine grass widows and got dog bit 19 times—and then got defeated.' "—Birmingham News.

Why No Who's Who This Week

I announced last week that I would use as the Who's Who subject this week, Rev. E. W. Butler, of Thorsby. Rev. Butler submitted quite a bit of information for the article, but before using this I want to see Rev. Butler and get a few more which are usually included in this series. His letter takes the form of an autobiography more than anything else, and I found it most interesting reading matter. In fact, with Rev. Butler's permission, I would like to offer it as the autobiography of one of the most interesting men I have ever had the pleasure of meeting. Before next week's issue I intend to see him and ask for his permission, as well as the items of information named above. So, look for Rev. Butler's "write up" next week.

Busy as a Bee

You will notice the column is short this week, the reason being that I have been quite busy with other matters—trying to get all the election dope together, serving at the polls, and divers other duties. Next week, however, I expect to be able to fill the regular space. Until then, so long.—Man in the Moon.

The Man on the Corner

Some Sights He Saw—
and Some He Saw Not.

A Brickbat From Birmingham

My Statement last week about the foolish march of World War Veterans to Washington to demand payment of the soldiers bonus got me a nice big brickbat from my friend, Mr. W. F. Broadhead, of Birmingham. Below is reproduced his letter in full:

To The Man on The Corner:

The writer has noticed in your column of the 9th of June issue of the Union-Banner some very plain remarks with reference to the ex-service men's bonus march to Washington. I feel that you are a little severe and a little too plain in your remarks with reference to the type of men which this group of soldiers is composed. I don't believe that you are sufficiently informed as to the matter and the cause of this march on Washington as to be able to term the soldiers "folls" and it certainly will do neithyou nor your paper any good to handle a matter as serious as is this one in such a blunt fashion.

The writer is an ex-service man and is in full sympathy with the paying of the bonus. It is a just and honest obligation that should have been paid by the government for which these boys offered to sacrifice their lives, if need be, should be so reluctant to give them a square deal and pay them what is justly due them. Had the powers that be acted wisely, they would have paid the soldiers' bonus instead of creating the Reconstruction finance corporation that has drained the Federal Treasury in order to appease the howlings and complaints of stockholders and big bankers of the East. I dare say that no average man, as yet, has felt any good effects from this act, but had the bonus been paid, more than 80 per cent of the people in the United States would have directly or indirectly benifitted from it. Millions of dollars worth of merchandise would have immediately found its way into needy homes and many families, who are now destitute and hungry and who are dependent solely on charity for sustenance would have been taken care of, for the time being at least, by the son, the brother, or the husband who was paid this just debt by the government, and charity would have been given a breathing spell for the first time in months.

Such statements as you have made through your paper are unjust, absurb and should not be published. How long did you serve at one dollar per day during the World War? Have you or your babies (if any) missed any meals yet? How much help have you been forced to solicit from the Red Cross and like relief agencies during the present depression, caused from your being unable to obtain employment? If you were not in the army and was working, how much were you making while these boys were in France, receiving one dollar per day?

The writer is an ex-service man and has not asked the government to pay one cent of the more than fifteen hundred dollars which is due him, however, there are other ex-service boys who are desperately in need and the writer is of the opinion that there never was nor never would be a better time to pay the bonus than the present time, and if our government was as much interested in the welfare of these boys and as much interested in doing the right thing by them as it is in listening to the howls of Wall Street and the big bankers of the country, this matter would have been attended to prior to this date without any evil effects therefrom. The greater portion of the criticism which is directed against these boys comes from an element of our population who know absolutely nothing about how difficult it was for many of them to obtain employment when they were discharged from the service. Many of them returned to find no job for them and they have been compelled to "hop from pillar to post" since that time as a penalty for having offered their "all" for their country, and there is just as good and just as decent men in this bonus march as could be found anywhere in America. They have proved that there is nothing radical in their make-up and that they only want which is due them and to which they are justly entitled.

The writer is an ex-service man and has belonged to possibly the largest Legion Post in the state for more than ten years and feels that he has had sufficient contact with the average ex-soldier to know whereof he speaks.—I am yours truly, W. F. Broadhead, Birmingham, Ala.

From reading Mr. Broadhead's letter, I think he presumes that I am not an ex-soldier, and have no sympathy for the men of that group of our citizenship. For his information, I will say that I am an ex-soldier. I did my "bit" during the World War. And now I agree with Mr. Broadhead and millions of other citizens that our government should pay the adjusted service certificates to the ex-soldiers. But I am still of the opinion that it is a foolish idea for a soldier to set out to bumming his way to Washington and join with the gang to demand payment of the "bonus." That is just my opinion about it, and if Mr. Broadhead or anybody else wants to disagree with me, that is all right. If Mr. Broadhead wants to join the marchers, I have no objection.

Another opinion About It

Dr. L. O. Dawson, in his "Light Spots in the Spotlight" column of the Birmingham News Sunday, had this to say about the bonus marchers: "Thoughtful people will and do applaud the word of Senator Borah when he declares he will vote for nothing, right or wrong, when a mob is at the door of the Senate demanding action of any sort. The folks who have been furnishing the veterans marching on Washington with transportation from place to place may have been their friends, but they were unwise friends. Those who really have the welfare of these veterans at heart would have advised them to return to their homes. Their march to Washington has been at the cost of much suffering already, with more yet in sight, and so far from helping their idea, it has done much to turn the country against it."

The Attitude of the Legion

Mr. Broadhead says he is a member of the American Legion. So is "The Man on the Corner." I have been a member for many years, and expect to keep on at it. What is the attitude of the American Legion toward the bonus marchers? What would the Legion say about a band of people going out to commandeer a freight train and ordering the train crew to do as they say? What about the pledge of the Legion to stand for law and order? So far as I have been able to see, there has not been one word of sanction from the American Legion for the bonus marchers. I do not believe there will come any either.

PREACHING AT MT PLEASANT

Rev. A. E. Trice will preach at Mt. Pleasant Schoolhouse next Sunday, June 19th, at 11 o'clock. Everybody in the community is urged to attend.

Rev. M. J. Parrish preached here last Sunday, and delivered a mighty fine sermon. There was a nice crowd to hear Rev. Parrish but we would like for more to attend the coming service.—J. E. Minor.

KIWANIS MEETING TODAY

The regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Clanton today will be of special interest, and of more than ordinary importance. The County Commissioners will be guests of the club, together with Mr. Robert L. Kenan, road contractor and engineer. Consideration will be given to a proposal for building some permanent roads in this county.

Mr. Kenan will speak to the meeting.

Another interesting feature of the meeting will be a flag day program presented under the direction of Capt. R. D. Woodson, and other members of the Chilton County Post of the American Legion.

SAMARIA CHURCH NEWS

A cordial invitation is extended to all who can to attend services at the Samaria Baptist church Sunday.

Sunday school at 10:00 a.m. and preaching by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Jones, both morning and evening services. The topic will be at 11:00 a.m.: "The Christian's Sweetest Privilege." At 7:45, "The Destroyer of Faith."

TO COMMISSIONERS COURT

On May 31st I wrote you in regard to revaluating all property in Chilton County. So far I have not heard anything from you.

Everyone knows that property is not worth as much today as it was a few years ago, but most of us are paying the same taxes as we were then.

The only logical solution to the tax problem is revaluation of all property in Chilton County.

Value our property according to what it is worth today and that will reduce our taxes. You have the power to reduce our taxes in Chilton County. Will you do it? Kindly reply through the press and let the people of this county know whether you will revaluate all property in the county or not (according to what property is worth today). If this is done it will reduce most all taxes which I am sure will meet with the approval of all taxpayers of Chilton county.—Yours very truly, Grover Bice.

Mrs. Marion Marcus and Mrs. Sallye Mahan returned home Saturday after a month's visit in Macon, Ga. They were accompanied by Mr. George Gilliland and Mr. Bernard Ramsey of Macon, who were guests in Clanton for the week end.

Please allow me space to say a few words in regards to this place.

Our Sunday School and B. Y. P. U. are moving along nicely, altho we would like to see some improvements on both sides.

Our program for Sunday night was very good and enjoyed by all. Our pastor, Rev. M. Lockhart, delivered a fine sermon on some of the evils of strong drink, which we hope some of our boys won't forget.

We had as our visitors Sunday night, Mr. and Mrs. Laughterdale, whom we gladly welcome back to see us again.

Udah L. Curlee has returned to his home in Clanton for the summer. He has been teaching government History in Emma Sansom High School at Alabama City.

THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL

On June 17, 157 years ago, there happened an event known to every school child in America as one that all his life has thrilled him with pride in being an American. That event, we are told by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission was the battle of Bunker Hill, the first real battle of the American Revolution.

Every boy and girl born or taught in this country knows the story of that little army of patriots who dared to defy what was then the yreatest military power on earth that they and their descendants might live here in a free and independent country.

We know they were driven from their rude redoubt only when their ammunition was gone and they were about to be overpowered by overwhelming numbers of the best trained troops of Europe, charging with bayonet. We know that the patriots lost 140 killed, 271 wounded, and 30 prisoners.

These losses occurred, not so much during the action but afterwards, during the retreat, when the warriors for freedom had neither bayonets to defend themselves, nor powder for their deadly markmanship. But though in the technical military defense the outcome was scored as a defeat for the patriots, while they did have the power to fight, they dealt such blows to their enemy as had an effect on all the rest of the war. Indeed it is only now after all these many years, that military historians are able to calcaulate this moral effect of the battle of Bunker Hill on the whole aftercourse of British military operations during the Revolution.

Until recent years, Bunker Hill has been traditionally regarded as a magnificant but futile gesture on the part of the patriots—not so much a military action as the subject of poems and the inspiration for patriotic speeches. Now the students of military history concede that Bunker Hill had profound influence on the after events and was one of the turning points in the successful struggle for independence.

It will be remembered that soon after the battle of Bunker Hill, General William Howe was placed in supreme command of the British troops, and every student of history is familiar with the covert sneers aimed at Howe as a dawdler. His delays are given as one of the chief reasons why Washington prospered so well against him. Now the keen military analyst sees the reason for Nowe's otherwise unaccountable unwillingness to press the frequent advantages he won over General Washington.

The United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission has pointed out that Howe, before taking over the chief command, was the general leading the British assault on Bunker Hill. Like the brave man he was, he charged with his men, and was an eye witness to the dreadful slaughter of his troops from the deadly fire of the patriot riflemen in their redoubt. Never had he seen such accurate markmanship. Every school boy knows the patriot command to "hold your fire till you see the whites of their eyes," and how well the command was obeyed. Especially had the American marksmen been told to pick off the British officers, and well they did their work

Howe escaped, but the modern military authorities are of the opinion that he received the shock of his life during that slaughter of his men. The British soldiers had never been trained to shoot with accuracy; his reliance was on the bayonet. And at Bunker Hill he never got a chance to use it until the patriot rifles had got in their killing fire, and then had run out of powder. The Americans, on the contrary, had been accustomed to the rifle from boyhood. They learned to use it against the Indians and in bringing down the game they needed for food. Remarkable accounts have come down of their skill and accuracy. Indeed this deadliness with musket or rifle became one of the main reliances of the patriotic army.

At Bunker Hill, Howe learned about this new method of warfare, and students of his later course in the Revolution are of the opinion that he never forgot the lesson. He rarely again undertook a bayonet charge against the patriots when he found them strongly entrenched. They had taken that kind of fight completely out of him, and at least one military historian, Thomas G. Frothingham, is of the opinion that the startling experience Howe received at Bunker Hill may have had a great deal to do with his subsequent lack of initiative. Time and again he had Washington cornered against overwhelming odds, and neglected his opportunity. The reason, says Frothingham, was Bunker Hill.

IN MEMORY OF DEAR MOTHER

On May 4th, the death angels bore away the sweet spirit of my loving mother, Mrs. Janie Anderson, to that great beyond, to dwell with Jesus throughout eternity. It is so sad to know that I will never see her face on earth any more, but some sweet day I shall see her face to face for I know dear mother is resting in the arms of Jesus, for I know she budded on earth to bloom in heaven.

Mother always wore a sweet smile and was kind and cheerful with everybody. All who knew her seemed to love her. She died at Hillman Hospital in Birmingham. She was 67 years of age. Everything was done for her that loving hands and doctors could do. But God saw that she had stayed with us long enough and called her home to dwell with Him on high.

Her remains were laid to rest in Chestnut Creek cemetery. Brother Lynch conducted the funeral.—Written by her daughter, Mrs. E. L. Henley.

CANE CREEK

On next Friday, June 17, everybody that are interested in Cane Creek cemetery, are requested to come and help clean it off. Everybody bring tools to work with. We will meet at 7:00 o'clock.

The fourth Sunday, June 26, is our annual singing. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

CARD OF THANKS

Please accept our sincere appreciation for all expressions of kind service rendered and extended to us at this time of great loss of our wife and mother, Alinza Ellis, by all neighbors and friends of this community and elsewhere. Especially we thank Revs. Goss and Rogers for consoling messages, singers, and pianist, and pallbearers. Also Martin & Son, Undertakers, for their untiring and efficient services. Also all floral tributes. We thank Dr. Eiland for the valuable services rendered by him in her behalf.—Wm. H. Ellis and Family, Marbury, Alabama.

THANKS FROM UNCLE GEORGE WILLIS AND FAMILY

Editor Union-Banner:

We will thank you for a space in the paper to express as best we can by words the appreciation we feel in our hearts for the kindness and sympathy of our friends in the sorrow and grief that came to us by the death of James Donovan. Every act and word of kindness and sympathy and every flower spoke consolation to our stricken hearts. We have been caused to realize again what a wonderfully helpful thing it is to have friends who will help to bear one another's burdens.

We thank you everyone. Our prayer is that God may fully and richly bless you.—G. W. Willis and family.

DAT BLOOMIN PREACHER

Elder Blossom Fills His Appointment The 2nd Sunday in June, 1932

My subject today is a spiritual warfare. Text: "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I come not to send peace, but a sword." Matt: 10:34. To introduce the subject, I am want to say that some pious souls—those lovers of peace and harmony—those who are afraid that they will offend, do not relish the idea of warfare. They don't like to sing, "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" They adhere closely to that scripture in Matt: 5:9, "Blessed are the peacemakers." Christanity is not a sissy thing for effeminate men. It challenges the strongest manhood. We are, or should be a mighty host for God, marching steadily on to victory, until the kingdom of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ.

First: Christ's followers are to be active soldiers, not the complaining and whining or babyish folks that take all of the pastor's time as if he were a nurse with a pacefier. There can be but little, if any, fighting done if the leader's time is wholly taken up ministering to sickly complaining soldiers. Nothing disheartens a pastor more than a careless complaining unconcerned church. To be good soldiers for Christ and to wage a good warfare, all should be clad in the armour of righteousness, real fighters, not slackers. A soldier without a uniform can't be placed; no one can tell which side he is on, but clad in the armour of righteousness, he will rightly take his place in the army of the Lord and will not be afraid to seek out the dangerous places on the spiritual battlefield, and then stand steadfast unmovable shoulder to shoulder and heart to heart, presenting a solid line of battle against sin and unrighteousness in all places, whether it be in the church or politics, or in the moral and socials walks of life.

He would fight sin wherever he found it, never compromising with the enemy. Too many of our church folks are satisfied to wage a personal warfare in their own lives, never rising to the help of the Lord against the mighty. I am sure that prohibition would not be the failure that it is today, if the soldiers of the cross would rise up in the strength of their leader and strike off the head of the monster wherever it should it show itself It is the compromising attitude toward liquor that most soldiers of the cross assume that causes the bootleggers to feel practically safe in his business. The discrimination of the Lord's day (Sunday) can be laid at the door of the nominal Christian.

Second: The fighting weapon of soldiers of the cross. "The sword of the spirit which is the word of God." Ephesians 6:17. What a miserable failure a soldier would be who did not know his weapon. He would be helpless before the enemy, all because he did not know how to operate the weapon placed in his hands. The ordinary soldier of the cross today is sadly lacking in a knowledge and understanding of his only weapon—the word of God. I have known a recruit from the enemy's camp to put to flight one of Christ's soldiers, just because he was not familiar with the "word." A brighter day is in store for the church of Christ when her members familiarize themselves with their most effective weapon—"the sword of God."

Third: The weapon hurts, first it cuts into the backslider, and if properly used will bring about repentance. Second, it will put to silence the advocate of heresy. The heresies of today would be banished from the land like snow in hot sunshine, if the soldiers of the cross knew how to use their weapon. We are spending hundreds and hundreds of dollars every year for B. Y. P. U. and Sunday School literature and gaining but little if any knowledge of the uses to which "the sword of the spirit" may be put. Soldiers, awaken, put on the whole armour of God and stand out boldly against the onslaughts of the forces of evil. Your captian has a right to your best and bravest efforts. Second: It stings by contrast with his own sinful life, the sinner is made to sting and squirm when the "sword of the spirit" is drawn, because he can see by it a revelation of the holiness of God. It also reveals to the sinner the awful depths of sin and depravity to which he has gone. Just as a real sword cuts into and reveals what is on the inside, just that way will the "sword of the spirit" cut away the false impressions and unbelief of the sinner and reveal to him the great need of the blood of Jesus to clinse him of his sin.

Many soldiers of the World War came in contact with the enemy and returned to their homes minus a leg or an arm and will go through life in that condition. Just so will the sinner be separated from his sins when struck with the "sword of the spirit" in the hands of a soldier of the cross. Soldiers, your captain is expecting great things of you, he has a right to your very best each day. Why lay up in camp and roll around in the shade, while the foes of righteousness are advancing on every side. I pray that a great revival of religion will break out in the camps. Then will that great army of inactive soldiers arise and buckle on the whole armour of God, and arm themselves with the "sword of the spirit, which is the word of God" and help us to capture the enemy and make of them good soldiers of the cross of Christ. May our leader use this message to awaken his slumbering, inactive servants, and that sinners may see the futility of resisting any longer.

Lord, bless these words and the medium through which they reach the people is my prayer. Please hear my poem.

What a grand and glorious thought
That we can helpers be.
In winning souls from satan
And fitting them for eternity.

Get out on the firing line
And there take your stand,
Ready to move, ready to fight,
At your king's command.

Sinners, your captain is doomed to defeat
And all who with Him stand:
Desert Him now and save your soul
And join the holy band.

Stand and be dismissed.

Extra VALUES

GUM-DIPPED CORDS
The Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process transforms the cotton cords into a strong, tough, sinewy unit. Liquid rubber penetrates every cord and coats every fiber, guarding against internal friction and heat, greatly increasing the strength of the cord body, and giving longer tire life.

TWO EXTRA GUM-DIPPED CORD PLIES UNDER THE TREAD
This is a patented construction, and the two extra Gum-Dipped cord plies are so placed that you get 56% stronger bond between tread and cord body, and tests show 26% greater protection against punctures and blowouts. It sets a new standard for tire performance on high speed cars.

NON-SKID TREAD
Tough, live rubber specially compounded for long, slow wear. Scientifically designed non-skid gives greater traction and safe, quiet performance.

ELECT OFFICERS AT THE HOSPITAL

Annual Meeting of Stockholders Held at Hospital Monday

The regular annual meeting of the stockholders of Central Alabama Hospital was held at the hospital building on Monday morning, June 20th.

Dr. Gragg, president, presided at the meeting. A report of the business for the past year was made by the president, in which it was recounted how the hospital was closed on March 20, followed by the extreme emergency, which was created in this county by the storm, which came on the 21st of March.

To help care for the suffering and injured in the storm the hospital was again opened, and cared for 65 patients from the storm. When the storm sufferers had gone out the hospital was again closed. The property was then advertised to sell under mortgage. On the day before it was to sell, Dr. Gragg stated, a man volunteered to put up the money to relieve the mortgage, and the property was saved. Soon it was arranged to re-open and patients are being cared for now as they come in. While business is necessarily slow, it is hoped that the hospital may be able to continue in operation.

At the meeting Monday officers were elected as follows:

President, Dr. V. J. Gragg; vice president, Dr. R. B. McNeill; secretary, W. M. Wyatt; treasurer, J. C. Page; directors, Dr. V. J. Gragg, M. L. White, C. Fenn Jones and Dr. C. O. Lawrence.

I. G. A. HAD BIG PARTY

Obie Deloach and the boys at the Clanton Cash Store flung a big I. G. A. party last Friday night. And did the folks respond to their invitation? Well, they surely did, and then some. It looked like a Fourth of July picnic had broken loose.

When time to eat arrived, everyone of the hundreds of guests were given a delightful plate, and they took to the street outside in true picnic style. The sidewalks were lined, and even some parked right out in the middle of the street to eat.

It was a big time for everybody. Obie and the "boys" were delighted with the attendance, and they surely put it over in good style for I. G. A.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION COMING

Famous Picture Being Sponsored By Kiwanis Club of Clanton

The picture that you have possibly seen once, or maybe twice, is coming to Clanton again on next Monday and Tuesday nights, June 27 and 28, according to the management of the Wadesonian Theatre, and the Kiwanis Club of Clanton.

This picture is none other than the famous Birth of A Nation. This time it will be shown with sound, the first time ever shown in Clanton with sound.

Back many, many years ago, when the Ku Klux Klan was first organized, with it's first purpose. See these night riders as they went about taking the law into their own hands and administering punishment where they thought it was due. Back when the states were at war and the things following this—all in sound.

This picture is being sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Clanton to raise funds with which to carry on the worthy work of the club. Prices of admission will be 20 cents and 40 cents. The picture will be here for the two nights only—Monday and Tuesday, June 27 and 28.

DR. SAM JOHNSON GOING TO PENSACOLA, FLORIDA

Dr. Samuel E. Johnson, of the United States Navy is in Clanton this week for a while with relatives and friends.

While here Dr. Johnson stated that he has been transferred to duty in the Naval Hospital, at Pensacola, Florida. He will leave here the last of this week to take up his duties at his new post.

We are glad Dr. Johnson has been given a location so close to his home. Maybe we will now be able to see him more often than in the past ten years, during which time he has been scattered all over the face of the earth.

CHILTON TEAM BEATS ELMORE

Amercian Legion Team Here Won Game From Legion Boys of Elmore

Tuesday afternoon was a day to be remembered by Chilton County's American Legion Baseball Team. Chilton's team met the Legion team of the Elmore County Post on the ball diamond in Clanton and left with a victory, the second of the season. The final score was 6 to 1 in favor of Clanton. The game was witnessed by a good sized crowd of baseball fans. The total gate receipts was $5.25, ten cents admission being charged.

Chilton won the game without much difficulty, receiving six hits and six runs off Elmore's team. Chilton pitchers, Atchison and Williams, allowed only 2 hits, both off Atchison, who pitched seven innings. Jennings, Emore's only pitcher for the whole game, gave up six hits. Only one run was made by Elmore.

Leading Chilton pitchers were Ashcraft, catcher, and Cecil Jones, 3rd base, who received two hits each out of four times at the plate. The remaining two hits were made by Moore, right field and Hayes, 2nd base, who received one hit each. Beck, right field and Gober center field received one hit each, the only hits Elmore's team got. Ashcraft's double to the right field fence was the longest hit of the game.

Three errors were made by Elmore, against only one made by Clanton. Chilton lost many chances for runs when a number of her men were caught off the bases.

Friday afternoon, at the local diamond, Chilton will meet the Legion team from Montgomery. This promises to be a good tight game since the Chilton team suffered a defeat at the hands of Montgomery last year and Chilton will attempt to repay this grudge.

All laides are urged to come also, since special seating arrangements have been made.

Following is the box score of Tuesday's game:

GLENN MOORE AND LOYD CROWSON REPORTED DROWNED AT MITCHELL

Fishing Boat Occupied By Two Clanton Men Caught In Rush Of Water Below Dam. Bodies Not Yet Recovered. Identity of Men is Positive

A telephone call from Mitchell Dam at noon Wendesday to Mell Martin stated that two men were drowned shortly before noon while fishing in the river just below the dam. Martin left immediately for the scene.

While it was not positive, the message stated that it was thought the men drowned were Glenn Moore and Loyd Crowson, of Clanton. After the report came to Clanton, it was found out that Moore and Crowson left here Wednesday morning to go to Mitchell Dam fishing.

It was stated by someone whose name we were unable to learn, that Moore and Crowson were seen to get in a boat below the Dam Wednesday morning, preparatory to launching out into the water, and that they were warned that the water was very dangerous. It was said that one or more of the flood gates were up.

The supposition is that their boat was caught in the undertow of the strong current and they were pulled into the mighty rush of water as it dashes on the rocks below the dam.

As we go to press, the bodies of the men have not been recovered. It was stated by parties returning to Clanton, however, that it is positively known that the men drowned were Moore and Crowson.

It was stated that the water has been cut off from the flood gates of the dam and that dragging will be done to recover the bodies.

Glenn Moore is a well known Clanton man. He was manager of a music store here for a long time, later operating Moore's Drug Store for quite a long time. Crowson is a painter by trade, and is well known in Clanton. He is a younger brother of Willie Crowson. Both men are married.

Public Warned About Coaching Schools

Washington, D. C., June 20.—The following statement is made by the United States Civil Service commission:

The Commission warns the public against paying money for "coaching" courses in preparation for Federal civil service examinations.

Schools which sell such courses under present conditions accept money under false pretense. A pureveyor of civil service courses is now under indictment in Iowa for false pretense representation. It is expected that other such cases of prosecution will follow.

Comparatively few appointments are being made in the Federal civil service. Vacancies which must be filled are filled by the transfer of those in the service or the reinstatement of those who have been in service, wherever practicable.

It is seldom necessary to announce an examination. In most cases registers of eligibles exist as a result of examinations held during the past year. When an examination is announced, the applicants are usually hundreds of times in excess of the need.

Money paid for civil service coaching courses at this time might almost as well be thrown to the four winds.

Judge Reynolds Answers Inquiry Of Grover Bice Concerning Re-Valuation

Says Commissioners Court Has No More Right to Re-Value Property For Taxation Than Has the Association of Postmasters or Rural Carriers

Probate Judge L. H. Reynolds has addressed the following letter to Mr. Grover Bice, of Thorsby, in reply to letters from Mr. Bice of May 31 and June 14, relative to his suggestions that the Commissioners Court re-value the property of Chilton County for taxation purposes.

"Dear Sir:—In reply to your letters of May 31 and June 14, 1932, addressed to the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, I am directed to advise you as follows:

" The Commissioners Court as such had no authority to re-value or re-assess property for taxation. The Board of Review, which is charged with the duty and authority of assessing and re-valuating property is composed of the four members of the Court of County Commissioners, and the Tax Assessor of the county is the Secretary of the Board. A chairman is chosen from among the membership. The Judge of Probate has no connection whatever with this board in its duty in reference to the assessment or re-valuation of property.

"At the instance of the writer, the Union-Banner published a news item in which the public was fully directed as to how they should proceed to have their property re-valued or re-assessed. As I remember, this was done sometime in February and was repeated from time to time throughout the period in which property could have been legally re-assessed or assessments adjusted or appeals made by taxpayers to the Courts.

"Under the law, the Board of Review met at the courthouse on the second Monday to hear complaints and to make assessments. As soon as this was done, the tax assessor, as secretary of the Board of Review, published a large advertisement in the paper to the effect that any person dissatisfied with the valuation placed on his property could file any objections with the secretary of the board at any time on or before the last Monday in May. At the expense of the county, the proper blanks were available to all taxpayers and in which it was only necessary that the taxpayer describe his property and sign his name and file the same with the secretary of the Board of Review in order to be insured of a hearing before the board. The board met on the last Monday in June, and were in session some three or four days and heard about three hundred complaints and it is my information that reductions were granted in all but two cases.

"Everything possible was done to advise the property owners as to their rights and the necessary proceedings to get reductions in their taxes.

We note that you suggested that the Commissioners Court appoint an appraisal board to re-value every piece of property in Chilton County. As the law provides how a taxpayer shall proceed to get his property valuations reduced, of course it would have been absurd for the Commissioners Court to have followed your suggestions. The Commissioners Court would have had no more authority to do this than the Association of Postmasters or Rural Carriers.

"If any of the taxpayers are dissatisfied with the reduction granted them, they may appeal to the Circuit Court and have a jury re-value their property. This appeal, however, must be perfected within thirty days from the time of the re-valuation.

"We are sorry that we cannot follow your suggestions, but as the legislature of Alabama makes the tax laws under which we operate, we must conform thereto.—Yours very truly, L. H. Reynolds, Judge of Probate."

Four persons, all of Birmingham, were injured near Greenville when the plane in which they were taking off for Birmingham failed to clear a fence and crashed. Those hurt included B. A. Schroeder, pilot; C. Nabb Drennen, Ed Wilkinson, Jr, and H. Jerry North.

Judge Charles B. Kennamer in U. S. District Court in Montgomery dismissed charges of contempt of court against Otis Richards, of Girard, a juror in the second seed loan trial at Dothan, and postponed for a week the hearing of similar charges against a second juror.

EZELL WILL RETURN TODAY

A message from Dr. S. J. Ezell says that he will return home today (Thursday) and will be at his place for both services at Clanton Baptist church next Sunday. The subjects announced by D. Ezell for next Sunday's sermons are for the morning, "If God had a chance, what would He do for His Church?" The subject of the evening will be, "If God had a chance, what would he do for lost men?"

Dr. Ezell has been conducting a revival meeting near Tuscaloosa for the past ten days. He says he has had a fine meeting, and is in good spirits to return to his home field in Clanton.

GOVERNOR SAYS 6 MONTHS PLENTY

Chief Executive Expresses His Sympathy For Prohibition Violators

Montgomery, Ala., June 17.—Alabama may set a rigid prohibition standard for its citizens but once in prison the convicted distiller and bootlegger has found that governor Miller, an ardent prohibitionist, is not unsympathetic.

Here where state law prohibits the manufacture or sale of anything that even looks, smells or tastes like beer, the penitentiary roll call includes a substantial number of prohibition law violators.

But Friday, all learned that governor Miller has decided that six months is ample punishment for a crime that involves no moral turpitude, and will grant parole applications from all violators who have served that portion of their sentences in obedience to prison regulations.

Thursday the governor threw open the prison gates for one year to 227 prohibition law violators who had, through lack of friends and money, been unable to make application to the State pardon board for parole.

Friday he told newspaper men, six months is sufficient punishment for a prohibition law violator if he behaves himself while in prison. Let him return home to become a good citizen and support his family, aided in that step by the knowledge that the remainder of his sentence must be served if he again violates the law.

JOHN B. ROCKETT DIED SUDDEN

Mr. Rockett is survived by his wife and mother; three sons and two daughters. He is a brother of J. Tom Rockett, of Clanton.

John Rockett was a lifelong resident of the Coopers community, where he has had an active and prominent part in the affairs of the community for many years.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES MEET FRIDAY 24

Gathering Called by Lawrence To Be At The County Courthouse

Superintendent of Education, Buford Lawrence, has issued a call for all trustees of Chilton County schools to come together in a meeting at the courthouse on Friday of this week. The call is extended to all of the old trustees whose terms expire on July 1, and to the new trustees whose terms begin on that date.

Following is the letter which has been sent out by Mr. Lawrence, which fully explains the plans and purposes of the meeting.

On July 1, 1932 those trustees elected on May 7, 1932 will begin their term of office. In order that they may be able to render the best service to their communities during their term of office, every trustee should know something about the school laws and the conditions confronting the schools. To this end, I am calling a meeting of all the trustees to be held at the court house next Friday, June 24th.

I know it is a very busy time and there is much work to do but since it will be necessary to hold such meeting before July 1st, I trust you will make every effort possible to be there. A state representative will be with us at that time. The meeting will be at 9 o'clock a.m. I do not know just how long we shall be in session but I think we should take time to thoroughly understand everything before adjourning.

I am also inviting the trustees whose terms expire on June 30. We shall be glad to have them meet with us. The meeting will be of value to them and we shall be glad to have them if they can arrange to come.

Looking forward to having you with us on Friday, June 24th, I am, faithfully yours.—B. Lawrence, superintendent of Education.

LARGE TURNIPS BROUGHT

David Childress, of Thorsby, brought The Union-Banner a large turnip last Wednesday. It weighed exactly four pounds.

This Wednesday there came in one from Mr. A. Shuff of Maplesville which was bigger than the one from Childress, but it did not weigh as much.

NOTICE

All members of the local chapter of the order of Eastern Star are urged to attend the regular meeting Thursday night, June 23, at eight o'clock. Officers for the new year will be elected and we need your presence.

Luke Calloway of Coopers was in Clanton Wednesday afternoon making arrangements for the Fourth of July at Coopers.

Don't fail to see, "Fireman Save My Child," Friday and Saturday night at the Wadesonian Theatre.

UNITY-CHILTON INSTITUTE DATE

Meeting Will Be Held At The Clanton Baptist Church July 5, 6, 7

All men, women, boys and girls, who are Christians or who are in any way interested in Christian work, are asked to begin now to set aside July 5, 6, and 7 to attend the Unity-Chilton Institute, which is to be held at the Clanton Baptist church, under the auspices of the W. M. U. of these two organizations. For 3 years we have been holding these institutes, and it is no exaggeration to say that they give the greatest opportunity of the year for outstandin Baptist leaders who teach and preach.

The faculty this year is probably the strongest ever secured. No city could have a better one. We are to have missionaries from three of four countries, and great preachers and women workers. The program will be printed next week, but this notice is to urge you to begin to make your plans now, so you and your whole family can attend each day. There will be no night sessions, but the exercises will begin each day at ten o'clock and close at four.—Mrs. S. J. Ezell.

DAT BLOOMIN PREACHER

Elder Blossom Fills His Pintment on The Third Sunday In June, 1932

You will notice in dis sermon dat Ah has dropped back to mah ole way ob speakin. Ah foun dat mo people laked it dat way. Ah would be glad if mah readahs wood spress da selves in a letter to Elder Blossom, care Union-Banner, so Ah could no which wa da lak it.

Now turn wid me to de book ob Matt, an read de fust 23 verses. (Reads lesson). Now us will stan an sing dat good song, "Yield Not to Temptation." Now Ah wants you all to git down on yoah nees while Brudder Ed Nicely leeds us in prayer. (His prayer): "Dear Lord ob heben, Ah falls down on mah nees dis mawnin in humility befo thee because Ah feels so bad, an since de preacher done tole me, out dar in de yard whut he wuz gwyn to preach bout, Ah feels all broke up, cause he sed he wuz gwyn to preach bout forgivness, an Ah nos dat Ah aint had no forgivin heart in me, cause hyar is mah own brudder Mose, who is rite hyar in dis house now, dat Ah aint spoke to in gwyn on two years. An we's both members ob dis church, and den dar is mah neighbor an brudder in de church, Wash Cook, dat is at outs wid me, an wont speak to me. An Lord, you no dat dar is three or four mo in dis church whut wont speak to each udder.

"Lord how can Ah ax you to forgive me ob mah sins when Ah wont forgive dem. So now Ah promise you dat if you will forgive me an hear me dis mawnin, Ah will forgive evybody fur all dat da has done to me an will be reconciled to dem.

"Now Lord, hep de preacher dis mawnin. May he so preach de word dat all ob de stubborness an hard heatedness may be driv outen our hearts, an dat love for our brudders an sistahs in Christ may fill up de places whut it occupied. Lord, Ah axes you to bless evybody dat is hyah dis mawnin, an may we hab a glorious meetin an go home feelin good. Lord bless mah neighbor dat fell out wid me, bout my pigs eatin up his corn las year, an hep me to git up dat dollar an six bits whut Ah owes mah brudder Mose, so dat he will speak to me.

"Now Lord, forgive me ob all mah rongs an lead me in de paths ob forgivness. Ah ax in de name ob Christ, Amen."

De 14 and 15 verses ob de 6 chapter ob Matt., is mah tex, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly father will also forgive you; but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your father forgive your trespasses." Our Lord having been born into and brot up by a Jewish family, an bein well acquinted wid de practices an customs ob his people could see de need ob a lesson lak de one here considered.

It may be truly sed dat de Jews felt dat it wuz rite to love their friends an hate their enemies, because after Moses led dem into de promised land, da were tought to have no dealins wid de people dat da found dar. If you will look at de 43rd verse ob de 4th chapter ob Matt., you will see whut had been tought dem. Let me read it, "Ye have heard that it hath been said, thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy." The truth long dese lines wuz whut wuz needed in his day, as much so as it is in our day. A willingness to forgive an a deep seated desire to love one's enemy, is one ob de greatest ob all graces. Jest why people will hold hard feelins, an cherish ill will toward their neighbor, an by it sour their own lives, Ah cant understan. Da become lak a turtle or tarrapin: on de leas provocation da will draw in da head an close da selves up an grow harder an harder, an de mo you talk wid dem de tighter da draws up. Ah remember we chillun used to put a coal ob fire on a terrapin's back to make him stick out his head an legs, an walk. An Ah tells you, mah brudders an sistahs, if our God aint puttin some ob de fire ob his vengance on de backs ob de hard hearted people ob dis country rite now, Ah dont kno whut Ah is talkin bout.

Not so long ago, Ah went to preach at a church whut had no pastor, an when Ah got in de neighborhood ob de church, Ah axed fur a certain family, an when de time come to start to de church, de sistah sed she wuz not gwyn, an Ah axed her why, an she sed dat she allus sung in de choir, an dat anudder oman did too an dat da had fell out, an if she got dar fust an sat down in de choir dat de other oman wood set way back in de church, an if de other oman got dar fust an got in de choir dat she wouldnt go in. So she sed she had ruther sta to home dan to make dat oman feel bad. Ah investigated de matter an foun dat it had bin gwyn on fur three years, an dat their pastor resigned on account ob it. An when da axed me if Ah would serve dem fur de res ob dis year, Ah tole dem dat da wood have to git rite wid each other a nwid God befo Ah wood consider it.

Some ob de bes revivals dat Ah evah had, come rite on de heels of a reconcilliation ob people whut would not forgive each other. People as a rule dont lak to acknowlege dat da is in de rong. A pastor tole me not long ago dat one ob his deacons wuz stayin away fum church an outen de discharge ob his duty, jes cause de preacher sed in one ob his sermons dat dar wuz but very little ligon in de heart ob a man whut wouldn't forgive a brudder any trespass.

Ah heard of an Irish oman one time whut took her rollin pin in her han an went to her husband an axed him to forgive her ob a rong dat she had done him. Ah fear dat lots ob us takes rollin pins stid ob love when we offer to make up wid our neighbor. An da sed dat Pat, her husband, sed, alrite me dear, I'll forgive you, for de sake ob de rollin pin. Dat kind of reconciliation will never git us no whar. An atter all is sed de main thing to consider in dis tex is dat forgiveness ob our sins is altogether dependent on usses forgiving dem whut trespass aginst us. Jesus sed dat when we bring our gift to de alter an dar remember dat our brudder hath aught ginst us, to leave de gift dar befo de alter an fust go an be reconciled, an den come an offer our gift.

Dar is little hope for a church to go forward an sabe souls when two or mo ob de members is at outs. So let evy body git rite wid his brudder befo protracted meetin time dis year, so we will hab a good meetin, an lost souls sabed. Ah will close now, cause I done talked long nuff. Will you lissen while I reads my poem?

De wheels ob Zion is stickin fast
An almos standin still,
Because a few here an there
Hold to their stubborn will.

Unmindful ob dese conditions
We continue to fuss an fight,
While sinners perish on every side,
Lookin to us for light.

Let each one forgive his brudder's rongs
An git on his nees an pray,
Dat God may use evy one to Bring in a better day.

IN MEMORY

On June 4, God called to the spirit of Mrs. Janie Anderson to that great beyond. She leaves seven children—three sons and four daughters, and a host of grandchildren to mourn her loss. Weep not dear children, we feel sure that she is happy and free. Jesus said, "I go to prepare a place for you." She has crossed over on the other side to take her place that Jesus has prepared for her. To know her was to love her. She had a smile for everyone. Let us strive to be ready when death calls us away. So we may all meet her in that heavenly city where pains will be no more.

FARM AND GARDEN QUERY BOX

Q. Is there a good way of preventing lice and mites in a poultry house during the summer months?

A. Use the oil from the crank case of your automobile. Such waste oil costs nothing. Paint the nest boxes, roosts, the dropping boards, and all adjoining parts of the house with the oil. One heavy coating should last all summer. The hens should all be dusted with sodium flouride. Put the powder in a tin can with holes punched in the top. Then hold the hen with her feathers hanging down and shake a little of the dust all through her feathers, particularly under the wings, on the under side of the body, and on the back part of the head.

Q. I am told there is a painless and easy way of dehorning calves. Will you describe the method?

A. Dehorning calves should take place when they are only a few weeks old. Find with your fingers the place where the horn is to come through the skin. Cut the hair away on a place the size of a silver dollar. Moisten the surface and rub it with a stick of caustic potash, held in the gloved hand. Prevent other calves from licking the spot. This is a much more humane treatment than dehorning with saws later.

Mrs. G. T. Evans left Satruday for Winston-Salem, North Carolina, to spend several days as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Evans.

"MEN OF CHANCE"

Fast Drama of Screen Action At Wadesonian Wednesday and Thursday, June 29 and 30

A stirring drama of a woman against the world will be portrayed when "Men of Chance" appears on the screen at the Wadesonian Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, June 29 and 30, with Mary Astor as the star player. Following is a summary of the story in the picture:

"Diamond" Johnny Silk, race track figure, goes to Paris for a holiday. He is followed by his enemies, Farley and Dorval, supposed friends. The two plan to trick Silk in Paris by picking up a girl and palming her off on the gambler as a countess.

Marthe Preston and her friend, Gertie, both Americans, are stranded in Paris without a sou, so they separately go seeking adventure.

Gertie picks up a comedy Frenchman, but Martha through being arrested, meets the gambler Dorval who pays her fine and takes her to his apartment. There she learns that his purpose is to dress her up "for his amusement" and introduce her to some millionaire as a countess.

She is groomed, fitted, named after one of the aristocratic families of France, and presented to Silk, who falls in love with her. In a week's time he sweeps her off her feet, marries her and takes her back to New York.

There Martha meets her backer, Dorval. The latter tells her a hard luck story and she gives him some of Silk's prized race track secrets. Dorval uses this information to trick Silk out of a quarter of a million dollars.

Silk naturally does not suspect his wife, nor does Martha think her tip to Dorval has wrought the damage. When the truth dawns on her she immediately confesses to Silk. There is a stirring scene as he denounces the woman he once loved.

In order to reinstate herself in her husband's affection, Martha cleverly double-crosses her former backer, Dorval and his gang.

Johnny Silk forgives and they live happily together again.

DEVAUGHN THANKS VOTERS

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to express my thanks to the voters of Chilton County for the splendid support that I received in last Tuesday's primary. I can not find words to fully express my heartfelt appreciation to those who have been so loyal to me througout my campaign in both primaries. It has been the pleasure of my life to meet with my friends in the county and also to form many new acquaintances and I trust that I have made many new friends.

Although I was defeated by a small majority of the voters who voted in the primary Tuesday, I shall always feel very grateful to all my friends the county over, and especially do I appreciate the majority vote given me in the 4th district in both primaries. However I hold no ill will against those who did not vote for me if you did so with the interest of the county at heart, with no envy or selfish motive in view. You only exercised your just rights, and I do not hold the exercise of this right against any voter.

I wish to take this opportunity of again thanking each and every one that supported me and assisted in any way, however, I am sorry that we were not successful, but I feel that we conducted a clean campaign and did all we could that was fair and honorable to secure the nomination. But the majority of the voters felt that Mr. Duke should have the nomination and now I am accepting the verdict of the people and stand ready to assist in any way that I can to help elect our ticket in full next November.

I am yours for the success of the Republican party.—O. L. Devaughn.

THE STORY OF "FIREMAN SAVE MY CHILD"

Smoky Joe Grant is a "fire fan." He is assistant chief in the small town of Rosedale. Joe is also a crack baseball player, but his whole interest is in fire fighting. He drops the ball at any stage of the game to rush to a fire.

Joe is in love with Sally, but their marriage is delayed until Joe gets enough money. He has several offers from the St. Louis Ball club but refuses them. He thinks it will interfere with his work as fireman. Sally finally persuades him to take the offer with the St. Louis team. He makes good, but he and the manager have continuous scraps because Joe forgets baseball every time he hears a fire siren.

A blond adventuress vamps Joe and maneuvers him into a position where they are betrothed. When Sally comes to town to find out where all of Joe's money is going, the blond tells him of the engagement. Sally leaves for home.

The world's series rolls around and the St. Louis team is depending on Joe to win. The game stands three and three and Joe is their only chance. He gets word that a fire extinguisher company is interested in his patent. He forgets all about the game and camps in the company's office.

He sets the place afire to demonstrate his new bomb for extinguishing fire. The fire apparatus comes around after Jue puts out the fire. The firm buys his patent. The fire chief recognizes Joe and rushes him to the ball grounds, because he has bet on the game.

Joe arrives in the ninth inning, strikes out three men and goes to bat in the last half of the ninth. He knocks a three bagger and brings in two runs to tie the score. Almost caught napping off base, he steals home in a thrilling finish, winning the pennant.

The home town welcomes their hero home and he races to the church in a fire wagon to meet Sally, his bride.

This picture is showing at the Wadesonian Theatre in Clanton Friday and Saturday of this week, under auspices of the Clanton Fire Department.

Mrs. Marcus Polk, Sr., left Saturday to visit relatives in Cincinnatti, Ohio.

Misses Bernice and Gladys Williams are visiting relatives in Sheffield this week.

Central Singing Society

The Central Singing Society meets next Sunday afternoon at Poplar Springs. It has been four months since a meeting of the society was held there, their last engagement having been called in and given to Friendship. The singings at Poplar are always jam up, and if the weather permits we are expecting a good one next Sunday afternoon. We skipped last Sunday on account of the all day singing at Collins Chapel, so everybody who can meet us at Poplar Springs next Sunday afternoon and let's have another good singing.

A number of singers from our society went to Collins Chapel last Sunday afternoon and participated in the big event up there. That was one of the best singings that has been held in the county lately.

DUKE THANKS VOTERS

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space to thank the people of Chilton County for the spendid vote given me June 14th.

I cannot command words to express my appreciation to those who have been so loyal to me. Along with my note of thanks, to those who voted for me, I wish to assure those who did not vote for me, that I hold no ill will against any of them, I feel that it was their right and privilege to vote for their choice. While I am grateful and rejoice, being nominated as Commissioner of the Fourth District, still I have a feeling of sympathy for the defeated candidates, as they are good men.

I assure you between now and the general election this fall, I will do all I can to put the entire Republican ticket o[illegible] the top. Let me thank you, on[illegible]d all, in advance, for your vote this fall.—Yours very truly, C. D. Duke.

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs.

At fifty, you can be in your prime.

Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years?

There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways.

This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin protects the system. All druggists keep this preparation.

POOR OR

OUR PARTY HAS SPOKEN

Again the Republican party of Chilton County has spoken, and this time it has made the final eliminations preparatory to the general election in November. The party is presenting to the people of Chilton County—for their approval or disapproval—a list of candidates for the various offices to be filled.

We have had a lively but comparatively speaking a friendly scramble among ourselves for the nominations; but that scramble has joined the past. We are now to look only to the future and do the thing that means continued safety and expediency in the government of ourcounty—namely, the election of the entire Republican ticket in November. We, among ourselves, have had differences, which is altogether reasonable, proper and we might say necessary; but now if we are true Republicans we will all wholeheartedly put forth every effort to carry our nominees safely over the last lap of the race in November. It is time for us to cease speaking and even thinking of our differences that we have had. After the primary is over, I deem it altogether unbecoming for a Republican publicly or otherwise to say that he did not get who he wanted nominated and that he might vote the ticket but that he would do it reluctantly. Rather let us assume the attitude expressed by J. L. Burnett, that we support the ticket "wholeheartedly." That is real Republicanism. The metal and real stability of a person is never tried so long as success is his. It is failure that tries a fellow. Only he who can withstand defeat is really worthy of success.

There is some little agitation of trouble among the ranks of our party which we do not like to see. I am not laying any blame to anyone, but I would like to see this dissatisfaction alleviated and everything within the Republican party running smoothly. Of course I do not believe that any honest man would advocate covering up graft and corruption, and certainly I am not pleading for that, but let's have the matter handled in the right way and done wisely, considerately and judiciously. Certainly the Commissioners Court wants to do the right thing and I am perfectly willing to leave the matter to them. If they think it worthy of probation they will dig into it, and if they find anything that needs correction, I feel safe in saying that they will without hesitation correct it.

Now, let us all join forces, stick together, and put our nominees over big in the November general election. That is the one ultimation now ahead of us and we cannot afford to face it with anything but a solid front and a common determination to win. That will mean success for us now as it has in the past and as it will continue to mean in the future.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

University, Ala., June 20.—The fourth annual state education conference and third annual state institute of Parents and Teachers ended at University of Alabama Friday. Many prominient edocators appeared before both groups for addresses.

Friday evening Dr. Charles H. Judd of the University of Chicago made the statement that the Federal Government must cease its practice of requiring the matching of federal funds by state appropriations and the approval by the Federal government of any plans adopted if it is to continue to subsidize education.

Addressing the state institute of Parents and Teachers last Thursday, J. A. Kellar, president of the Alabama Education Association, said that education for the masses is facing a crisis such as has not been confronted since the days of Reconstruction. He said that the school teachers of the state are willing to take other cuts in salary on parity with other state departments. Education must be continued and the budget must be balanced to do so, he said.

Dr. John R. McLure of the summer school charged in an address to the parents and teachers that there is too much faulty thinking in regard to the place and purpose of public education in Alabama. He said that public education is the mainspring of all phases of American life and that it is our only hope for social progress.

Dean Lee Bigood of the School of Commerce said before the institute that cotton has led the South into trouble many times and that we cannot follow exclusively or blindly the growing of cotton without harming ourselves. "We should not oppose the use of silk for the Japanese and Chinese who sell us the raw silk are now our best export customers of cotton. We should work toward a more diversified, a more highly finished, a higher valued manufacture of cotton products in Alabama."

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

To Worshipful Master, Wardens and Brethren:

It is with deep sorrow that we announce to you the death of our beloved brother, Commodore Doniphin Messer, which sad event occurred at his home in Verbena, Ala., April 19, 1932. For several months Brother Messer had been confined to his bed and the end was expected but we feel his loss none the less.

The funeral services were held on the afternoon of April 20, 1932 in the Methodist Church at Verbena, Ala., conducted by Rev. T. C. Cassady, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church, at Montgomery, Ala., He was assisted by Brothers J. P. Morgan, Dunlap Lynch and J. M. Metcalf, and at the grave the Masonic ritual was conducted by Bro. Q. C. Meroney.

Brother Messer was born January 3, 1861. Was married to Mrs. Leuanna Weldon in Shelby County, January 20, 1891. There were born to them four sons and two daughters, Tommie and Pierce, (twins), died in infancy; Maggie Mae, Nixie E., Commodore Doniphin, Jr., and Charles McDaniel Messer survive him.

He united with the Methodist Protestant church at an early age and became a minister of the Gospel in this church in 1888, and remained in active work on various circuits all over Alabama, until 1928, when he was superannuated.

Brother Messer was made a Mason in Rockford Lodge A. F. & A. M. No. 137, January 17, 1891. His work in the ministry necessitated his moving frequently and he therefore moved his Masonic membership. He affiliated with Beulah Lodge No. 455 in Lee County, September 24, 1905, and with Hartford Lodge No. 409 in Geneva County, December 21st 1907, where he remained until June 12, 1912, when Verbena Lodge No. 754 was established, with which he affiliated as a charter member and remained so until the time of his death.

Now, therefore, as God in his alwise providence has seen fit to call our most worthy brother from his labors on earth to that lodge triumphant, be it resolved,

First, that in the death of Brother Messer this lodge has lost a faithful and loyal member, his church one of its able and devout ministers and this community and state a valued citizen,

Second, that our most heartfelt sympathy is hereby extended to his bereaved family and friends through his face we see no more, we shall ever cherish his memory.

Third, that a blank page in our records be inscribed to his memory and a copy of this resolution be spread on our minutes, a copy thereof furnished his family under the seal of this lodge and a copy be published in our county papers.—Respectfully submitted, J. S. Hubbard, J. C. Pattilo, C. D. Hughes, Committee.

WEST CHILTON

We guess local politics will now take a rest as the primary is over and the party has spoken. The ticket nominated is a good one, and we believe gives general satisfaction.

Crops in West Chilton look well, gardens too.

John S. Waldrop has closed his grist mill. We presume it was no longer profitable, corn being so cheap yet we think wherever possible, all parties should cooperate, thus helping each other. The present condition of things demands cooperation.

A travelling show has been pulled off for several nights at S. N. Waldrop's store. Attendance was reported good.

Next Sunday afternoon is the regular singing afternoon at Freeman at 2 o'clock. All come. Bro. Scott is expected to be there. We are expecting an all day singing there the 1st Sunday in July, providence permitting.

Pratt Crumpton and Hollis Merchant made a business trip Saturday to Tuscaloosa and Bessemer.

PATES CHAPEL NEWS

Miss Lillie Cook spent the week end with Miss Jewel Wilson, east of Thorsby.

Among those that attended the singing at Collins Chapel were Mrs. E. C. Hayes and family, Miss Jewel Wilson, Lillie Cook and Miss Maude Wallis, Carrie Bolton, Martha Hayes, Mildred Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Maddox and family, Mrs. E. J. Hayes, Mr. Tomme Maddox and Mr. Eugene Cleckler, all of Pates Chapel.

The Pates Chapel people and friends of other churches enjoy the singings very much, and we are going to have an all day singing at Pates Chapel, July 31st, the last Sunday in July. We invite everybody especially the singers.

TRIBUTE—MRS. J. W. FOSHEE

If it were possible for the most renowned artist in the universe to attempt to picture a character, a life, an influence, a spirit of love as was evidenced in the personage of our subject, he would fail in his tints and shadows in the extremity of his canvass. As we undertake to picture her life in words, we feel our vocabulary deficient, as master of words adequate or in language expressive, convening to the reader a retrospective history of a life as was hers. Upon eulogies of woman by gifted orators, they have said that a good woman was the grandest gift to man in the world.

The life of this noble woman is indelibly engraven upon the hearts and minds of all with whom chanced to be her associate. Her influence was as the rays of the morning sun, penetrating a joy of gladness to weary souls, her smiles as the silver moon reflecting purity of character, her eyes, as satalites set azures of love, her words, as dew drops refreshing the tendels of honor and peace, her footprints fashioned pathways to a city celestial.

She was an earnest worker and devoted to her church, the W. M. S. and her class in Sunday school. Her class of young men and young women attested their devotion to their teacher when the last sad and comforting words were said over the bier placing a profusion of floral designs over and around the altar and dropping tears from a wounded heart for one whose life budded on earth to bloom in heaven. Her deeds of kindness to the sick, the bereaved, and unfortunate were her greatest pleasure. We recall an incident that saddens our heart, when one afternoon last summer, she and her daughter called to spend a few hours with a member of our family who cherished them as a special friend, and who was ill. They gave him words of encouragement, but in a few months he passed away, Nov. 1, 1931, and on the 11th day of the same month, Mrs. Duncan, familiarly known as Vivienne, without warning, and the picture of health was slain in an auto accident, and on June 6, 1932, Mrs. Foshee was called. She is and will always be missed in Maplesville, in church organizations and most of all in the home.

She spent her life there, born February 12, 1876 and was first a worker in the Methodist church and later cast her lot with the Maplesville Baptist church, being a charter member at its organization. She took marriage vows with Mr. John W. Foshee on December 15, 1897 and resulting from this union were born on November 8, 1898, Vivienne, Mrs. L. P. Duncan, on August 6, 1901, Maurice, on May 6 1909, John Alwyn and on January 8, 1912, Herbert E., all of whom survive her except Mrs. Duncan, who left in her stead, twin daughters, to cherish the memory of mother and grandmother.

Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of Clanton Baptist Church assisted by Rev. Paul Oden conducted the funreal services in Maplesville Baptist church. Interment in Maplesville cemetery.—A Friend.

PLATFORM OF MR. J. H. JACKSON DEMOCRAT CANDIDATE COM.

In behalf of my candidacy for member of the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, I wish to state some of my views on matters regarding county affairs.

I favor a reduction on the valuation of all real estate at least 25 per cent.

I believe in more permanent road work.

I believe in letting the almshouse out on a salary basis for the reason, what is the employee's gain is the inmates' loss. I also believe that there should be a way provided to carry them to church of their choice at least once a month. I believe this plan is cheaper and more satisfactory than the way it is being operated at present. If elected to office from the Fourth District, I will do all I can to put this in effect.

Your vote and influence in behalf of my candidacy will be appreciated. —J. H. Jackson.

(Paid political adv. by J. H. Jackson, Lomax, Ala.)

PREACHING AT FRIENDSHIP

The pastor, Rev. J. Robert Bean, will preach at Friendship next Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night. The night services will begin at 7:30 o'clock and the morning service at 11. Sunday school will be at 9:30 as usual. The people of the community are cordially invited to attend.

CHAS. COOPER WRITES

Editor Union Banner:

Sometime ago I noticed that our friend, Mr. A. A. Jackson, up at Lomax, has jumped the fence and got over in the Democrats' pasture, and since he broke the ice we notice that Cotton Tom Heflin states that he is going to vote the Democrat ticket this fall, even if they nomiate Al Smith again.

With the loss of the above notable characters along with others who may follow suit, it may make it rather rought riding for Herbert Hoover to get landed this fall.

We know lots of people who seem to have good and plenty of Mr. Hoover's regime, but in view of the unfriendly feeling towards the Hoover administration, we should not lose sight of the fact that we have our interest to look after right here in Chilton County.

Since the second primary is history and we have nomiated Charlie Duke for commissioner of the Fourth District, let us all get behind him now whether we voted for him or not in the primary.

And let us hope that Mr. Duke will make a good commissioner for all the people of the county, and let us hope twice that he will have the interest of the people at heart more than Commissioner Mims seems to have.

I feel that I should say a few words with reference to our personal experience with Mr. Mims a few days ago to tax reduction.

In the first place there is not a man of average intelligence in Chilton County that does not know that the value of real estate is not half what it was when cotton sold from twenty to forty cents per pound.

Commissioner Mims seemed to want to leave the assessments the same; to pull him down was like pulling eye-teeth. We had a twenty-one hundred dollar assessment, which was O.K. when cotton was twenty to forty cents per pound. Today the property would not bring half what it would a few years ago. After a long persuasive talk Mims finally agreed to cut three hundred dollars off.

Right at this point let me say that Mr. Vinson, the present commissioner of our district, acted very nice indeed. He told Mr. Mims that he was familiar with the property in question and that fifteen hundered dollars was a fair assessment and it should not be more under present conditions.

So the people down this way are hoping that Mr. Duke will make a commissioner like Mr. Vinson and not like Mr. Mims.

I feel that the people of Chilton County should be advised concerning the acts of our officers, hence my reason for spilling the "beans."

I have no personal ill will towards Mr. Mims. I just do not believe from his acts that he has the interest of the poor people at heart.

I am not going to do like Mr. Jackson—jump the fence, because some Republican officer does not do his duty. I will try to be more careful next time in voting.—Yours truly, Chas. Cooper.

Hoover and Curtis Are Renominated by G. O. P.

Convention in Chicago Upholds the Administration in Every Particular—Moderate Prohibition Resubmission Plank Adopted, Repealists Being Defeated—France's Attempt to Nominate Coolidge Foiled.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Chicago.—The Republican party in national convention in Chicago re-nominated Herbert Hoover for a second term, which surprised no one in all the world unless it might have been Dr. Joseph I. France of Maryland, the only other contender for the high honor.

In the matter of selecting Mr. Hoover's running mate, however, the unexpected almost happened. Many of the delegates had expressed the opinion that Vice President Curtis should be set aside, not because he was not loyal to the party or not able, but because they thought a younger man would be needed in the strenuous campaign ahead. Besides, the aged Kansan was too dry to suit the wets. So, the day the convention opened there appeared a sudden, spontaneous movement, that grew rapidly, for the drafting of Charles Gates Dawes, the Chicagoan who has filled many important posts, including the Vice Presidency. It was felt the dynamic banker and diplomat would be a good vote-getter, probably serving to hold in line many dissatisfied Republicans.

But General Dawes, just as he relinquished in Washington his latest position, the presidency of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, informed the press that he would not accept the nomination if it were offered him. At the same time word came from the National Capital, apparently authentic, that Mr. Hoover wished the convention to re-nominate Mr. Curtis.

The anti-Curtis people were not yet through and approached Secretary of War Pat Hurley, but the Oklahoman turned them away with the statement: "I can't quit Charles Curtis, for he is my friend. I am for him, and will not be a candidate." The same word came from Theodore Roosevelt, governor general of the Philippines, who was mentioned as a possibility, as was Ambassador Walter E. Edge. So, with scattered opposition, Mr. Curtis was re-nominated.

Moderate Prohibition Plank.

Transcending in importance the choice of leaders, in the eyes of the nation, was the convention's action Wednesday night in regard to prohibition. The preliminary battle of the wets and the drys had been waged fiercely, and in the end neither side won. For the gathering was sternly ruled by the conservative element and the victory went to the "moist." No one of the practical politicians denied that something must be done in the way of furthering modification of prohibition legislation. The demand for this was too general to be ignored, and then, too, it was certain the Democrats would go a long way in that direction. But the President and his advisers, together with the more conservative leaders in the convention, believed that a plank limited to submission of flat repeal or retention of the Eighteenth amendment would be a political error that would alienate too many votes.

So after long conferences and much warm debate the platform committee prepared a resolution, approved by the White House, the main paragraph of which declared the Republicans "believe that the people should have an opportunity to pass upon a proposed amendment the provision of which, while retaining in the federal government power to preserve the gains already made in dealing with the evils inherent in the liquor traffic, shall allow states to deal with the problem as their citizens may determine, but subject always to the power of the federal government to protect those states where prohibition may exist and safeguard our citizens everywhere from the return of the saloon and attendant abuses."

Repeal Resolution Beaten.

The repealers, under the leadership of Senator Bingham of Connecticut, formulated a minority substitute for this plank, and argued for its adoption with vigor and skill. The majority resolution was supported with equal determination in a debate that lasted two hours, with frequent noisy interruptions from the thronged galleries. Probably not a single vote was changed by the oratory and pleas. The middle-of-the-roaders were in the majority and the plank offered by the liberals was rejected by a vote of 681 to 472.

The Bingham resolution was as follows:

"We recommend that the congress of the United States immediately propose an amendment to the federal Constitution repealing the Eighteenth amendment thereto; to be submitted to conventions of the people of the several states called for that sole purpose in accordance with the provisions of Article V of the Constitution of the United States.

"Should the Eighteenth amendment be repealed we pledge our best efforts toward enactment of such measures in the several states as will actually promote temperance, effectively abolish the saloon, whether open or concealed, and bring the liquor traffic itself under complete public supervision and control with revenues properly drawn from legalized sources for the relief of the burdened taxpayers."

Opening of the Convention.

With solemnity, considerable dignity and very little enthusiasm the convention was formally opened half an hour late on Tuesday morning. The sections for delegates and alternates were filled, but in the galleries were great numbers of unoccupied seats. The band played intermittently, the news photographers shot their flash lamps continually in front of every notable, and finally Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, chairman of the national committee, nattily clad, stepped to the speaker's stand, sternly ordered the flood lights turned down and started proceedings with a little talk in which he called attention to the fact that Flag day was being celebrated. Thereupon half a dozen American Legion flags were brought in and grouped in front of the stand, a huge flag was let down from the center of the roof, the four big batteries of flood lights were turned full on the Stars and Stripes and the band struck up the national anthem as the multitude stood.

Chairman Fess then introduced Silas Strawn, head of the citizens' committee, who spoke briefly, giving due credit to Edward N. Hurley, a Democrat, who did the chief work in obtaining and preparing for the convention; and following him came Mayor Anton Cermak with a cordial welcome to the delegates and mention of the many attractions offered them by Chicago.

The invocation was delivered by Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Protestant Episcopal bishop of Washington, D. C. It was a humble acknowledgment of our sins and faults that have brought us to the present sad condition and a plea for help and guidance in the task of getting back to "honest industry, sound learning and pure manners."

Now came the election of Senator Lester J. Dickinson of Iowa as temporary chairman—a mere formality—and the white-haired keynoter promptly began the delivery of the speech on which he and various party leaders had labored many hours.

Dickinson's Keynote Speech.

Senator Dickinson's address was a commendable effort under rather difficult circumstances. Despite the condition into which the country, together with the rest of the world, has fallen, he found many reasons to "point with pride" to the achievements of the administration, and he did not fail to give credit to President Hoover personally for much of what has been accomplished or attempted in the way of restoring economic prosperity. Said he:

"Perhaps it was with prophetic vision that the American people elected Herbert Hoover four years ago with the gratest popular and electoral college vote any President ever received. At any rate, he had scarcely taken the oath of his office before economy storm clouds had begun to cast their sinister shadow over the nations of the world.

"His first act prevented a financial panic. Invoking the powers of the federal reserve board, he prevented this catastrophe. Thus he cushioned the effects of the debacle in Wall Street which followed the greatest period of stock speculation the world had ever known.

Social Order Maintained.

"With the knowledge that every major economic convulsion in the past had been attended by strikes, riots, bloodshed, and death, President Hoover's next concern was to maintain social order.

"To this end he summoned to the White House industrial leaders of the nation and obtained from them a promise to maintain existing wage scales as long as it was possible to do so. On the same day leaders of organized labor, sitting around the same conference table, gave their pledge that there would be no industrial wage disturbances."

The speaker then contrasted the stable social order in America with the chaos that prevailed in many countries abroad, and told of Mr. Hoover's drastic action in proposing the moratorium that averted world-wide catastrophe. He followed with a relation of the creation of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and of other measures initiated by the President.

The Democrats were scored for their alleged efforts to distort every move Mr. Hoover made, and especially for their efforts to inflate the national currency.

Praise for the Farm Board.

With considerable adroitness Senator Dickinson even managed to defend the federal farm board's doings. On this subject he said:

"The farm board has been the butt of much criticism, the greater part of which is unjust. We have heard much abuse of the board's operations in stabilization of cotton and wheat by its financing of co-operatives to purchase these commodities, but we have heard very little of the fact that by its entry into the market in February during the crop year 1930 and again in November of the next crop year it stemmed the panic which had broken agricultural prices.

"The farm board held prices in each of these two crops above world levels to such a degree that the very moderate estimate of the amount realized by the American farmer over and above what they would have realized otherwise is between $2,000,000,000 and $3,000,000,000.

"It matters little if the government loses $150,000,000 for the savings it made to homes of farmers throughout this whole land. It was throwing a regiment into the front of the battle to lose, but saved millions.

"Directly and indirectly, the federal government has, during the last three years, poured into the agricultural industry nearly one billion dollars. Grievous as his suffering may be, no farmer can deny the undeviating friendship of the Republican party."

The keynoter spoke long and fluently, but said not a single word about the prohibition problem.

Early in his address Senator Dickinson mentioned President Hoover, and the delegates and alternates rose en masse, cheering and shouting, while the band broke out in a patriotic tune. But the demonstration was a feeble effort and did not last long.

Bertrand Snell Takes Command.

Wednesday's first session was given over to the permanent organization of the convention and reports of several committees. Representative Bertrand H. Snell of New York was elected permanent chairman and on receiving the gavel from Senator Dickinson he launched immediately into his lengthy address. He declared the future of the country was safe only if the Republicans are again entrusted with its management, and he pictured the tragedy that would result if the Democrats win control.

"Victory has come to the Republican party because victory has been earned," Mr. Snell said.

"The nation has been safe when the Republican party has been in control of the government. It has never been safe when Republicans were not on guard.

"Everywhere, outside of the Republican party, is confusion and chaos. The only sound and united public sentiment of the United States is represented in this convention.

"The Democratic party is fatally weak because it does not command the support or confidence of the nation and because it is utterly lacking in team work. The Democrats have a minority complex which they cannot change. As a fault-finding, caviling minority opposition they are 100 per cent perfect. As a driving, constructive majority they are a 100 per cent failure."

Listing the Hoover achievements, the chairman declared that the President had: "Solidified labor and capital against the enemy (the ghastly pestilence of world-wide depression); he avoided the deadly pit of the dole; he rescued the drought victims; he beat off the attacks upon railroads, agriculture, banks and public securities; he mobilized the world's financial resources; he preserved the integrity of the gold standard, and warded off the stealthy approach of panic by way of Germany."

All "Demonstrated" Except Oregon.

The delegates had taken to heart the comments in the press on the sadly weak Hoover demonstration of the first session, so when Mr. Snell first named the President there was a great whoop of joy. Standards were pulled up and waved and the cheering continued for perhaps fifteen minutes while everyone stood. No, not quite everyone. In the front center of the hall a little group of men stolidly retained their seats and remained silent. They were the delegates from Oregon and they were under instruction to vote for Dr. Joseph I. France of Maryland. Deeming it their duty to sit steady, they did just that, forming a small, quiet islet in a stormy sea.

Secretary Gleason stepped forward as Chairman Snell concluded his speech, and announced that the committee on resolutions had completed its draft of a prohibition plank, copies of which would be delivered to the state delegations at two o'clock so they might consider it in caucuses. To give time for this operation the convention was then adjourned until eight o'clock in the evening instead of four o'clock as had been the plan. Delegates thereupon hustled away from the Stadium to their state headquarters in the loop hotels, eager to get at that all-important resolution.

Battle Over Prohibition Plank.

Anticipating the prohibition plank fight, the gallery ticket holders crowded into the hall in the evening long before most of the delegates arrived, and the affair took on more of the appearance of a real national convention from which excitement and pleasure might be derived. The inevitable delay in starting proceedings was mitigated for the spectators by the tireless efforts of the man at the pipe organ who played all the popular airs he knew. At last Chairman Snell obtained order and introduced James R. Garfield, chairman of the committee on resolutions, to submit the platform.

The document was long, as always. The introduction was the usual laudation of the doings of the party and the administration during the past three and a half years, and then came thirty-eight planks covering a wide range of subjects. Mild demonstrations of approval from various delegations marked the reading of resolutions in which they were especially interested, but everyone in the Stadium, delegates and spectators alike, was waiting eagerly for the prohibition plank.

At last Mr. Garfield, pausing a second, uttered the words: "The Eighteenth amendment," and instantly a roar of joyous anticipation broke out. The preamble displeased no one, until the speaker read the sentence:

"We do not favor a submission limited to the issue of retention or repeal." Then came applause from the conservatives that was utterly drowned out by the angry boos and jeers of the occupants of the galleries. The uproar continued until Chairman Snell was forced to appeal to the audience to "pay attention to Mr. Garfield and not to partisanship."

When the clamor was stilled Mr. Garfield hurriedly completed the reading of the platform and moved its adoption.

Bingham Offers Repeal Substitute.

Then stepped forward Senator Hiram Bingham, protagonist in the flat repeal movement, to present the minority substitute for the prohibition plank. White haired, lean, and right on edge, he looked every inch the fighter as he looked out over the house with a grim smile. The repealers among the delegations and in the galleries—the latter appeared to be unanimous—instantly started a tremendous demonstration, the standards of many of the wet states being carried through the aisles, together with collections of beer steins and "growlers." The repeal plank being modeled on that adopted the previous week by the Indiana Republican convention, the Hoosier delegation paraded behind a huge banner lettered with the words "Indiana Demands Repeal" and "Indiana Leads the Way." Dry delegates of the state of Washington fought hand to hand with their wet colleagues to keep their standard from being added to the procession, and won the battle with the aid of the police.

Response to Senator Bingham's arguments was so fervid and loud that one might have thought his cause was won, if it were not for the knowledge that the contest had already been decided in the caucuses of the state delegations.

Galleries Boo Garfield.

Garfield took the floor again to defend, needlessly, the majority report, and in opening he deplored the fact that in the midst of a great economic crisis, with problems of vast import pressing for solution, the party should be compelled to spend so much time on the prohibition question. Then he accused the repeal advocates of offering no constructive substitute for prohibition.

"They ask us," said Garfield, "to go back to those conditions of which the younger people of our generation know nothing—"

The speaker was cut short by an outbreak of bedlam. It began with some scattering hoots and then, gathering volume, burst into a deafening tornado of derision, dying down as quickly as it rose.

"Yes, my friends, I repeat," Garfield resumed.

Another avalanche of derisive yells. "I repeat—"

Another torrent of howls.

Chairman Snell hammered and hammered until he almost broke his gavel, and finally, reminding the galleryites that they were the guests of the convention, he threatened to have them all ejected, which would have been some job for the sergeants at arms. Mr. Garfield was reasonably patient and at last was allowed to finish, though he was heartily booed as he stepped back to his chair.

Blast From Butler.

Next came Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, the militant president of Columbia university, and a leader of the nation's wets. He described the majority plank as "the worst proposition almost that has been made," a misleading proposal that would give us years of litigation, and he contradicted Mr. Garfield's assertion that the repealers offered no substitute for the prohibition amendment in the way of national control of liquor. He lauded party loyalty but shouted "What comes first is party honesty and courage."

Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, speaking presumably for the administration, ably supported the plank that had been drafted with his assistance. His most striking assertion was: "The submission of the question 'Shall we repeal or retain?' leaves it to the people to make the choice of whether to endure the evils of today or to return to the evils of the old saloon and the old liquor traffic. The minority report gives the choice between the speakeasy and the saloon and gives no other choice. It returns to the conditions before the Eighteenth amendment.

"The difference between the two proposals is this: The minority report holds a promise and hope that the saloon will not return. Our proposal is such that nowhere can the saloon come back as an American institution again. We propose to protect the nation against the return of conditions which Americans never want to see again."

These big guns were followed in rapid succession by others of considerable caliber and some who were more like popguns. Col. Ambrose Kennedy of Rhode Island, Walter S. Fenton of Vermont, Mrs. Agnes Jones Gifford of New Jersey and Governor Balzer of Nevada were among the supporters of the minority report.

The allotted time having expired, Chairman Snell ordered the roll called on the motion to substitute the minority plank for that offered by the majority. The result was that the repealers were defeated by 681 to 472. Their vote was really considerably larger than they had expected. Many of the delegations were split.

Hurriedly the chairman put the motion to adopt the majority report as a whole, and declared it carried by a viva voce vote. By this time it was after one o'clock and the weary Republicans were glad to adjourn and get a little sleep.

Herbert Hoover Nominated.

Every one stood up and sang a stanza of America to open the final session at 11:30 o'clock Thursday morning. The call of the roll was ordered for nominations for the Presidency, Alabama yielded to California, and Joseph Scott took the rostrum to present the name of Herbert Hoover. The distinguished lawyer and eminent Roman Catholic talked eloquently and at length about California and the West generally, and then pronounced the necessary eulogy on Mr. Hoover. As he uttered the name the band in the gallery blared forth, another band entered playing and the stated demonstration began. Nearly every state standard was carried in the procession through the aisles, together with some huge banners and other devices, and from nets in the ceiling hundreds of toy balloons, each bearing the word "Hoover," were released to float down among the delegates and guests.

Even the most ardent Republican could not claim that the demonstration was a real success. It was kept going for thirty minutes, but only with the help of the hard working bands and the vociferations of a few enthusiasts. However, it sufficed.

No other state offered a candidate until Oregon was reached. Then a Mr. L. B. Sandblast of Portland stepped forward and told of the many reasons why, in his opinion, the convention should select former Senator Joseph I. France of Maryland for the party's standard bearer. Mild applause.

France's Scheme Squelched.

"The secretary will proceed with the roll call" said Chairman Snell.

But Doctor France had another idea. Pushing his way onto the rostrum, he demanded a chance to speak, and when the chairman refused, he shook his fist in Mr. Snell's face. Half a dozen officials and one policeman hastened to the rescue and France, still protesting, was hustled back. It was generaly supposed at first that he had desired to speak in his own behalf, but the truth was he intended to withdraw his own candidacy and put Calvin Coolidge in nomination for the Presidency. This did not accord at all with the plans of the managers of the convention, so he was squelched.

It is needless to give the details of the vote for the Presidential nominee. Suffice it to say that Mr. Hoover received 1,126½ votes, the rest of the 1,154 being scattered among Coolidge, Dawes, Wadsworth, France and Blaine of Wisconsin. On motion of a gentleman from Oregon the nomination was made unanimous.

Vice President Curtis was proposed for renomination by Mr. Scott of Kansas. Iowa, through Darling the cartoonist, offered the name of Hanford MacNider. New York put forward Gen. James G. Harbord, and Florida asked consideration for J. Leonard Replogle. All these gentlemen got some votes, but Mr. Curtis was an easy winner.

Notification committees were named, thanks voted to Chicago and other formalities carried out, and then in mid-afternoon the Republican national convention of 1932 came peacefully to an end.

Nine delegates from Wisconsin who belong to the La Follette faction incurred the wrath of their colleagues on the opening day because they failed to rise when Temporary Chairman Dickinson first mentioned the President, and again kept their seats when the flag was unfurled, rising only as the national anthem was played after Mayor G. W. Meade of Wisconsin Rapids had cried shame at them. The conservative delegates from the Badger state held a special caucus on this matter and denounced the La Follette men bitterly. Many of them favored asking the credentials committee to unseat the La Follettes, but this, it was decided, might make them martyrs.

BICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION TO CONTINUE IN FULL SWING

It is a mistake to believe, says the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, that the American people have let down in their celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of George Washington's birth, on the supposition that there has been celebration enough. The Federal commission is in daily touch with hundreds of thousands of local committees all over the United States, every one of them more active than ever before in carrying out the celebration over the period planned from the beginning—that is from Washington's birthday until Thanksgiving.

The other day the commission received a letter from a member of one of these committees which voiced exactly the spirit which has kept these committees unremittingly active. Said the writer of this letter: "We need this Bicentennial celebration. It is a spiritual tonic of hope, of courage, of faith."

From another quarter the federal commission received a communication, also from a member of one of these local committees, which said that for years the community in which he lived had been torn by two factions. The town having committed itself to a proper celebration of the George Washington Bicentennial, a committee was formed from both factions. And getting together in the work of planning this tribute to George Washington had so filled the community with Washington's sipirt that not only was the breach between opposing committee members healed, but the entire community was welded into a lastingly united whole. The residents of that city had learned the truth so movingly stated in the letter regarding this celebration as a spiritual tonic to the nation.

From countless other sources, the commission receives daily testimony of this return of Washington's influence. Everwhere Americans are turning from personal problems and local differences to join in community and national effort, as if in an istinct to make Washington again their leader in a new nationalism. The prevailing economic perplexity far from proving a distraction, is instead the chief incentive moving the people into this new thought of country. They find present times a close copy of the doubt and perplexity and experiment that confronted Washington, and look to his ideals and wisdom to lead them again on the road to security.

Not one individual, or one community, is finding this celebration a spiritual tonic of hope, of courage, of faith. The discovery is general. It is why the celebration of Washington's bicentennial has not lagged but is only now gathering its real momentum. Every school commencement this year has been or will be a George Washington celebration. As for the 683, 371 local committees scattered over the country, they are not static bodies, formed to be mentioned in the papers; they are earnestly at work, as evidenced in newspaper reports of what they are doing. Their activities are represented in 500,000 press clippings covering the progress of the celebration, the greatest number of references ever recorded in the American press on a single subject.

PORK BARREL POST OFFICES

If the Garner public works bill passes it would mean 135,000 new postoffices or repairs to post office buildings now up, none of which are badly needed.

Post office buildings pay no taxes and they do not even pay for street paving. They are not revenue producing concerns and once built they represent dead capital.

President Hoover denounced the scheme as one of the worst pork barrel and log cabin holdups ever planned.

It is high time that congress learns the difference between what helps unemployment and what benefits politicians only.

The way Congress is getting along nowadays must make most of the members feel like they are riding on the merry-go-round.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert)

A great many people are trying to account for the defeat, in some states and congressional districts of the sitting senators and representatives, in the various Republican and Democratic primaries. It is difficult to base the reason of these defeats on any one issue, or one set of issues. Some of those who have lost have been defeated by dry and others by wet candidates, so that it can not all be blamed on the liquor issue. The case of Senator Brookhart of Iowa and Senator Morrison of North Carolina are examples.

Perhaps the best general reason that can be assigned for the various upsets is the depression and the failure of Congress to do anything to end the hard times. Just what Congress could do, of course, is still a matter of debate, although it is genrally conceded that a program of general economy and of rapid balancing of the budget would help a great deal to support the constructive measures advocated by the administration and put into law a few months ago. But no matter whether or not he believes that Congress can end the depression, the average man is inclined to lay a part of the blame for present conditios on the failure of Congrses to act promptly and effectively. As a result sitting senators and Congressmen coming up for renomination, have encountered many casualties in the ranks, although there are of course notable exceptions.

This habit of blaming everything that goes wrong on to the "ins" is not totally an American custom. They do it in South America, and Europe too, and even in the Orient. Recall for example, the recent revolution in Chile, the overthrow of the government of Japan, the changes in France and Germany, and—to go back a few months—the decisive defeat of the Labor government in Great Britain. Conservative governments have been turned out, in some instances, to make way for radical governments and, in other instances, liberal governments have given away to those with a conservative label. There has been no general pattern of change. It has been in most instances, a turning out of the "ins" and replacing them with the "outs" even though most of the voters must realize if they were to stop and think, that the various governments of the world have had little to do with the great economic depression which was only an inevitable aftermath of the World War.

Some of the American statesmen who have been praising France during the past year or so for its great thrift, and its business ability, which they claimed has softened the effects of the depression in the Latin Republic, are now beginning to wonder whether they may not have spoken too soon. Latest word from Paris is to the effect that the government is going to have a tough time in balancing the budget as did our own congress. Some figures made public by the French minister of finances are to the effect that there will be a deficit of $160,000,000 at the end of 1932 and plans are already being laid to reduce military expenditures by ten per cent to effecting a saving of $60,000,000, as a starter.

It is true that France was not lavish in lending money to Germany and Australia, as were the American and the British bankers, but she has loaned considerable sums to her allies in Central and Eastern Europe. These are political rather than commercial loans. If conditions in Central Europe get much worse, as they show considerable evidence of doing, some of the French allies are going to suffer even more than they are suffering at the present, in an economic sense. The French have shown a great deal of satisfaction in the way the world has been withdrawing gold from the United States and other countries and piling it up in Paris. But if the French deficit continues and conditions get worse in Central Europe the gold may start sliding out of France faster than it was drawn from America.

DEMOCRATS MAY WIN— BUT WE WILL SEE

One must admit that the political situation is very much muddled. By the patent theory of politics and government that the odds are always against the ins and in favor of the outs, it appears that the Republicans will have a stiff fight to hold the fort this year.

Then, too, we have only the roarings of the Democratic hopefuls to listen to down here in the good old South. And, may we ask you, what in the world can you find that can roar bigger and louder and longer than a Democrat when he begins to see visions of himself sitting up at the pie counter of political offices?

Very few Republicans will be unduly alarmed. We have only to remember that the Democrats have never proven themselves to be such masters at politics and government as their campaign orators paint them to be. We know that the Democrats in office are easily capable of making even a bigger mess of things than the Republicans have ever done.

There will be few deflections from the Republican ranks. There are not many Republicans who will jump out of the frying pan into the fire. True, it is hot in the pan, and will get hotter as the campaign gets under full steam. But it will not develop to such a stage that Republicans will be convinced that the Democats have anything better to offer than we have under Republican administration.

Democrats locally hope to place such stress upon "Hoover Prosperity" that it will cause the rout of enough Republicans in Chilton County to place the county in control of the Democrats. They are greatly encouraged in this effort because they have already succeeded in capturing one Republican. That is about the only one they will get. Chilton County Republicans know better than that.

The Republicans of Chilton County will stand to their guns in November and elect the Republican nominees in Chilton County Any other course would be futile and foolish.

The World Court may be called upon to decide the questions as to whether French potato bugs are endangering the potato crop in Germany and Holland, and we would rather have it busy doing that than deciding the difference between the Canadian grasshoppers.

We do not know what caused Chancellor's Breuning's government in German to resign but we are willing to bet it wasn't any disagreement over prohibition.

Adolf Hilter as a leader of the opposition in Germany acts like a game cock, but the chances are that once he gets in power he will rapidly get into the pigeon class.

Now that the budget has been balanced without a general sales tax, wouldn't it be a good idea for Congress to add a general sales tax of one-half of one per cent, to be applied in emergency in case the budget gets itself unbalanced again?

MORAL ECHOES

(By D. W. Haskew)

A funny thing happened on Laymen's Day in a certain Methodist church. The service was ready to begin. The laymen were in the pulpit and the pastor was sitting on the front seat just in front. In the stillness that came just before the first hymn was announced some one sitting in the rear of the church dropped a twenty-five cent coin. It started to rolling down the incline floor where the preacher was sitting. It missed every foot under the seats and came to the preacher's shoe, struck it and then fell flat on the floor. With a bright face it smiled into the countenance of the preacher saying, "Here I am." Before the preacher could reach for it a man was standing over his shoulder saying, "Where is my quarter?" That was one sensible piece of money. Through mistake the owner dropped it and it was not to be outdone and so it made a race for the preacher. Wish that all the quarters belonging to the preacher would start to rolling toward him. Many do make a start but they are picked up on the way.

A family of six was seated at the breakfast table. Coffee was served and then the sugar bowl and the cream pitcher were started on the rounds. Each member of the family emptied some sugar and a little cream into his cup of coffee and stirred it well. This was done to make the coffee better, to make it sweeter and more delightful to the taste. Before this was done this family of 6 had stood with bowed heads and worshipped together. Around that table they had thanked God for his protection during the night and they had prayed for His guidance during the day. That morning prayer was the sweetness that went into the soul to make it better and finer for its touch with the outside world. When a family will pause for family devotion, it is just like putting sugar into coffee. The family altar will sweeten every heart and make it much finer in its attitudes toward the world. We are not surprised that the water of life is bitter to many. They begin the day without putting prayer into it to make it sweet. Many do not flavor the soul with the milk of human kindness. When we learn to empty the sugar bowl of prayer and the cream pitcherer of human kindness into our cup of life, then our life will be palitable to the world about us.

On June the 12, there were four boys in a country home. They were all of the teen age. Two of the boys seemed to be wise and two of them seemed to be foolish. The foolish boys said unto their father, "Father will you let us have the family car today? We have heard about a ball game tha tis to happen six miles away and we want to attend." The father reluctantly gave his consent. The two foolish boys rode away to the ball game on the holy Sabbath day. The other two boys were wiser than their brothers. They shaved their faces, bathed their bodies and then clad themselves in their best suits. Together they walked away to Sunday school and church. That day the parents of those four boys had not one worry about the two boys who went away to church, but all day those parents talked and worried about the two boys who went to the ball game. How foolish to spent God's holy day batting balls. How wise it is to "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

"Money can talk" said a man to me the other day as he hurried on with a roll of bils in his hand. I called to him to stop and interpret to me the language of his money. He did so and with much eloquence he interpreted the language of his money. Money may talk to some folks, but to me it has only one parrot expression. All it ever says to me is "Good Bye."

One night I was riding an old mule in the moon light. I would plow this mule during the week and then on Sunday I would ride him off to a country church and do my best on an assault at preaching. On this particular Sabbath I had tried to preach at 11 a.m., 3 p.m. and at 8 p.m. The mule and his rider were weary as we went jogging our way back home. I trusted myself to the mule and before I knew it I was fast asleep on his back. All at once he snorted and dashed away at great speed. I gripped the horn of the saddle and glanced behind to see a big dog as he hurried in the opposite direction. I knew that there were many mad dogs out at that time, and from the action of that dog I was sure that he was mad. Lucky for me that I did not fall to the ground when the mule leaped forward, and lucky for the mule that the dog missed him when he made a lunge at his feet. Since that time I have learned to keep myself awake when there are mad dogs along the road of life. Whether you believe it or not, the road of life is full of mad dogs. Better stay awake in spite of the weariness of the flesh.

I had a school mate who carried an alarm clock to college with him. He would wind it good and tight and set it to go off at six o'clock. Right on the minute the Big Ben shook its head and rattled its teeth until the boy crawled out of bed. The next morning he heard the Big Ben start but he reached over and turned off the alarm. His clock proved worthless, because he refused to obey it. How like your conscience was that clock.

MOMENTAR MADNESS

It's a queer thing that you never hear of anybody who has done a good deed claiming to have been temporarily insane.

What Congress ought to do is to cut out so much pole vaulting and to try to do a little balancing.

Of course the longer Congress stays in session without passing a tax bill and balancing the budget by economy the greater the depression grows and the harder the task of really balancing the budget grows.

OUR REFUSAL TO PUBLISH MR. JACKSON'S LETTER

In the very near future you will doubtless hear about The Union-Banner refusing to publish a political letter for Mr. A. A. Jackson this week. Mr. Jackson brought the weighty document to us last Saturday and we gave it back to him promptly with our refusal to publish same.

We stated to Mr. Jackson that since he had joined the Democratic party, we think he ought to be willing to use the Democratic paper in his efforts to "tear up" the Republican party.

It is evident that Mr. Jackson intends to go his length in fighting the Republicans, and particuarly The Union-Banner. We do not propose to put ourselves to the trouble to give Mr. Jackson a club to beat on us with.

As has been stated, The Union-Banner is "the Republican organ" of Chilton County. We have defended the Republican party and the Republcian citizens of Chilton County for many years. We do not propose now to become the agency for such malcontents as Mr. Jackson, who seeks by every device of his agile mind, to heap abuse and criticism upon our party.

Mr. Jackson and his associates in the Democratic party will perhaps try to make a great political coup out of our refusal of space to him in our paper. But they are welcome to make all they can out of it.

If Mr. Jackson can't get enough publicity to suit him in the Democratic paper, he can do without it, so far as we are concerned. We are through with him politically, just as we stated last week.

Governor Roosevelt says that from now on we are going to think more of the consumers and less about the producer. What does he advocate—pie eating contests?

The MAN in the MOON

Looks Over All—
Overlooks None.

The Prodigal Son

One day last week I heard a bunch of fellows talking over the subject of Tom Heflin's return to the Democratic ranks. And, oh, how most of the Demmies were rejoicing that "Cotton Tawm" had seen fit to come back into the fold. Some of them, however, could not see it that way, and were complaining. "Well, you Republicans are done with him now, and have dumped him back on our hands," said one. One of our genuine Republicans answered him, though. "Well," he asked, "what are you griping about? Didn't we give you two worn-out Republicans along with him, for 'boot'?" To tell the truth, we have given them several worn-out Republicans in the last few years. And, lo, in nearly every case, they pick up these worn-out, frazzeled Republicans and make candidates out of them. Two of these will be on the Democratic ticket in the coming race. Oh, well, such is life.

Nigger In The Woodpile

Our friends, yet ever-present political adversaries, the Democrats, are forever whooping "nigger" in our ears. However, several negroes were allowed to vote in the Democratic primary last week at Montgomery. And even "Grandma," the Montgomery Advertiser, was glad enough of the fact that she announced it in a neat little special box right on the front page. To quote Amos and Andy—now ain't that sump'n? How can the kettle call the pot black, when it is covered with the same soot which it points to as covering the pot? They try to explain it away, by saying that, in voting thus, they were sworn to support the Democratic ticket in the fall. Now, listen. No matter which ticket you voted last week, in doing so, you pledged your support to that ticket in the forth-coming general election. White or black, you used the same kind of ticket, and the pledge was printed on the lower edge of the ticket—you automatically pledged your support when you marked your ticket and it was placed in the ballot box. I think the instance just about knocks all the wind out of the old "lily-white" idea you've heard all these years since the Civil War. Lily-white! White supremacy! Good old pure white Democratic party! What a slogan! What a motto! What a party! What a world! What a—oh, well, what's the use?

My Who's Who

Once again I must offer apologies to my readers for not having the regular Who's Who article included. The same excuse must suffice again, though. I have not been able to see Mr. Butler, to secure a few needed items of information which I will need in his article, and until I can see him and get this, the Who's Who will be omitted. Here's hoping for next week, however.

It Doesn't Work Here

In Europe, where the whole economic and governmental situation seems to be sitting on the proverbial powder keg anyway, the Communistic, or "Red" idea goes over in big shape, but not in this country. Our people may gripe a little over situations which do not meet with their approval, but raises its head as a solution of their troubles, it is always stamped down at once. Our people have sense enough to look across the big pond and see what might happen to our own country if they should listen to such propaganda. Communism thrives on discontent, and goodness knows there is plenty of that in our country now. But along with this discontent there is a sense of caution not found among the densely populated countries in Europe, which causes them to THINK, and just as long as our people will think before jumping, we have no cause for worry over danger of mob rule.

Hoover Again

No matter how much Mr. Hoover has been blamed and "cussed" for present conditions, he has been placed before the people of our nation for re-election. That he will be re-elected I have no doubt. He has done as well with a bad situation as anyone could have done. He has been hampered on every hand—in every move he has undetaken to better conditions. Co-operation? He has had none, whatsoever. We have reason to believe that a turn for the better along economic lines is near, now, and many people over the country feel that, inasmuch as Mr. Hoover has had to bear the brunt and blame for these bad conditions, he should, likewise be the beneficiary of any good break that may be headed our way. And feeling this way as they do, they will try to give him a chance to prove the wisdom of his policies. Too, the Democrats can not and do not attempt to offer any plan of salvation for our ills. They are content to let affairs rock along and take care of themselves. Theirs is an "all to win, nothing to lose" view. Reconstruction is an elephant's job—a G. O. P. elephant's job.—Man in the Moon.

Onions on a Big Scale

For months I have been hearing Jack Mims talk about his field of onions. It sounded kind of odd to say a field of onions. Usually onions in this country are expressed by such terms as a "row" or a "patch." Last week I accepted an invitation from Jack to see his onion field. I was unusually impressed by the spectacle. Two acres of onions is the most I ever saw at one time. Mr. Mims, so far as I know, is the first person in this county to go into the onion business on a commercial scale. His venture this year has been interesting; and will prove more profitable than cotton, to say the least of it. The question of growing onions on a commercial scale might well be studied by a group of our farmers. Shipping and marketing could doubtless be done to better advantage if this product were grown here in quantities of car loads.

A New Trick of the Cabbage Patch

While I was down at the Mims farm to see the onions, Mr. Mims's mother showed me a new trick her cabbage patch has put on. She had a few rows of cabbage in her garden. Theh plants headed early in the spring, about April, when she cut them off and canned them. Presently the stumps began to sprout out, and she left them to have their way. Now the cabbage patch is full of heads again, and some of the stumps have as many as eight sprouts on them, a great many of which have fine heads.

Our Two Charleys

The run-off primary Tuesday, June 14th, was a good day for "Charleys". Both the nomniees of the Republican party happened to be of that name. Charley Duke is the nominee for Commissioner of the Fourth District, and Charley Wilkins is the nominee for member of the County Board of Education.

I Also Wonder What

Reading an article in the Alabama Journal the other day, I was interested in the comment of that paper about a fellow in Marianna, Florida, who offers to buy many different kinds of home-made articles, such as axe handles, wagon spokes, etc. In his advertisement he also says he will buy a car load of hickory saw-dust. I wonder if he really means that, or just put in the saw dust part to make the advertisement impressive. What do you suppose a man could do with a carload of hickory saw-dust, or any other kind of saw-dust, as for that matter?

They Didn't Tarry Long

A couple of advertising "promoters" stopped in Clanton Monday. They had a big scheme whereby they hoped to enroll the merchants of Clanton into a trade-week advertising and merchandising proposition. They started out to call upon the merchants. After they had seen about three merchants, and failing to get any response favorable to their plan, they got in their car and sped away. I am glad that the merchants of Clanton have found out it does not pay to go into such ventures. If the merchants want to advertise, they can do it themselves. We have two good newspapers here, and both of them are just as able to help the merchants in their advertising as the traveling "specialists" who come along now and then. And when the merchant plans and carries out his own advertising program, there is no traveler to take a big portion of the money and carry it out of town.

Don't Bother My Boll Weevils

While the big rain was falling Monday evening, I was talking with Will Bice, a farmer who lives two miles West of Clanton. The boll weevil subject came up. "I don't want anybody to bother my boll weevils," said Mr. Bice. "I want them to do all they can to cut down the cotton crop, and maybe we can get a decent price for what is left." I thought maybe the farmers will come to keeping boll weevils in their fields as a price stimulant. It might be expensive economy. One thing sure. Plenty of boll weevils will cut the crop, all right. If the farmers will not do it any other way, I guess the weevil plan will have to be relied upon.

A Card From Tom Parrish

Got a postal card from Tom Parrish Monday. He is in the National Sanitarium for war veterans at Johnson City, Tenn. He says he is some better than when he went there; but does not know how long they will keep him. "It is wonderful up here in the Smoky Mountains, 1,800 feet above sea level," he says. "The place is crowded with patients coming and going day and night. It is a good place to eat, sleep, and rest."

Damage to a Tree

The wind Monday evening dealt a cruel blow to one of the big oak trees in front of the Clanton Baptist Church. One of the huge limbs was torn from the body, and with it came down about half of the top of the tree. This will perhaps mean the total loss of this splendid oak. A tree is like an animal—it often happens when it is seriously hurt or injured, the only remedy is to kill it and get it out of its misery. The tree mentioned above has been a close companion of mine for more than twenty-five years. I knew it away back in the days of Uncle Patty Smith and Frank Crichton. I would hate to see it lost, especially now since it occupies such an important place in the landscape of the church grounds.

BURIED CIVILIZATION

The oldest town so far found by man has been unearthed, hidden beneath a heavy covering of taxes.

The bathing suits are scantier looking than ever this year, but it isn't on account of the depression.

ABUNDANT SUPPLY

The bank of International Settlements had a good year and business of making international settlements continues with plenty of raw material on hand.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY

What we are looking for is a great statesman who will invent a lot of taxes that nobody but the other fellow will have to pay.

After all the bulls and bears in Wall Street wouldn't get very far if it weren't for the goats.

THORSBY SECTION

There has been considerable discussion and question as to whether a fall crop of Beans will be raised and shipped by this association or not.

This has been talked by the manager and directors, with the result that the association will if the markets permit, ship a fall crop of beans, these to be planted on or about July 1st. Therefore all those who wish to try to raise and ship beans at this time may do so, with the understanding that if the markets permit the loading of cars, price being sufficient, we will take care of them. Otherwise the beans, will have to be disposed of by the grower himself, wherever he can do so. If this fall shipment proves profitable then the association may for another year take steps at their yearly crop meeting to include this on their regular shipping program.

Up to this time some five cars of beans have been shipped, with good returns, and there is no reason why beans cannot be made one of the major shipping crops. However it would seem better for us to plant these first beans about April 15th instead of April 1st as was done. Because we were about one to two weeks early on the market to obtain the higher level of prices.

Many Soils Too Acid

Field tests show that acidity has reached a point in many soils where it is retarding plant growth and reducing crop yields. Any increase in acidity this year will have an extremely adverse effect on growth. Once crops have been planted, the best safeguard is to side-dress with a non-acid material like Chilean nitrate. Experiments in Alabama show that nitrate reduces acidity by the same extent that other materials increase it.

Foursquare Church

(F. E. Clements)
Pastor

Let us measure up to standard, not strtch up, said our pastor in his morning message last Sunday morning. Jesus is looking for fruit-bearing disciples, not only a little fruit, but much fruit as the scripture reads in John 15:8, "Herein is my father glorified that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples."

Keen interest was manifested in the Young People's Crusaders meeting, with a Bible scripture hunt contest between the Crusaders and the Children's Church. Are you familiar with your Bible? Another contest is on the program for next Sunday.

Services for next week are as follows:

Tuesday night; 7:30, orchestra practce.

Wendesday afternoon; 2:30, Dorcas Socety, Devotional and sewing for the needy.

Thursday night; 7:30, Mid-week service.

Saturday afternoon; 2:30, Children's Church.

Prov. 22:6, tells us "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." When you come to town on a shopping trip, bring the children to church, or better still, come along with them and enjoy the service.

Sunday: 9:30, Sunday school, a class for all; 11:00, morning worship; 7:00 Crusaders "contest," Scripture hunt, Crusaders and Children's Crurch; 7:45, Evening worship.

Everyone welcome to all services. Come and bring a friend.

COMING TO THE FRONT WITH SINCLAIR GASOLINE

Since taking charge of the distributing agency for Sinclair gasoline in this territory last winter, Mr. Kin Vinson has been pushing hard to put his products in the front rank of the motor fuel business. He has met with a satsfactory degree of success. But he is still ambitious to put Sinclair out in front of them all.

In his efforts to gain a wider patronage for Sinclair products Mr. Vinson is instituting an advertising campaign on a scale that has not been attempted by a motor fuel distrbutor in thia territory heretofore.

Mr. Vinson says "I am determined that motor car users all over Chilton County shall become acquainted with the superior qualities of Sinclair products. To this end I shall carry our message to them in a series of newspaper advertisements over a period of several weeks.

"The whole story of Sinclair's superiority can not be told in mere words. It is the use of Sinclair in your motor that proves its qualities.

Special emphasis is placed upon the new Sinclair Regular gasoline, stepped up 70 per cent. Sinclair has spent eighteen million dollars in perfecting the process whereby Sinclair Regular gasoline is stepped up in power so that it is superior, they claim, to many of the premium gasolines that sell for three cents a gallon more.

Sinclair products are retailed in Clanton by Preacher Bishop and Henry Miller, at the Sinclair Service Station. These boys will be glad to have you as one of the users of Sinclair gasoline and motor oils.

He Learned About Hams From The Colonel

The Kentucky Colonel Introduces Rector to An Old Friend

By GEORGE RECTOR
World Famous Restaurateur and Daily Food Broadcaster

A few years ago I went to Seattle, and while I was there I learned something which none of the chefs in Paris could teach me. It took a Kentucky Colonel, visiting in Seattle, to show me a little culinary trick which has made many friends for me. Here's the story.

I was making a personal appearance in Seattle one time and was talking to a group of people about the succulent Virginia Ham. I stood right up and said: "There is no ham like a Virginia Ham." Among the people present at this very intellectual discourse was a Southerner—a real honest-to-goodness Colonel who was visiting relatives in the Northwest. When I finished my rhapsody on Virginia Ham, he sang me a symphony of Kentucky Ham—saying to me in a delightful Southern drawl: "Mr. Rector I am sorry but you-all just don't know what ham is." I smiled, thinking that here was another food fanatic, and, with a promise from the Colonel that I would receive one of his home-smoked and cured hams when I returned to Chicago, I let the matter drop.

Eventually I went back to Chicago and the first meal that Mrs. Rector prepared for me was an absolute culinary delight. There was a baked ham that surpassed any I have ever tasted, and to my surprise I was told that it was from the ham my Colonel friend had promised me in Seattle.

The reason the ham was so delicious was because of the blending of certain tasteful foods with the rich flavor of the ham. Listen while I tell you how you can prepare this unusual and most appetizing ham dish as the Colonel explained it to me.

Boil a medium sized standard ham, remove the rind and leave a nice thick layer of fat covering the entire ham. Take a jar of peanut butter and a box of seedless raisins. Run the raisins through a meat chopper, mix with the peanut butter into an even paste and spread over the entire ham in about ½-inch thickness. Cover the ham with bread crumbs, stud with cloves and bake for about an hour, basting very frequently with a mixture of cider and a little of the liquor the the ham was boiled in.

If you have ever found better flavor in a ham, tell me about it, because thirty-five years of seeking for culinary secrets have left me with the feeling that if there is anything new, I am quite anxious to taste it.

Let me give you another recipe—a delicious and tempting hot-weather salad:

Frozen Peanut Butter Salad

1 cup peanut butter
1 cup cream cheese
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
½ cup green pepper (finely chopped)
⅓ cup pimiento (finely chopped)
¾ cup salad dressing
½ cup thick cream (whipped)
½ cup roasted peanuts (finely chopped) (optional)

Cream together peanut butter, cream cheese, salt and paprika. Add finely chopped green pepper, pimiento, salad dressing and whipped cream. Cut and fold with a spatula until thoroughly blended. Pack mixture in a mold and chill in coldest part of refrigerator for three hours. Serve on bed of crisp lettuce and garnish with finely chopped peanuts.

Mr. C. H. Plier, Jr., of Route 4, sent a cotton bloom to The Union-Banner Tuesday. This is the first bloom we have received this year. A bloom was being displayed in Clanton one day last week, but it was said to be a bloom from a sprout of a last year's cotton plant that did not get killed during the winter.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

NOTICE

Last year I arranged for several canning demonstrations, but they were too late in the season. I have an opportunity to get one or more ladies from Auburn for about ten days this summer if the ladies of the county want these demonstrations. I shall be glad to arrange for the help if the ladies of several communities are interested, and will get in touch with me at once. If you are interested, see several other ladies of your community and plan a spend-the-day party at some one's house in the community.

If you will let me know soon I will set a date for you and arrange for the help. There is lots of food stuff that should be canned this summer, and I believe there is going to be many hungry people next winter to eat what is canned.

At these demonstrations all can learn the easiest known way to can and at the same time learn how to can vegetables so they are most healthful.—C. E. Stapp, County agent.

GRADES FOR COTTONSEED HAVE BEEN ESTABLISHED

The U. S. department of agriculture has established official grades for cottonseed.

Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture has written regulations establishing grades, methods of sampling, analyzing and grading of cottonseed sold or offered for sale for crushing purposes in the United States. Farmers may obtain copies of these regulations from their local cotton oil mill or from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Washington, D. C.

BABY FRETFUL, RESTLESS?

Look to this cause

When your baby fusses, tosses and seems unable to sleep restfully, look for one common cause, doctors say. Constipation. To get rid quickly of the accumulated wastes which cause restlessness and discomfort, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Castoria, you know, is made specially for children's delicate needs. It is a pure vegetable preparation; contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. It is so mild and gentle you can give it to a young infant to relieve colic. Yet it is as effective for older children. Castoria's regulative help will bring relaxed comfort and restful sleep to your baby. Keep a bottle on hand. Genuine Castoria always has the name:

SUMMER CARE OF FOOD IS PROBLEM

What may be economy in the buying of food, often depends on the means and space for keeping food, and also the care in handling it after it is bought. Miss Helen Kennedy, extension nutritionist, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn advises that care in handling, a knowledge of the dangers in food poisoning, and precautions against contamination of food are necessary to protect the family's health and pocketbook. A good refrigerator solves many food keeping problems; and a home without one has its troubles.

The housekeeper must guard against different kind of spoilage. Some foods change texture. Some loose flavor, others become actually harmful. Green vegetables wilt because their moisture evaporates. Crackers ann cookies, on the other hand, take up moisture from the air an dthereby lose their crispness. Light effects some kinds og food. It hastens the ripening of fresh fruits and vegetables, and it is bad for fats and oils which become rancid under light and warm conditions.

Miss Kennedy advises careful washing of fruits and vegetables that are to be eaten raw a good precaution against organisms. Cold air of the refrigerator checks the ripening of berries, tomatoes, peaches and other fruits, thereby preventing early spoilage. Lettuce and all other salad vegetables should be placed in moist wrapping or in a covered ventilated dish or pan.

Milk is most easily kept in bottles in the coldest part of the refrigerators. Cuts of meat should be placed in a clean, dry uncovered dish. Cooked meat can be stored best if loosely wrapped or covered to prevent drying.

Moist cooked foods need careful handling to keep them safe. Left-overs of perishable foods should be boiled or thoroughly heated before serving a second time to safeguard against serious food poisoning. Without a refrigerator, the safest rule is to cook only enough for one meal, avoiding left-overs as far as possible.

400 FARMERS ARE ON LIVE AT HOME BASIS

Fayette, Ala., June 20.—"Living at home and boarding at the same place" is being practiced successfully by 400 Fayette County farmers, according to J. C. Ford, county agent, who says that many more will be doing the same thing by next fall and still more by next spring.

These farmers are making their farms as near self-sustaining as is feasible. They are receiving cash for sale of milk, cream, butter, poultry and eggs. Their income from these sources is sufficient to meet their cash requirements, thereby keeping their expenditures within their actual income.

Farming this way has been advocated by Mr. Ford for many years. He is enthusiastic over the fact that 400 farmers are on the self-sustaining basis. Most of them are producing cotton and their income from it next fall will not have to pay nebts incurred this year. It will be a surplus which they will use for other purposes.

Cooperation of bankers and business men is being given in the live-at-home program, Mr. Ford said. Consequently, the net cash balance is larger, soil is being improved by more livestock and legumes, and other benefits are attained.

"In addition to more cows, chickens, and hogs our farmers are interested in better livestock, better feeding, and better management," Mr. Forn said. "They are trying to hold their cost down to the minimum in order to leave a net profit. We believe that this plan of farming will do much to put farming on a more profitable basis and also improve the business done by our bankers, merchants, and professional men."

AGENTS' WORK GETS WALKER COUNTY VOTE

Auburn, Ala., June 20.—People of Walker County voted by a large majority on June 14 to continue county farm and home demonstration agency work in that county.

With a view of ascertaining the views of the people of the county on the subject, the Commissioner's Court asked for a referendum vote which was taken in the recent primary.

Results of the vote, which showed that the people throughout the county are in favor of continuing the work, were reported Thursday to J. T. High, extension service district agent for North Alabama.

In the present distressing situation, farm people are making greater use than ever before of these essential agencies, said Mr. High and Dr. L. N. Duncan, extension service director.

ALABAMA FARM NEWS

Anniston.—Poultrymen in Calhoun County are waging a successful fight against the high cost of producing eggs by feeding as directed by County agent S. R. Doughty. They are using a 26-per cent protein supplement in addition to their home grown grain, most of which is corn. They have cut costs and are getting a better price for corn.

Birmingham. — Winter legumes have ganied many friends among the Jefferson county farmers who have found that hairy vetch and Austrian peas are very effective and very economical for enriching land, and also for spring grazing and for hay, according to J. L. Liles, county agent. More acres in these crops will be planted next fall.

Carrolton. — About 43,000 pounds of Austrian pea seed were saved by Pickens County farmers this spring for planting in the fall. Home saving of seed in this way is recommended by County agent F. A. Rew who predicts that it will result in a substantial increase in acreage planted to Austrian peas and also reduce the cost.

SCALE INSECTS ON OAK

Montgomery, Ala., June 20.—A scale is causing partial defoliation on Chestnut Oak shade trees in the northern part of Alabama, according to reports received by the State Commission of Forestry. The insect has been identified as the pubescent oak Kermes, scientifically known as Chrysomphalus obscurus. It is a relative of the Oyster Shell scale, the San Jose scale, the Gloomy scale and many others.

"The Kermes is not considered a tree killing insect," says Colonel Page S. Bunker, state forester, "Although here and there twigs are killed, leaves fall prematurely and the growth may be severely checked. This particular species is found on the oaks, including White Oak, Burr Oak, Red Oak, Chestnut Oak, and Yellow Oak.

"Evidence of the presence of this insect during the growing season can be noted from the crumpling up of the leaves and green soft wood, together with the premature falling of the foliage. A close examination will disclose small, rounded, smooth, brown bodies along the midribs of the leaves and soft wood of the new year of growth.

"Effective control measures comprise spraying with a water solution of miscible oil, one part of oil and fifteen of water, applied at the time the buds begin to swell in the spring. Since many contact sprays are injurious to the foliage, spraying is best accomplished during the dormant season. Kerosene, soap and water in certain portions, is an excellent spray for scale insects. During the early spring, a strong solution may be used but for the summer spraying a weaker mixture should be used to avoid injury to the leaves."

EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN GOES ON THE AIR AT WAPI

Speaking in the studio of WAPI at Birmingham last Tuesday evening, Dr. C. B. Glenn, superintendent of the Birmingham City Schools, inaugurated the radio diversion of the publicity campaign for education now being directed by the Alabama Education Association. Dr. Glenn's theme was the moral responsibility of Alabama to pay its indebtedness, including the money now past due the teachers for past services. Speaking to this point Dr. Glenn said:

"In the past we, of the Birmingham schools, have tried in various ways to emphasize character education in the training of our children. In doing this we have stressed the necessity of the individual meeting his pledges; the imperative duty of a man doing what he agrees to do. For the State of Alabama to fail to meet its financial obligations would be a most unfortunate example for our government to set before these children. The State's budget must be balanced, which means that the teachers, as well as all other state debtors, must be paid. In our opinion, it would be better to have our schools fail to open next fall and pay this indebtedness than to attempt to have the schools continue with the indebtedness unpaid. The matter involved is more than money. The good reputation and integrity of a great state is imperilled."

During the coming week fifteen addresses in ten counties will be delivered by certain educational leaders in widely separated sections of the state.

Lesson for June 26

REVIEW: WHAT WE HAVE LEARNED FROM GENESIS.

GOLDEN TEXT—And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Some Friends We Have Made.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What We Have Learned in Genesis.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Favorite Characters in Genesis.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Genesis Teaches About God and Human Relationships.

Genesis, the book from which the lessons of the quarter are taken, as its name indicates, is a book of beginnings. It contains the only reliable information we have of the origin of the heavens and the earth, plant and animal life, human life, institutions, and relations.

Lesson for April 3.

God was before all things. Everything but God had a beginning. The things which are came to be by the creative act of a personal God. Man himself came into being by the creative act of God.

Lesson for April 10.

An explanation of the ills and sorrows of the world can be made only on the basis of the historic fall of man as recorded in the Bible. Man is not what he was when he came from the Creator's hand. The prime actor in this tragedy was the personal, cunning, and malicious being called "the Devil." Because man is a free being, possessing the power of choice, sin entered through the act of man's will in believing the Devil instead of God.

Lesson for April 17.

Following man's fall, God gave the promise of a redeemer. God chose Abraham to be the head of the new race through which this gracious promise was to be realized. The failure of this new race to carry out God's plan is the explanation of the disordered world.

Lesson for April 24.

Lot's prosperity was due to his relationship to his uncle, Abram. In spite of this fact, he selfishly grasped for the best. Abram, to avert possible strife between Lot and himself, accorded to Lot the choice of the best of the land. Though Lot's choice involved him in trouble, Abram graciously went to his rescue, delivering him from his oppressor, thus being a fine example of the art of living in peace.

Lesson for May 1.

Isaac was a child of the covenant, gentle and peace-loving. Though a lover of peace, he had enemies. His very prosperity incited the envy of the Philistines. His peaceable withdrawal from them gave him increased influence.

Lesson for May 8.

Esau sold his birthright for a bowl of pottage. The birthright was the right of being at the head of the patriarchal family. In a time of physical exhaustion he relinquished his claim to the future in order to gratify a present desire.

Lesson for May 15.

Jacob's scheming involved him in trouble. On his flight from an outraged brother he was overtaker by night and obliged to sleep in a field with a stone for his pillow. It was under such circumstances that God gave him the vision at Bethel.

Lesson for May 22.

On Jacob's return to Canaan to meet Esau, the Angel of the Lord wrestled with him at the ford of Jabbok. Jacob's self-will needed to be broken before he could enter Canaan. He was humbled by the dislocation of his thigh. When thus humbled, he quit wrestling and clung to God. Jacob did not get the blessing through wrestling, but because of his clinging to God. It was easy for Jacob to be reconciled to his brother because he was now right with God.

Lesson for May 29.

Joseph was hated by his brethren. The father's favoritism fanned this hatred into a flame, and resulted in his being sold into slavery.

Lesson for June 5.

Joseph's success was not primarily due to the fact that he was a good worker, but to the fact that the good hand of his God was upon him. Joseph was not a self-made, but a God-made man.

Lesson for June 12.

Though Joseph severely tested his brethren, he graciously forgave them and nourished them through the years of famine. He knew that God had sent him to be their deliverer.

Lesson for June 19.

In old age after many years of sorrow for the loss of Joseph, Jacob goes to Egypt and is there nourished through the famine by Joseph. After Jacob's death, Joseph continues his gracious attitude to his brethren.

Three Kinds of People

There are three kinds of people in the world, the wills, the won'ts and the can'ts. The first accomplish everything; the second oppose everything; the third fail in everything.—Selected.

He Is the Loser

It has been said that certain insects which sting, lose their lives when they sting. A man who uses his tongue to express the venom of his hate loses that which to him is better than life.

George Murrah, of Collins Chapel, was a visitor to Clanton Tuesday.

HUGE PAYROLL REQUIRED FOR RADIO PROGRAM

Over four million dollars are distributed in salaries every year to the more than 500 people directly and indirectly instrumental in the production and presentation of each of the tri-weekly Lucky Strike programs, an estimate revealed.

This includes the pay check of Bert Lahr, Walter Winchell, Walter O'Keefe and other artists, writers, announcers, engineers and musicians whose activities go to make these programs one of radio's outstanding entertainments.

Of the 500 workers, approximately three hundred are engaged to see the program through to its destination. These include telephone operators, electricians and engineers who are constantly working to keep the lines of communication clear and in working order.

The production man and the local announcer at each of the 54 stations, to which the program is broadcast, comprise the next largest group.

The average program presents two dance orchestras employing about 12 men each, thereby employing thirty musicians when the arrangers and other attaches are counted. The balance are among those employed by the National Broadcasting Company to work out the mechanical requirements; others by the advertising agency which prepares the program and writes the commercial announce- and the Music Corporation of America which books the various orchestras presented.

A number of others, such as lawyers as pass on the programs, executives responsible for the formula and presentation and a miscellany of typists, secretaries and office boys who handle it enroute to the studio, make up the rest of the number.

DELEGATES URGED TO WEAR COTTON

Seth P. Storrs has written Alabama delegates to the National Democratic Convention, Chicago, to wear a cotton suit at least one day during the convention.

Mr. Storrs, a member of the executive committee of the Association for Increased Use of Cotton said that the delegates from all cotton producing states is being asked to join in the movement. Many of the delegates have already agreed to wear cotton suits.

SCOUT NEWS

Opelika, Ala., June 20.—The excellent type of scout instruction and the commendable supervision of all camp activities brought forth words of praise from H. Erb and Harold W. Lewman, high ranking scout officials, when they inspected Camp Spring Villa near here last week. Their official report is yet forthcoming but both expressed themselves as pleased with the camp as conducted by Executive J. J. Sigwald.

A total of 140 scouts from all sections of the Central Area Council will have attended a one week's session at camp this summer with the last group arriving on June 18.

The Opelika Kiwanis club was the guest of the scouts at luncheon on Wednesday. The civic clubs of Auburn are scheduled to visit the camp on Thursday, June 23, at which time they will likewise be the guests of the camp.

Among the popular instructional features instituted this year are leathercraft and markmanship. The latter is taught by E. J. Harris of West Palm Beach, Florida, assistant camp director.

Campers are again enjoying a wide variety of scout instruction given by camp directors, junior staff leaders and a number of Auburn professors who meet various groups of scouts during the instruction period in the mornings.

PLANS BEING MADE TO STANDARDIZE BUTTER

Plans are under way to standardize Alabama butter and for the state to stamp its approval upon butter produced in the state. A committee has been appointed to work out plans for this work to begin the latter part of this year.

The committee is composed of Prof. A. D. Burke, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn; Joel G. Winijer, U. S. department of agriculture, Washington; Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of agriculture, Montgomery; Dr. C. A. Abele, state health department, Montgomery; George D. Hennigh, chairman of butter division of the Alabama Dairy Products Association, Birmingham; F. W. Burns, Alabama Experiment Station, Auburn; and Dr. M. F. Jackson, farm products agent of the T. C. I. Record Race Victor Thanks Firestone

Upper left, Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., referee of the race, and Edsel Ford, pacemaker on the first lap. Lower, Fred Frame, the winner, and Jerry Hauck, riding mechanic, in the car they drove to victory.

Men, automobiles and tires set amazing new records of speed and endurance in this year's 500-mile international race on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Giving a splendid exhibition of cool and steady driving, Fred Frame, veteran of many races, won the event in record-breaking time. With an admiring throng milling around him after his sensational victory, one of the first things Frame did was to send the following telegram to Harvey S. Firestone, pioneer tire manufacturer:

"I want to congratulate you and thank you on the wonderful performance of Firestone tires which helped me win the Indianapolis 500-mile race today without tire trouble, setting a new record of more than 104 miles an hour for the 500 miles."

The race throughout was a remarkable Firestone triumph. Every car to finish was equipped with Firestone Tires. The first four broke the former record of 101.13 miles an hour made by Peter De Paolo in 1925. In all the history of the famous motor race there has never been a more severe test of tires and never a finer demonstration of their qualities than was furnished this year. It was the thirteenth consecutive victory for Firestone.

BOY FOUND DEAD ON THE HIGHWAY

Identified as Floyd C. Holman, High School Student Of Columbus, Indiana

The body of a white boy who was found dead on the highway just north of Prattville last Friday night, has been identified as Floyd C. Holman of Columbus, Indiana. It was learned that the youth, a high school student, had been left home about two weeks.

Spigener's ambulance brought the body to Clanton, later carrying it back to Prattville, then back to Clanton again. Arrangements were made to ship the body back to Indiana Monday afternoon. Just before the train arrived here, a message came instructing the undertaker not to ship the body, but to return it to Prattville.

No explanation of how the young man met his death was found at first. The supposition was that he had been hit by an automobile which kept on its way after he was hit. Later a bundle of clothing was found on the road a half mile north of the place where the body was found. It was found to correspond with clothing on the dead body, and the conclusion was that the bundle had caught on the machine which struck him carrying it up the road.

The boy was dressed in blue pants tennis shoes, white shirt, brown coat, and a hat with sunvisor. A vest in the bundle of clothing that was found on the road matched the brown coat, and contained some papers bearing the name of Holman, at Columbus, Indiana. Authorities communicated with officers at Columbus and established the identity of the body.

Later information given out by Mr. E. J. Brand of Spigeners Funeral Home here stated that the body of the youth had been shipped from Prattville to Columbus, Indiana.

Prof. Luther T. Grant will begin a three weeks singing school at Chestnut Creek church, Coopers, on Monday, July 11th. About half a hundred have already signed up to attend. Prof. Grant is a very competent teacher, as is known by singers all over Chilton County. He has been teaching for the past ten or fifteen years, and has a record of being especially good on discipilining a school. He asks for the wholehearted co-operation of the people near Coopers, as well as all from other parts of the county who can arrange to attend.

MAKING WILL ROGERS TALK

America's Greatest Humorist Is In Picture Here On July 4 and 5

Will Rogers, one of the friendliest men who ever lived, will talk to anyone on any subject—but he is the least interviewed celebrity in the world.

Many newspaper men and women, who have attempted the difficult task of trying to get Rogers to talk for publication, have departed, remarking that "Rogers won't talk, because he'd rather save his wisecracks for his own writings."

Asked point blank if that were the reason, Rogers, with tongue in cheek, says, "Maybe."

The reason however, this famous comedian-humorist shies from an interviewer like a horse from a steam shovel, in his innate modesty.

One of the greatest fears since becoming a talking picture star has been that he will be presented to the public as an actor who brags about his work. For that one reason. Will insists on censoring all advertising copy that exploits his pictures.

That Rogers is not hard to interview, once a reporter gains his confidence and gets him to talking on subjects he likes, was demonstrated recently by Bill Oliver of the Los Angles Herald, who wrote one of the finest interviews ever printed. Oliver's impression of Rogers after talking to him for several hours, is interesting. He said:

"He is the most unassuming man I have ever met in Hollywood. He is as unadorned as his printed words. He talks with simple one-syllable honesty, in a low slow voice. You feel as though you were talking over the fence with a farmer resting his plow at the end of the field. Chatting about nothing outside of the weather, crops and market conditions, like a flash a bit of wise humor comes out. You get to liking him more and more.

"If he wanted to turn crooked, Will Rogers could sell gold bricks, subways, Elks buildings and the whole kit and caboodle. Abe Lincoln must have had that simple honest, humorous air, too."

Will Rogers' latest starring picture, the Fox production of Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee," is to be at the Wadesonian Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, July 4th and 5th.

Mr. Stapp hopes that farmers, merchants, lawyers, doctors, bankers, and in fact, people in every vocation of gainful occupation will join in and help make this program worth something to Chilton County.

Mr. Stapp states that he will have only one hour for the fiddlers contest. The prizes will be liberal. For this reason Mr. Stapp asks that the fiddlers who desire to enter the contest give him their names at an early date. The order in which the names are turned in to Mr. Stapp will be the order in which the fiddlers will be called to play. If there are more fiddlers than can finsh in one hour, the last ones registered will not be able to compete.

Two Eye-Witnesses Relate Story of Drowning

So far as is known, Webb Parrish and George Wyatt, of Clanton, are the only eye-witnesses of the drowning of Glenn Moore and Loyd Crowson below Mitchell Dam last Wednesday. Parrish and Wyatt were fishing below the dam and were within a hundred yards of the victims when their boat went down.

Relating the tragic incident Parrish said:

"George and I were fishing from the bank below the dam. We saw Moore and Crowson when they went out into the edge of the rough water at the end of the first pier and anchored their boat. They fished there for some time. Occasionally we could observe that the water was pulling them away from their moorings, dragging their anchor on the bottom. We saw them more than once lift anchor and pull their boat back up to the place where they wanted to fish close to the end of the pier.

"After a while we went back down the bank to get our lunch. It was just about noon. The whistle blew at the power plant, which I believe was a quarter to twelve. Our boat was tied to the bank perhaps two hundred yards below the place where Moore and Crowson were fishing.

"About the time we arrived at our boat George happened to look back at Moore and Crowson. He observed that the strong suction of the water had pulled their boat around past the end of the pier. It was being switched around and, the men were pulling hard in an effort to get out of the whirl. We watched them for a minute, and it looked as if they nearly got away from it one time. But they went back into the whirl.

"We grabbed our paddles and started hurriedly up the bank to where some other boats were tied just below the dam. We had in mind to get a boat and go out near them and throw them a line. As we came closer to them along the bank we could see that their boat was dipping water heavily. In an instant it gave a lurch and went under. Moore and Crowson stood up in the boat. They were standing straight up as they disappeared beneath the waves. George went immediately to the power house and notified the employees of the accident. The plant was shut down as quickly as possible, and in fifteen minutes after the men went down, every effort was being made to recover their bodies."

BODIES FOUND IN COOSA RIVER

Moore Buried Here. Crowson Sent to His Old Home near Huntsville

The bodies of Glenn Moore and Lloyd Crowson, who were drowned in Coosa river below Mitchell Dam last Wednesday, have been recovered from the river and buried.

The body of Moore was found about four o'clock Wednesday afternoon by parties dragging the river bottom with grabs. It was down the river about a hundred yards from where the boat went down with the two men.

Searching parties worked all Wednesday afternoon, Wednesday night and Thursday, searching for Crowson's body. Thursday night a network of trot lines and fish hooks was strung across the river at Log Cabin Beach about a mile down the river, in the hope of catching the body when it came up and started floating down the river. The plan worked and the body was caught on one of the lines about three o'clock Friday morning.

Moore was buried Friday morning at Temple church. The funeral was conducted by Rev. D. W. Haskew of Clanton Methodist church. Burial was in charge of Martin. He is survived by his wife; two brothers in Atlanta, and two sons, Hollis and Lanier, of Los Angles, California. Mrs. Moore is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Easterling, of Clanton.

Kiwanis Had Interesting Program at Mitchell Dam

Monday night being known to Kiwanians as "All Kiwanis Night," the members of the Clanton Kiwanis club went to Mitchell Dam and enjoyed a delicious feed at the Club house and the splendid Kiwanis program over the radio. The meeting was presided over by President John Hollis.

The Kiwanis International convention was in progress in Detroit. The delegates from the 1,800 Kiwanis clubs throughout the United States and Canada could be heard cheering at intervals as the program of the hour came in over the radio.

The following is the message delivered by the president of Kiwanis International:

FELLOWSHIP HOUR MESSAGE

To all our Kiwanis friends assembled here in this magnificent auditorium and to those loyal members who are assembled at home in tune with the spirit of this occasion, "Fellowship Hour" must this year assume a new significance. The trials and tribulations which have befallen all of us during the past twelve months serve only tonight to emprasize the true value of that spirit of fellowship and friendship which has always characterized the activities of Kiwanis. Whether you are present here tonight, whether you are meeting with your own club or beside the radio in your own home, Kiwanians, I greet you from Detroit, the Birthplace of Kiwanis, in an humble but reverent spirit of goodwill, and bespeak to you the friendly association and cooperation of a hundred thousand Kiwanians all over the North American continent.

We observe tonight for the ninth consecutive year this occasion so emblematic of fellowship and pledge anew in our hearts to always maintain within our organization that moving spirit which has built Kiwanis and enshrined it in the hearts of the citizenry of two great nations; namely, Friendships based upon understanding.

We could not tonight recount that part of Kiwanis achievement over the seventeen years of our history which has been made possible by the friendships which it has created. We could not appraise the effect of mutual understanding, fellowship and good will, nor can we measure its value in the solution of the problems before us today. We can, however, approach our present day responsibilities confident of true and faithful friendship and energetic and sincere cooperation. No greater inspiration or better equipment was ever needed by any organization.

"Back to the birthplace and forward in Kiwanis"—such is the slogan under which all Kiwanians meet tonight. We who are priviledged to be in Detroit and have part in this great program can testify to these loyal Kiwanians of number one club of our faith in the organization which they created and of our sincere appreciation of its value to ourselves and to all mankind. Kiwanis in this seventeen years has come to mean friendship, sincerity, service, helpfullness, good will and true citizenship, through the activities of our clubs and individuals Kiwanis, and our wish tonight is that it will always mean just these things in American and Canadian Community life.

Seventeen years of constructive accomplishment, seventeen years of community service is the endowment of Kiwanis tonight. We can justly glory in the accomplishments of the organization for Kiwanis has found and earned a place of leadership in eighteen hundred communities. We need spend no time tonight to justify the existence of the organization, no dollar and cent value can be placed upon our activities, no rule of gold can measure the good that has been accomplished, but in the hearts of under-privileged children, in the character of young men and women guided to gainful occupation, in the soul of charitable and character building organizations and in the ideals of business and professional men you can find the true value of Kiwanis.

"Forward in Kiwanis" is but the realization of the present day challenge of our objectives. No time was ever more opportune—nor was our opportunity any greater to thoroughly entrench Kiwanis in the minds and hearts of the people today. Social, industrial, agricultural and economic problems are calling for champions. Governmental agencies are calling for help and cooperation and the very ideals of American and Canadian citizenship are being undermined with the attempt to destroy — destructive influences are flourishing within our communities and a real challenge of tried and true citizenship is at the door of Kiwanis today.

Through seventeen years we have been taught to serve, through seventeen years we have boasted the sincerity of our citizenship. We have the organization and the potential power.

Kiwanis let us meet the challenge!

As we come to Detroit in a spirit of friendship and international good will—truly proud of the accomplishments of our past, thoroughly appreciative of the potential power for good wrapped up in such an organization of men who are willing to serve—let us leave it recognizing the present day responsibilities with a broader vision of service and with a determination to achieve—redictated to the ideals of Kiwanis and inspired by the zeal and enthusiasm which will know no defeat.—Wm. O. Harris, International President.

Mr. Raymond C. Smith, who is representing the Clanton Kiwanis Club, wired Mr. C. E. Stapp as follows: "Seems that All Kiwanis Night is also Kiwanis All Night."

POOR OR

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

AMERICAN BANKERS WANT COUNTY AGENTS

Realizing that agriculture is the big basic business of this nation and that the county agent is essential to the highest welfare of agriculture, the American Bankers' Association, through its agricultural commission, is advising against retrenchment to the extent of distributing county agents, or home demonstration agents.

"When business comes back, said the statement, "we cannot expect it to proceed along the same highway or knock at the same door it did previously. Necessary adjusements are bound to bring about new methods and new devices. Those who are alert will profit thereby; those who are waiting aimlessly for things to just happen may wake up some day to find that the business they have been waiting for is already in the hands of wide-awake competitors.

"Farming is no exception. To avert disaster and to effectively prepare for the future the farmer, like any other business man, needs expert advice. He must have a vital and close contact with his agricultural college and experiment station. The human medium through which this is accomplished is the county agricultural agent. His service is an investment, not an expense.

"Any attempt to save taxes by dispensing with or limiting the efficiency of a good county agent, is a serious step backward. Compare taxes and ability to pay taxes, in counties with and without agents; the evidence is all in favor of the county agent.

"When the battle of economic deliverance is in progress is not time to discard a good soldier or to question the need of an able captain. It is all right to reduce expenses, but a reduction that will impair our capital and jeopardize our income may be false economy. If we have a good county agent, let's uphold him and make it possible for him to help lead us out of the wilderness."

BRIEF NEWS NOTES

Brazil's program of destruction of coffee to support the price has been in force one year. In that thime 7,103,000 bags of coffee beans valued at $30,000,000.00 have been burned or otherwise destroyed.

Newspaper advertising has been effective in increasing the consumption of meat on the Pacific Coast and elsewhere. It is one of the best mediums through which to reach the consumers, said Charles D. Carey, chairman of the National Livestock and Meat Board.

Clarence S. Stein of the commitee on economics of site-planning and housing of the American Institute of Architects, thinks that Federal aid for large-scale model housing would play as effective parti in overcoming the business depression as expansion of the automobile industory did in 1921.

Barter has replaced normaal trade in certain products among 15 European countries. Since last July agreements to exchange goods in kind have been concluded between Germany and Hungary, Bulgaria and Greece, Bulgaria and Switzerland, France and Lativa, Norway and Russia, Poland and Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria and Estonia and Yugoslavia.

The present economic depression is unlike that of the Hebrews and the Egyptians about which Sunday school teachers and students have been studyng recently. Then there was a famine which resulted in a great shortage and a dire need of food but now hunger stalks at the doors of millions of people when the total supply of corn, wheat, and other farm products is sufficient for more than a year.

HALE FARMERS GET $575 DAILY FOR MILK

Greensboro, Ala., June 30.— Eight hundred Hale county farmers are now receiving daily $575 for milk which they are producing and selling on markets in Birmingham, Montgomery, Tuscaloosa, Selma and elsewhere. This is equivalent to $17,000 per month or more than $200,00 per year. In addition to this cash return land is improved and other advantages obtained by those farmers who are keeping and milking cows, says county agent J. L. Dawson.

Daily shipments from Hale county are totalling 50,000 pounds. The money thus received enables those 500 farmers to operate on a pay-as-you-go plan; and it is also a big help to the Hale county merchants and bankers. A dozen trucks bring milk to central points for shipment.

Most of this milk is assembled in Greensboro for shipment to markets. The condensery of Libby, McNeill and Libby at Tuscaloosa buys milk from the station here. Two other trucks operate through the north portion of the county, carrying milk directly to the Tuscaloosa plant.

Commercial dairying in Hale county began about 30 years ago with a few farmers around Newbern and Gallion. Several of the larger producers around these two towns are now prodcing "Grade A" whole milk and selling it in Birmingham.

As dairying has developed dairymen have improved their herds by better feeding, and they have improved their returns by better feeding and better management. Home production of feed is emphasized.

Mr. Lawson, who has been the leading figure in this development, says that the Clover Belt Dairy Herd Improvement Association, which was the second organized in Alabama, has meant much to dairymen. It has enabled them to get rid of poor producers, to improve their breeding to feed better, and to manage better, thereby receiving larger returns.

FOREST MORE THAN TREES

Montgomery, Ala., June 30.— There are other things in addition to trees that go to make up a forest says Col. Page S. Bunker, Alabama State Forester. In fact, according to Col Bunker, without these other things the trees could not exist. The first of these is the soil itself. Bare rock surface will not support tree growth, and any use or treatment of land that tends to permit the soil to be washed away prevents the establishment and maintenance of forests.

In connection with the soil question, however, it is pointed out that there are many things that go into the composition of soil in addition to the finely divided rock which comprises its basis. Most of these additional substances are derived from the decay of surface vegetation and litter. This takes place through the action of micro-organism which convert organic materials into substances available for further plant life and the formation of tree material. The origin, development and performance of fertile soils is so bound up in this process that its continuation is regarded at vital. Any destructive agency, such as fire, that eliminates the bacteria, which comprise most of the micro-organisms, means that notwithstanding the sand and clay portions of the soil there will be very little tree growth.

CHILDHOOD AND EDUCATION OF MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 2:1-10; Acts 7:20-22.

GOLDEN TEXT—Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Baby Moses.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Slave Boy Rescued by a Princess.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Preparing for Life's Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Influence of a Godly Home.

I. Moses' Parentage (v. 1).

Both father and mother were of Levitical stock. Being from the same tribe, they had a common bond of interest and sympathy. Amram had the good judgment to choose for a wife a woman who had sympathies and ambitions in harmony with his own.

II. Moses' Birth (v. 2).

Two children, Aaron and Miriam, were born to Amram and Jochebed before Moses. However, Moses was the first one that his mother was assured was to be the deliverer of the chosen people. There was something striking about this child which caused her to believe that it was sent of God. She saw that he was a "goodly child." In Stephen's speech (Acts 7:20) he asserts that the child was "exceeding fair." No doubt his mother believed him to be the deliverer of his people and instilled that truth in his mind from childhood. Because of this belief, she had confidence that somehow God would save him from the cruel decree of the king.

III. Moses' Preservation (vv. 3-8).

Though Pharaoh's edict was in force Jochebed's faith was such as to cause her to ignore it and hide Moses for three months. The hiding of the child was not because of fear, but because of faith (Heb. 11:23). It was her faith that made her brave to ignore the king's order. The unfailing antidote for human fear is a vital faith in the living God (Ps. 27:1).

1. Placed in an ark (v. 3). Perhaps the story of how Noah and his family were saved in the ark suggested to his mother the expedient used, namely, the ark of bulrushes.

2. Ark placed in the flags by the river (v. 3). Doubtless she was familiar with the place where Pharaoh's daughter came to bathe. She placed the ark at the particular place where it would attract attention.

3. Miriam watching (v. 4). She was, no doubt, stationed here by her mother. It is interesting to note the steps, as pointed out by another, by which God's plan was carried out:

a. A mother's wit (vv. 3, 4). She devised the ark and placed the baby in it at the proper place and at the opportune time. She also instructed Miriam as to her action.

b. A woman's curiosity (v. 5). The strange object among the flags attracted the attention of Pharaoh's daughter, and she directed her maids to bring it to her.

c. A woman's compassion (v. 6). When the ark was brought and opened, the baby wept. The true woman is always moved with compassion at the cry of a motherless baby.

d. A baby's tears (v. 6). The tears of Moses aroused the womanly instinct of Pharaoh's daughter and she was therefore susceptible to the suggestion as to the care of the baby.

e. A faithful sister (v. 7). Miriam's question was in the form of a suggestion as to a nurse for the baby from among the Hebrew woman. This suggestion met a willing response and Miriam called the child's mother. In the providence of God we see that Jochebed was hired to nurse her own child. The best nurse possible for a child is its own mother.

IV. Moses' Education (vv. 9, 10, cf. Acts 7:20-22).

1. At his mother's knee (v. 9). We thus see his education began at the proper time and at the proper place. It was during this period that his character took form. Here his mind was filled with the Word of God and he was made acquainted with the Jewish hopes and prospects. In these early years, no doubt, the indomitable purpose was fixed, to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season (Heb. 11:24-26).

2. Adopted by Pharaoh's daughter (v. 10). At the proper time Moses was brought unto Pharaoh's daughter and adopted as her son. She called him "Moses," which means "drawn out," "because," said she, "I drew him out of the water."

3. Educated in the Egyptian court (v. 10). It was here that he became acquainted with the wisdom of the Egyptians (Acts 7:20-22). This was of great importance. It peculiarly qualified him to be the law giver and the historian of his people.

Small Offenses

A very small offense may be a just cause for great resentment; it is often much less the particular instance which is obnoxious to us, than the proof it carries with it of the general tenor and disposition of the mind from whence it sprung.—Greville.

C. L. WILKINS WRITES

To the voters of Chilton County:

A few words of thanks to you who voted for me. I cannot express my feelings to you in words. Your vote makes me feel unable to return a favor great enough to repay what you have done for me. My greatest ambition is to give you at all times my very, very best service, hoping to be yielded by the spirit of the Lord. I shall never feel that I have done enough for you.

Will you accept my thanks and when you need my service, do not fail to call on me. May I ask that each one of us cooperate together and stand for the good principles of the Republican party—have a good feeling for each other—do unto others as you would have them do unto you, and when the general election comes, we will win out victorious.

To Mr. Smith and those who voted for him, I feel grateful to you for the nice treatment you gave me in and through our politial campaign, and hope there is not one of you but what will give me your best wishes, and all of your support in the general election.

We the Republican party should be proud of our past records and try to do greater things for our county and for our selves. Let us all stand together, showing our appreciation to one and all, hoping to grow stronger and never fall.—Yours truly, C. L. Wilkins.

When TEETHING makes HIM FUSSY

One of the most important things you can do to make a teething baby comfortable is to see that little bowels do their work of carrying off waste matter promptly and regularly. For this nothing is better than Castoria, a pure vegetable preparation specially made for babies and children. Castoria acts so gently you can give it to young infants to relieve colic. Yet it is always effective, for older children, too. Remember, Castoria contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics—is absolutely harmless. When your baby is fretful with teething or a food upset, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Be sure you get genuine Castoria with the name:

Kiwanis Had Interesting Program at Mitchell Dam

Monday night being known to Kiwanians as "All Kiwanis Night," the members of the Clanton Kiwanis club went to Mitchell Dam and enjoyed a delicious feed at the Club house and the splendid Kiwanis program over the radio. The meeting was presided over by President John Hollis.

The Kiwanis International convention was in progress in Detroit. The delegates from the 1,800 Kiwanis clubs throughout the United States and Canada could be heard cheering at intervals as the program of the hour came in over the radio.

The following is the message delivered by the president of Kiwanis International:

FELLOWSHIP HOUR MESSAGE

To all our Kiwanis friends assembled here in this magnificent auditorium and to those loyal members who are assembled at home in tune with the spirit of this occasion, "Fellowship Hour" must this year assume a new significance. The trials and tribulations which have befallen all of us during the past twelve months serve only tonight to emprasize the true value of that spirit of fellowship and friendship which has always characterized the activities of Kiwanis. Whether you are present here tonight, whether you are meeting with your own club or beside the radio in your own home, Kiwanians, I greet you from Detroit, the Birthplace of Kiwanis, in an humble but reverent spirit of goodwill, and bespeak to you the friendly association and cooperation of a hundred thousand Kiwanians all over the North American continent.

We observe tonight for the ninth consecutive year this occasion so emblematic of fellowship and pledge anew in our hearts to always maintain within our organization that moving spirit which has built Kiwanis and enshrined it in the hearts of the citizenry of two great nations; namely, Friendships based upon understanding.

We could not tonight recount that part of Kiwanis achievement over the seventeen years of our history which has been made possible by the friendships which it has created. We could not appraise the effect of mutual understanding, fellowship and good will, nor can we measure its value in the solution of the problems before us today. We can, however, approach our present day responsibilities confident of true and faithful friendship and energetic and sincere cooperation. No greater inspiration or better equipment was ever needed by any organization.

"Back to the birthplace and forward in Kiwanis"—such is the slogan under which all Kiwanians meet tonight. We who are priviledged to be in Detroit and have part in this great program can testify to these loyal Kiwanians of number one club of our faith in the organization which they created and of our sincere appreciation of its value to ourselves and to all mankind. Kiwanis in this seventeen years has come to mean friendship, sincerity, service, helpfullness, good will and true citizenship, through the activities of our clubs and individuals Kiwanis, and our wish tonight is that it will always mean just these things in American and Canadian Community life.

Seventeen years of constructive accomplishment, seventeen years of community service is the endowment of Kiwanis tonight. We can justly glory in the accomplishments of the organization for Kiwanis has found and earned a place of leadership in eighteen hundred communities. We need spend no time tonight to justify the existence of the organization, no dollar and cent value can be placed upon our activities, no rule of gold can measure the good that has been accomplished, but in the hearts of under-privileged children, in the character of young men and women guided to gainful occupation, in the soul of charitable and character building organizations and in the ideals of business and professional men you can find the true value of Kiwanis.

"Forward in Kiwanis" is but the realization of the present day challenge of our objectives. No time was ever more opportune—nor was our opportunity any greater to thoroughly entrench Kiwanis in the minds and hearts of the people today. Social, industrial, agricultural and economic problems are calling for champions. Governmental agencies are calling for help and cooperation and the very ideals of American and Canadian citizenship are being undermined with the attempt to destroy — destructive influences are flourishing within our communities and a real challenge of tried and true citizenship is at the door of Kiwanis today.

Through seventeen years we have been taught to serve, through seventeen years we have boasted the sincerity of our citizenship. We have the organization and the potential power.

Kiwanis let us meet the challenge!

As we come to Detroit in a spirit of friendship and international good will—truly proud of the accomplishments of our past, thoroughly appreciative of the potential power for good wrapped up in such an organization of men who are willing to serve—let us leave it recognizing the present day responsibilities with a broader vision of service and with a determination to achieve—redictated to the ideals of Kiwanis and inspired by the zeal and enthusiasm which will know no defeat.—Wm. O. Harris, International President.

Mr. Raymond C. Smith, who is representing the Clanton Kiwanis Club, wired Mr. C. E. Stapp as follows: "Seems that All Kiwanis Night is also Kiwanis All Night."

POOR OR

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

AMERICAN BANKERS WANT COUNTY AGENTS

Realizing that agriculture is the big basic business of this nation and that the county agent is essential to the highest welfare of agriculture, the American Bankers' Association, through its agricultural commission, is advising against retrenchment to the extent of distributing county agents, or home demonstration agents.

"When business comes back, said the statement, "we cannot expect it to proceed along the same highway or knock at the same door it did previously. Necessary adjusements are bound to bring about new methods and new devices. Those who are alert will profit thereby; those who are waiting aimlessly for things to just happen may wake up some day to find that the business they have been waiting for is already in the hands of wide-awake competitors.

"Farming is no exception. To avert disaster and to effectively prepare for the future the farmer, like any other business man, needs expert advice. He must have a vital and close contact with his agricultural college and experiment station. The human medium through which this is accomplished is the county agricultural agent. His service is an investment, not an expense.

"Any attempt to save taxes by dispensing with or limiting the efficiency of a good county agent, is a serious step backward. Compare taxes and ability to pay taxes, in counties with and without agents; the evidence is all in favor of the county agent.

"When the battle of economic deliverance is in progress is not time to discard a good soldier or to question the need of an able captain. It is all right to reduce expenses, but a reduction that will impair our capital and jeopardize our income may be false economy. If we have a good county agent, let's uphold him and make it possible for him to help lead us out of the wilderness."

BRIEF NEWS NOTES

Brazil's program of destruction of coffee to support the price has been in force one year. In that thime 7,103,000 bags of coffee beans valued at $30,000,000.00 have been burned or otherwise destroyed.

A Rome dispatch states that Italian restrictians against foreign wheat which have been easer gradually in recent months will be fully re-established at the next harvest season.

Newspaper advertising has been effective in increasing the consumption of meat on the Pacific Coast and elsewhere. It is one of the best mediums through which to reach the consumers, said Charles D. Carey, chairman of the National Livestock and Meat Board.

Clarence S. Stein of the commitee on economics of site-planning and housing of the American Institute of Architects, thinks that Federal aid for large-scale model housing would play as effective parti in overcoming the business depression as expansion of the automobile industory did in 1921.

Barter has replaced normaal trade in certain products among 15 European countries. Since last July agreements to exchange goods in kind have been concluded between Germany and Hungary, Bulgaria and Greece, Bulgaria and Switzerland, France and Lativa, Norway and Russia, Poland and Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria and Estonia and Yugoslavia.

The present economic depression is unlike that of the Hebrews and the Egyptians about which Sunday school teachers and students have been studyng recently. Then there was a famine which resulted in a great shortage and a dire need of food but now hunger stalks at the doors of millions of people when the total supply of corn, wheat, and other farm products is sufficient for more than a year.

When
TEETHING makes HIM FUSSY

One of the most important things you can do to make a teething baby comfortable is to see that little bowels do their work of carrying off waste matter promptly and regularly. For this nothing is better than Castoria, a pure vegetable preparation specially made for babies and children. Castoria acts so gently you can give it to young infants to relieve colic. Yet it is always effective, for older children, too. Remember, Castoria contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics—is absolutely harmless. When your baby is fretful with teething or a food upset, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Be sure you get genuine Castoria with the name:

HALE FARMERS GET $575 DAILY FOR MILK

Greensboro, Ala., June 30.— Eight hundred Hale county farmers are now receiving daily $575 for milk which they are producing and selling on markets in Birmingham, Montgomery, Tuscaloosa, Selma and elsewhere. This is equivalent to $17,000 per month or more than $200,00 per year. In addition to this cash return land is improved and other advantages obtained by those farmers who are keeping and milking cows, says county agent J. L. Dawson.

Daily shipments from Hale county are totalling 50,000 pounds. The money thus received enables those 500 farmers to operate on a pay-as-you-go plan; and it is also a big help to the Hale county merchants and bankers. A dozen trucks bring milk to central points for shipment.

Most of this milk is assembled in Greensboro for shipment to markets. The condensery of Libby, McNeill and Libby at Tuscaloosa buys milk from the station here. Two other trucks operate through the north portion of the county, carrying milk directly to the Tuscaloosa plant.

Commercial dairying in Hale county began about 30 years ago with a few farmers around Newbern and Gallion. Several of the larger producers around these two towns are now prodcing "Grade A" whole milk and selling it in Birmingham.

As dairying has developed dairymen have improved their herds by better feeding, and they have improved their returns by better feeding and better management. Home production of feed is emphasized.

Mr. Lawson, who has been the leading figure in this development, says that the Clover Belt Dairy Herd Improvement Association, which was the second organized in Alabama, has meant much to dairymen. It has enabled them to get rid of poor producers, to improve their breeding to feed better, and to manage better, thereby receiving larger returns.

FOREST MORE THAN TREES

Montgomery, Ala., June 30.— There are other things in addition to trees that go to make up a forest says Col. Page S. Bunker, Alabama State Forester. In fact, according to Col Bunker, without these other things the trees could not exist. The first of these is the soil itself. Bare rock surface will not support tree growth, and any use or treatment of land that tends to permit the soil to be washed away prevents the establishment and maintenance of forests.

In connection with the soil question, however, it is pointed out that there are many things that go into the composition of soil in addition to the finely divided rock which comprises its basis. Most of these additional substances are derived from the decay of surface vegetation and litter. This takes place through the action of micro-organism which convert organic materials into substances available for further plant life and the formation of tree material. The origin, development and performance of fertile soils is so bound up in this process that its continuation is regarded at vital. Any destructive agency, such as fire, that eliminates the bacteria, which comprise most of the micro-organisms, means that notwithstanding the sand and clay portions of the soil there will be very little tree growth.

CHILDHOOD AND EDUCATION OF MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 2:1-10; Acts 7:20-22.

GOLDEN TEXT—Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Baby Moses.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Slave Boy Rescued by a Princess.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Preparing for Life's Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Influence of a Godly Home.

I. Moses' Parentage (v. 1).

Both father and mother were of Levitical stock. Being from the same tribe, they had a common bond of interest and sympathy. Amram had the good judgment to choose for a wife a woman who had sympathies and ambitions in harmony with his own.

II. Moses' Birth (v. 2).

Two children, Aaron and Miriam, were born to Amram and Jochebed before Moses. However, Moses was the first one that his mother was assured was to be the deliverer of the chosen people. There was something striking about this child which caused her to believe that it was sent of God. She saw that he was a "goodly child." In Stephen's speech (Acts 7:20) he asserts that the child was "exceeding fair." No doubt his mother believed him to be the deliverer of his people and instilled that truth in his mind from childhood. Because of this belief, she had confidence that somehow God would save him from the cruel decree of the king.

III. Moses' Preservation (vv. 3-8).

Though Pharaoh's edict was in force Jochebed's faith was such as to cause her to ignore it and hide Moses for three months. The hiding of the child was not because of fear, but because of faith (Heb. 11:23). It was her faith that made her brave to ignore the king's order. The unfailing antidote for human fear is a vital faith in the living God (Ps. 27:1).

1. Placed in an ark (v. 3). Perhaps the story of how Noah and his family were saved in the ark suggested to his mother the expedient used, namely, the ark of bulrushes.

2. Ark placed in the flags by the river (v. 3). Doubtless she was familiar with the place where Pharaoh's daughter came to bathe. She placed the ark at the particular place where it would attract attention.

3. Miriam watching (v. 4). She was, no doubt, stationed here by her mother. It is interesting to note the steps, as pointed out by another, by which God's plan was carried out:

a. A mother's wit (vv. 3, 4). She devised the ark and placed the baby in it at the proper place and at the opportune time. She also instructed Miriam as to her action.

b. A woman's curiosity (v. 5). The strange object among the flags attracted the attention of Pharaoh's daughter, and she directed her maids to bring it to her.

c. A woman's compassion (v. 6). When the ark was brought and opened, the baby wept. The true woman is always moved with compassion at the cry of a motherless baby.

d. A baby's tears (v. 6). The tears of Moses aroused the womanly instinct of Pharaoh's daughter and she was therefore susceptible to the suggestion as to the care of the baby.

e. A faithful sister (v. 7). Miriam's question was in the form of a suggestion as to a nurse for the baby from among the Hebrew woman. This suggestion met a willing response and Miriam called the child's mother. In the providence of God we see that Jochebed was hired to nurse her own child. The best nurse possible for a child is its own mother.

IV. Moses' Education (vv. 9, 10, cf. Acts 7:20-22).

1. At his mother's knee (v. 9). We thus see his education began at the proper time and at the proper place. It was during this period that his character took form. Here his mind was filled with the Word of God and he was made acquainted with the Jewish hopes and prospects. In these early years, no doubt, the indomitable purpose was fixed, to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season (Heb. 11:24-26).

2. Adopted by Pharaoh's daughter (v. 10). At the proper time Moses was brought unto Pharaoh's daughter and adopted as her son. She called him "Moses," which means "drawn out," "because," said she, "I drew him out of the water."

3. Educated in the Egyptian court (v. 10). It was here that he became acquainted with the wisdom of the Egyptians (Acts 7:20-22). This was of great importance. It peculiarly qualified him to be the law giver and the historian of his people.

Small Offenses

A very small offense may be a just cause for great resentment; it is often much less the particular instance which is obnoxious to us, than the proof it carries with it of the general tenor and disposition of the mind from whence it sprung.—Greville.

C. L. WILKINS WRITES

To the voters of Chilton County:

A few words of thanks to you who voted for me. I cannot express my feelings to you in words. Your vote makes me feel unable to return a favor great enough to repay what you have done for me. My greatest ambition is to give you at all times my very, very best service, hoping to be yielded by the spirit of the Lord. I shall never feel that I have done enough for you.

Will you accept my thanks and when you need my service, do not fail to call on me. May I ask that each one of us cooperate together and stand for the good principles of the Republican party—have a good feeling for each other—do unto others as you would have them do unto you, and when the general election comes, we will win out victorious.

To Mr. Smith and those who voted for him, I feel grateful to you for the nice treatment you gave me in and through our politial campaign, and hope there is not one of you but what will give me your best wishes, and all of your support in the general election.

We the Republican party should be proud of our past records and try to do greater things for our county and for our selves. Let us all stand together, showing our appreciation to one and all, hoping to grow stronger and never fall.—Yours truly, C. L. Wilkins.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert)

One of the most significant bits of news from an economic standpoint given to the American people in a long time was the announcement from New York the other day to the effect that the shipping of gold to France and other countries of Europe, principally Holland and Switzerland had come to an end. The central banks and governments of these European nations, it was announced, have practically completed the calling home of their gold deposits in the United States, a process which has covered many long weary months. Gold may indeed be shipped to Europe but it will be principally "earmarked gold," that is gold which has already been set aside for shipment and which therefore is not counted in and has no effect on the gold reserve of the United States.

Although the immediate effect of this announcement was the strengthening of the American dollar and of American confidence in general, the announcement has greater significance than this. It means that gold drain on the United States, which started last October, about the time Great Britain left the gold standard, had completed without in the least disturbing the integrity of the United States dollar or causing a ripple of unrest in the financial waters of the United States. During these months, a billion and a half in gold has been shipped to Europe. America has released it willingly and has so completely refuted and exploded the European charge that we were "hoarding gold."

All sorts of reasons have been given for the withdrawal of this gold from America. The fact that it assumed great proportions immediately after Great Britain left the gold standard led many to believe that European financiers and governments feared that with Britain off the bold basis Uncle Sam would follow suit. Then the various inflationary measures proposed in Congress although they had little chance of passing, have been misunderstood in Europe and caused withdrawal of gold through fear that Uncle Sam might embark on an era of uncontrolled inflation.

French banking authorities maintain that their action in withdrawing gold was a good thing for both France and the United States and will result in a better distribution of gold througout the world for trade expansion. But unless some of this gold leaves France—and a great many financiers believe it will soon begin to do that very thing—it is difficult to see where the mal-distribution of gold has been remedied to any great extent.

Some of our financial writers do not credit France with such selfish motives in withdrawing gold from America. Aside from any fear of American stability, they say that the French were actuated by selfish political motives. They call attention to the fact that France has been using her gold in Europe as a political weapon for the past few years, seeking to dominate the politics of Europe by the yellow metal rather than by gunpowder and steel. They charge further that the gold withdrawal was inspired in part by President Hoover's moratorium last summer, which the French did not at all like and whcih they held up as long as possible, and by a desire on the part of the French to "teach Uncle Sam a lesson" and to show him that he should not try to run counter to French political aims.

Whether this is true or not, and whatever the motive may have been, it now appears that the world has learned a lesson concerning the stability of the American gold dollar. Despite the fact that we have shipped this great hoard of gold to Europe, Uncle Sam still has an ample gold reserve and one which is larger than he has enjoyed many times before even in the boom years of prosperity. The European run on America's gold is over and the confidence of Europe in America has been restored—if it was ever really lost, which is doubtful. The only thing which can harm us now in the matter of the gold reserve is a lack of confidence on the part of the American people themselves. But if Congress gets through in short order, balancing the budget and averting danger of inflation, confidence of Americans will begin to grow rather than to recede further.

CHILDREN AND DEPRESSION

Secretary Wilbur has drawn the fire of certain welfare workers by his statement that "unless we descend to a level far beyond anything we have known at present our children were apt to profit rather than suffer from what is going on." Yet there is ground for believing that he is right. What the Secretary had in mind particularly was the effect of the depression on family life. "With prosperity," said Dr. Wilbur, "many parents unload the responsibilities for their children onto others. With adversity the home takes its more normal place." That will hardly be disputed.

Another benefit the hard times through which the country is passing is likely to have on the coming generation is this: Children are growing up today in an atmosphere in which they are learning that one does not have to spend money in order to get the most out of life. What they observe now is likely to shape in their minds for a long time to come.

Widespread unemployment unquestionably has resulted in physical hardships for the children of many impoverished parents, which it should be the particular object of society to ameliorate; but spiritually, a crisis of this sort may be a boon to children of poor and rich alike. They can get from it a new and more rational sense of life's values. They can learn what is necessary and what is not, what is worthwhile and what is worthless.—Detroit Free Press.

NOT A POLITICAL QUESTION

The question which caused the greatest amount of excitement and the only real struggle of national importance in the Republican National Convention was the liquor question. Without going into the merits or demerits of this issue or the various planks proposed for the platform, it can be said in all fairness that there is one section in the plank finally adopted by the convention which ought to meet the approval of the revisionists and the repealists, the wets and the drys. That section follows:

"A nationwide controversy over the eighteenth amendment now distracts the attention from the constructive solution of many pressing national problems. The principle of national prohibition as embodied in the amendment was supported and opposed by members of both great political parties. It was submitted to the states by members of Congress of different political majorities. It was not then and is now not a partisan political question.

"Members of the Republican party hold different opinions with respect to it and no public official or member of the party should be pledged or forced to choose between his party affliations and his honest convictions upon this question."

There can be no gainsaying the truth of these assertions. The question of the sale and use of intoxicating liquors is not a political question. It cuts through both the Republican and Democratic parties. There are wets in both organizations and drys in both organizations.

Now if there is to be a vote on the Eighteenth Amendment, either for repeal or modification, through state conventions, the delegates to such convention should be elected in each election in which there is no other issue at stake. Only in this manner can the nation get a clean-cut expression on this vital question. If the question is submitted to the people in an election in which the tariff, the Legue of Nations, government control of utilities or other purely economic or political questions are to be decided on the Eighteenth Amendment will be no decision at all because all of these other issues will have their bearing.

NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER

That man Butler—Nicholas Murray Butler—is rapidly reaching the point at which in the interest of preserving what remnant still survives of the world's sanity, there must arise a demand that he be suppressed.

Nicholas Murray is so patently wrong about so wide a range of things as to which it so easy to be right, that he has become a source of national irritation.

Even that, bad though it is, would not be so powerful an irritant, were Nicholas less given to the practice of proclamation.

One of the major defects of this Nicholas Murray person is the fact that he feels called upon to proclaim, every day or two, to a tired and disillusioned world his personal and individual reactions.

Viewed as a habit, this is excessively annoying. Regarded as a trick of strategy, it is technically bad and depressing.

Most of us really don't care a tinker's dam what Nicholas Murray Butler thinks about anything.

We are somewhat spaciously disinterested. —Philidelphia Sunday Dispatch.

MORAL ECHOES

(By D. W. Haskew)

I was sitting in a coach talking to a number of friends. We could hear the engine as it shuffled the cars and knew that something was taking place. Soon the porter appeared at the door and shouted, "All passengers to the coach ahead." We were pleasantly situated and would have been pleased if we could have been undisturbed, but the engine had been disconnected from the car in which we had been traveling, and if we were to continue on our journey we must pick up our baggage and advance to the coach ahead. We did this without question for it was the thing to do. We are seated in a bustling, banging, shifting world, and we imagine ourselves pleasantly located. We are having sweet fellowship with our comrades, and just when we seem to be enjoying ourselves the most, there is an unexpected order, "Move up to the coach ahead," and we must move on or be left behind. The fellow who refuses to move is left sitting on the side track in the blazing sunshine, and he wonders why he is left out of the travel of civilization. Customs and contacts are charging, tested and tried methods are being disconnected, and every year we hear the announcement, "Move up to the coach ahead." Some day our ears are going to be deaf to the sound of changing times and then we will hear the last summons, "Move up to the coach ahead."

A ship had come in at the narrows and had anchored herself near the city dock. The tide had gone out into the Gulf and the water was low where the ship was anchored but still she was floating. About noon there came a squall on the bay and the wind struck this ship and drove her on the sand where she stuck fast. The crew and captain went into action. The sails were hoisted, the engine was put into action and two large tugs were hitched to the stern of the ship. The wind was blowing against the sails, the engine was pulling at high speed from within the hull of the steamer and the tugs were churning the water with pulling power. I stood on the shore and watched. The tide was coming in and just before it reached its highest level I heard a grinding sound and I saw the vessel move. She slid along for a moment and then she swung her bow clear of the bottom and was ready for ocean travel. She had been grounded by a terrific squall, but she had been set free by the pulling power brought to bear upon her. Many a man has been grounded under the driving power of a terrific temptation. He was made conscious of his danger and all parts of his being were put into action. God's forgiving grace was the tide that flowed in, and finnally the pulling powers made it possible for him to slide free from the grip of the world.

Young Mr. Russell, a brother of the Georgia governor, had his neck fractured in a ball game several years ago. Since that time he has fought a noble battle to keep himself fit and efficient, but the doctors hold out a gloomy future for the young man. Already his arms are dwarfing and only by his will power will he delay the total loss of his hands. He forces himself through rigid exervises that he may stay the coming sadness of a helpless state. It is beautiful to see the fighting spirit of a human heart. This young man is not alone in his misfortune. In almost every community there are people who have malignant diseases, deformed bodies and incurable afflictions that causes the future to be dark and uncertain, but these people are cheerful and brave in their fight for life and the few joys that life can bring. God bless the people who have met with a misfortune along the way.

I was going into a cave with a friend. He had experience as well as inventive genius. Before we advanced into the darkness he slipped a candle into each end of a cane that was about four feet in length and then he lighted each candle and held the cane in the middle with his hands. That placed a light on each side of him and it made it possible for him to see his way without being blinded with a flame near his eyes. This guide made a remark that set the wheels of my brain to revolving, said he, "My candle of life is burning at both ends." In my travels through this dark journey of life, I have found many who are burning their candle at both ends. They work hard all day and then frolic and carouse the most of the night. Such living is burning the candle of life at both ends. Such living cuts the duration of life in half.

I was to preach at a church in a strange town. Being the first to enter the building I took my seat. Looking about me I wondered why a church in a community like that should have been built with such a small auditorium. Just then the sexton entered and started to pushing back the folding doors, and in a very short time there was an abundant space in sight. Thought I to myself, "This is the way of the church in human life. When the church first enters the soul the space of life seems so narrow and inadequate. The church is the the doors. It keeps up its benevolent work until the soul becomes made and wonderful in its space and power to serve the races." Are you letting God's sexton push back the walls of your life and widen out the space of your soul for services and worship?

VETERANS MISLED

The veterans gathering in Washington have been misled by demagogical politicians, and in most cases by revolutionary communists, who delight to fish in troubled waters and would be pleased to see riots and other disorders in the National Capital.

The right to petition Congress is inviolable, but the veterans can sign petitions at home. And they must know that bonus legislation at this time would wreck the financial program of the government and inflict imparable injury on the nation's business and great hardships on the nation's workers.—Chicago Post.

"Wha' for?" replied the aged negro.

"Why, if you had a good brush, you could do twice as much work."

"Yassah, but Ah ain't got twict as much wuk to do."

Two Good Friends

Friends—real friends—are few and far between. And in the untimely death of Glenn Moore and Loyd Crowson I believe I lost two of the best friends I had anywhere. There two men were very much alike in disposition—jolly, good-natured and friendly to all. In their friendship for their fellowman they made innumerable friends for themselves. Both of these men came to us from other places, yet, in their short stay with us they had made for themselves a warm spot in our community heart. Somebody has said that, no matter what else may be said of a man, if he is friendly in his life and dealings with his fellow-men, his passing will be mourned by many. And no case ever proved this more fully than that of Glenn Moore and Loyd Crowhon. I am glad that I can remember them for the good friends they were, and join with their respective families in genuine sorrow for their untimely passing.

"Shorty" Miner

In passing down the street one afternoon recently, I spied an old face in the throng. Now that face belonged to "Shorty" Miner, and I don't mean that it looked so "old" that it attracted undue attention, but, oh well, you know how it is—I just hadn't seen "Shorty" in a good while, so I had to cross over and pull the old pump handle act with him. "Shorty" is fat and fine, thank you, and living in Montgomery agrees with him, I believe. After all, though, maybe he does look a little older than usual, of late—"Shorty" is "grand-pa" now, you know.

Charged Watches

I listened in on a new one last Saturday. Did you ever hear of "charged watches." Oh yes, I know lots of them are still charged on the books of the stores which sold them, but that isn't what I mean. What I mean is watches with too much electricity juice, jizzim, or something in them—makes them hang up and stop, and the only way to get them going again is to take them to the jeweler and get him to pull his hocus-pocus stunt on them and take some of this surplus stuff out of them. One local watch repair man didn't seem the least bit surprised, though, when the problem was put before him. He stated that he had such troubles brought to him quite often. He says there is something about an automobile which causes this, under certain conditions. So, if your watch happens to stop all of a sudden, don't make up your mind the baby has been monkeying with it, but take to a watch fixer—maybe it has this new "disease." It seems this is about the worst time of the year for such as this, and he can get her to whackin' again in no time at all.

This Golf Bug

Yes sir, it's getting us all. This golf bug is biting young and old. When the course opened some time ago, I thought it wouldn't be long before everybody's golf fever would cool, and the cows would be left to wonder why all the ditches were dug, and all the pretty mounds, greens, and stiles were constructed. But I was all wrong—it worked the other way around. Instead of the fever cooling it got to be catching, and any time I wouldn't be one bit surprised to see Tom Rockett, Buck Gore, Mack Wyatt, Dr. Hayes, Postmaster Bean, Tom Littlejohn, Uncle Bill Mullins, Newt Gray and others of our town, down there in the old cow pasture swinging the clubs and attempting to hit the elusive little white balls. And even the boys are taking to the game. Only last week I noticed one boy practicing, only he didn't have time to go to the regular course. That was no handicap though. He had somebody's crook-handled walking stick, took an Irish potato and teed off from a half grown watermelon. He made business a little bad for the potato, but he didn't hurt the melon a bit—didn't touch it—which goes to show that he was getting to be pretty good on his shots. So, if the old bug bites you, don't try to dodge it—you can't do it—just go on and take your medicine, consisting of one or two rounds of golf daily. That's a fair dose, and the only thing which will do the trouble any good.

My "Ingerns"

Yes sir, I have plenty of them. What? "Ingerns!" The Man on the Corner told you about them last week. Last Spring I decided to branch out a little in this truck farming racket, so I planted two acres in onions. They were going great guns when the freeze hit them, killing a big cut of them and leaving another big part weakened down so that the long drouth which followed took out a lot more. But after all this hard luck I'm going to realize a nice profit on the venture. Too, I have learned quite a bit about onion culture, which will help me this year. They can be raised at a profit in this neighborhood, and I would be glad to see several acres planted this fall. More about them later.—Man in the Moon.

Successful with Collards

"Negroes are naturally successful with collards," said County Agent Stapp, as we looked at two very fine rows of the vegetable in his garden back of the Potts place. I wondered at his statement until he completed the explanation that the collards were set out in his garden by an old negro woman. Then I thought of a certain collard patch I have seen for several years. It is about ten feet square, in the edge of the yard where an old negro washwoman lives. I have passed there many times and there are always collards growing in the little patch. I think Stapp's collards will be as big as trees by the time frost comes. There is nothing he can do about it, because collards, like persimmons or possums, are not fit to eat until after the first killing frost. Thinking of negroes and collards, I am reminded of a negro boarding house in Clanton several years ago, which was advertised by a sign saying "Collard Boarding House."

The Tragedy of Drowning

Like every other friend of the two unfortunate victims, I have been sorely grieved at the drowning of Glenn Moore and Loyd Crowson last week. For years past I have expected this to happen to somebody fishing in the bad waters below our dams. The risk has been indulged by too many men. Strange that a life or lives have not been exacted long ago. I hope this occurence of last week will serve as a deterrant for others.

All Kiwanis Night

Raymond Smith, who is attending the International Convention of Kiwanis in Detriot, wired Cohen Stapp that he has concluded the term "All Kiwanis Night," might as well be expressed as "Kiwanis All Night." Having attended the convention in Miami a year ago, I assure you I can fully realize how Raymond has come to the conclusion expressed in his telegram. It will be "Kiwanis all night, and every night," as long as the convention is in session.

Stapp's Office Moved

I notice this week the office of County Farm Agent, C. E. Stapp has been moved to the Potts Building next to the Courthouse. His quarters occupy the eastern half of the building. It makes a nice office, have been renovated and rearranged completely. Those who have business with the County agent, are reminded of the change in location. Now there are two very important departments of our county business in the Potts Building—the Farm demonstration department and the Educational department.

Divorcing Farm Bureau

The removal of Stapp's office to the Potts Building effects the separation of the Farm Demonstration work from the Farm Bureau. The latter will continue to occupy the Popwell Building. I think it is correct to separate these two agencies. The Farm Bureau is a good thing, but as a business I thing it should stand alone upon its own merits and in pursuance of its own purposes. The Farm Demonstration work should not be hampered by any interest other than the encouragement and extension of agriculture in the interest of every citizen of our county.

County-Wide Picnic

If plans work out as contemplated, Friday, July 22, will be a big day for the people of Chilton County. Under direction of the County Agent, a county-wide picnic is to be held at what is known as Popwell's Woods, on the highway just south of Clanton. The tentative program is published this week. It is hoped the people from every part of Chilton County will cooperate in the movement. It can be made a great day for everybody, and of great value. Watch for more complete details of the program to be given next week.

We Should Make a Park

I have thought many times that the Popwell Woods should be made a community park and preserved for the future. There is perhaps not another place on the Bee Line Highway where a forest of virgin long leaf yellow pine stands alongside the pavement to be seen and admired by thousands of people every year. These pines should be preserved. Clanton needs a park. Popwell Woods is the most delightful place possible. Think about it.

Who Would You Name?

What would be your answer to this question? Name on outstanding American citizen of national prominence and reputation, who has shown an adequate and convincing ability to suggest policies that insure economy, retrenchment in public expenses, and the proper readjustment of national affairs according to the demands of the times in which we live." The question was given to a high school student to answer. Can you name the man who fills the bill? If you should venture to name one, your neighbor would promptly rise up and declare you had picked a man of no ability at all. If we had a man who is able to be a Moses in these times, I doubt if you would ever get as much as half the people to appreciate him and have confidence in him.

The Senate Defeats The Bonus Bill

The Senate deserves the highest praise for its refusal to pass the bonus bill. It acted with courage and sound judgment. For its overwhelming defeat of this ruinous measure it will receive the thanks and commendation of the nation.

The majority against the bill was surprisingly large. The vote was 62 to 18, which should be sufficient to dispose of this troublesome question for the rest of this session of Congress, at least. Ten Democrats, seven Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite voted for the bill. It is disappointing to this newspaper, as it undoubtedly is to the great majority of Alabamians, that this state's two senators were among the very small minority that supported the measure.

Alabamians will be gratified, however, at the knowledge that in the House, which forced a vote on the bonus bill, three representatives from this state—Huddleston, McDuffie and Oliver—were among those who voted against it.—Birmingham News.

Our idea of not being important at a national convention is to act as an alternate.

CLANTON LEGION TEAM WINS ANOTHER FROM MILLBROOK

Clanton's Legion team played Millbrook on the Millbrook diamond Tuesday afternoon, leaving with victory. The score at the end of nine easy innings was 5 to 0 in favor of Clanton.

Johnson, pitching for Clanton, allowed Millbrook only 5 hits, while Clanton's hard hitting players hit Trotter, Millbrook's pitcher, for 15 safeties, among which were several doubles.

An outstanding event of the entire game was a triple play by Clanton in the seventh inning. With three of Millbrook's players on the bags, no outs, and the score 3 to 0, Clanton pulled a fast triple play, Moore to A. Hayes to M. Hayes to Ashcraft, catching all three Millbrook runners off the bases.

Leading Clanton batters were Jesse Frank Foshee, getting 3 out of 4 times up and M. Hayes, getting 3 out of 5 times up.

A. Jones of Millbrook led his team with 2 out of 4 times up.

WALTER CLARK IS IN CANADA

The Union-Banner received by air mail Tuesday morning a communication from Walter Clark which says:

"Walter Clark, bill poster, who lives in Stumps Hills, is now out of the U. S. A., way up in Canada, with the Downie Brothers Circus.

"If Alabama had whiskey like they have in Canada, they could build a paved road from Lock 12 to the State of Maine.

"The Downie Brothers Circus will show Salem, Mass., Monday, July 11. Have got a circus almost as big as Ringling Brothers. May show Alabama when cotton goes to selling.

"Owner and manager of the circus is Charles Sparks. Clyde H. Willard is manager of advertising car No. 1. Walter Clark is bill poster and lithographer. J. R. Ramsey is boss bill poster. Ten others billing the circus like a real circus."

WOMAN'S KIN KILLS HER ESTRANGLED HUSBAND

Fort Payne, Ala., June 26.—John Tolmer 25, was in DeKalb County jail today charged with murder in the slaying of his brother-in-law, Charlie Stogstell 40, of Montgomery.

The slaying took place at Beerhead Cove, 30 miles northeast of Fort Payne, Tolmer told the sheriff when Stogstell came to his farm home where Mrs. Stogstell had been living since separating from her husband.

Tolmer said Stogstell drove up to his place and in getting out of the car reached into the back. He told the sheriff he thought Stogstell was reaching for a gun and he fired on him.

Tolmer said Stogstell married his sister several months ago and they made their home in Montgomery until she left her husband and returned home recently.

COTTON SHIPMENT MOVES

Dothan, Ala., June 28.—Ten thousand bales of cotton are being shipped this week to Panama City, Fla., to be loaded on freighters for oriental markets. One-half of the amount will go to Japan and the other half to China. The cotton is being shipped to Panama City in 1,000 bale lots and is being unloaded at the docks of the Kraft Paper Mill. This is one of the largest single shipments of cotton to be sent from Dothan, it is said.

DAT BLOOMIN PREACHER

Elder Blossom Fills His Pintment on The 4th Sunday in June, 1932

As Ah stan hyar dis mawnin, Ahs made to wonder jes how each one ob us appear in de site of God. Do evy one ob us realize de fac dat God can look rite into our hearts an see ef we is plum rite in evy wa? De lessen dis mawnin is in Matt. 7, fum de 13 to de las verse. (reads lesson). Will you now stan an sing us a good ole song? (They stand and sing.) Now set down.

Brudder George open dem other winders ovah dar, its gwyin to be real warm in here dis mawnin.

De tex is de 21st verse ob de 7th chapter of Matt. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of My Father which is in heaven."

As Ah come down hyar dis mawnin, Ah wuz drivin long wid mah mine absorbed in deep thoughts, an rite in de middle ob a san bed, dat model T ob mine snorted a time or two an stopped ded still. Ah will admit to you dat it wuz a hard thing fur me to pull mah mine offen de deep things an place it on as near nothin as a model T Ford. But atter while Ah succeeded, den Ah got out an tinkered wid it a little, den Ah cranked an cranked, till Ah run outen bref an patience both at de same time, den Ah walked off to de side ob de road an looked at it, an Ah sa to my sef, "You look lak a good car, you got four wheels an you got a steering wheel an you got a radiator an a top an seats an evy thing, so why dont you run along lak a good car?" Den mah mine jumped fum dat Ford to some church members whut Ah no an Ah thought dat da wuz jes lak dat Ford: Rite when you think you got dem gwyin good, da set rite down on you an no amount ob coaxin will git um started.

Atter while Ah got dat model T started an went chug chuggin down de road. Ah cood tell it twant runnin rite, an when Ah met a man Ah axed him whut wuz de matter wid it, an he sa "she's jes hitten on three." Den Ah sa to mah sef, dats better than some church members, cause lots ob dem is jes hitten on one, an dat's de preacher. Ah had to git back to town de bes way Ah cud an send de recker atter it. And when de mecanic looked it ovah he said, "Preacher, de very thing whut it takes to make it go is lackin, an dat is fire, her mag is exhausted." An den Ah sa to mah sef, yes dat's de wa wid lots ob church folks, whut little ligion de had wuz soon exhausted or da didnt hab none to start wid.

Ah am powerful fraid dat de recker is gwyin to hab to pull lots ob church folks to de shop whur da can be fixed. As Ah stood by dat Ford dat mawnin, Ah couldnt tell by lookin at it whut wuz rong, cause de trouble wuz on de inside. An as Ah stan hyar dis mawnin an look ovah dis congregation, Ah cant see nothin rong. Jes to look to you, you seem to be alrite, but judgin by de wa things is bin gwyin on here dar mus be lots ob Mags an Marys an Johns an Jacks whose trouble is on de inside.

One time Ah set in to make me a wheel-bar, an when Ah got it done Ah foun dat Ah didnt hab no wheel. Dat thing wuz wuthless to me widout a wheel, so Ah went to a neighbor an he giv me a wheel, den Ah could haul lots ob things. It would carry enny thing dat Ah put on it. Ah cud make evy thing bout dat wheel-bar, but de wheel, an dat wuz de main thing. De church can take a man an make a deacon outen him, or a Sunday School superintendent or clerk ob de church, but it cant make a Christian outen him. An it dont make no difference whut you make outen him ef he aint got no ligion he aint wuth nothin. Ah think lots ob times dat some ob de folks whut de church is got leadin dem des aint got no wheels.

When you finds one whut is got sho nuff ligion, you can put anything on dem an da will carry it rite on an not grumble an growl but is. Long bout dis time las year, mah ole oman sa Blossom does you no whut today is, an Ah sa yes, dis is Tuesday, an she sa dat aint all, dis is yoah birthday. An sho nuf it is, an Ah done fogot all bout it. Den Ah sa to mah sef, yes dats jes lak lots ob church members, ef da wuz ever born ob de spirit, da done fogot all bout it.

When Ah went back to de shop to git mah Ford, de macanic sa to me, "Preacher she knoks mighty bad," den Ah sa to mah sef, yes but not as bad as some church members, cause da knocks de preacher or some body elce all de time. An when Ah axed him whut it wood cost to stop dat knock, he sa "Preacher, Ah can fix dat, but de bes thing fur you to do is to jack up de hood and put a new car under it." Den Ah sa to mah sef, yas dat wood be de bes thing to do to some church members, jes jack up da hat and put a new man under it.

Since mah tex sa dat not evy one dat sa Lord, Lord, shall enter de kingdom, it must be dat we is got some now whut is sayin, "Lord, Lord, aint we doin wonderful works in Yoah name, aint we castin out debils in yoah name, ain't we givin big suppers and rallys and plays, in Yoah name?" An den find out in de end dat de Lord nevah knowed dem. Its an awful thing to go on through life makin folks belebe dat we is Christians an den hab de Lord sa to us, "Ah nevah knew you."

Now how is we gwyin to find out ef we is His or no? Dar mus be some wa by which we can kno. A good carpenter who wishes to do a good job is gwyin to take a rule an square wid his uder tools. Each piece mus cum up to de measure ob de rule and de square. An when he finds de piece is not as long as he wants, he dont cut de rule down to fit de piece, an ef it aint square he dont hammer de square to make it fit de piece.

Now let us try de rule ob God's word to our lives, an ef we find dat our lives dont cum up to de rule les not try to make de rule fit us, but see to it dat our lives fits de rule. Ah has now talked long nuff, an mus close, but lissen while Ah reads man poem:

De eternal truths ob God's word
Will show us whut we is.
An by it we may no
Ef we is really His.

So many folks seem to think
Dat da is His chile.
When deep down in their harts
Da no better all de while

Den let us apply de rule
An stick by it fast.
Den when de end is cum
He'l no us at last.

Stan an be dismis.

IN MEMORY OF T. B. MINOR

On Friday night, June 17th, the death angel visited Mt. Carmel community and carried away the spirit of Mr. Tom Minor, 71 years of age. Mr. Minor had been in ill health for several years, but was only confined to his bed one week.

All was done for him that loving hands and Dr. Johnson could do to save him, but God saw fit to call him home. He bore his suffering with patience. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Janie Minor, 3 children, Marvin Minor, and Bessie Scott of Maplesville, Ala., and Mrs. Ada Smitherman, Prattville, 2 grand children, Adell Scott and Winston Minor, 2 brothers, John Minor of Birmingham, Bill Minor of Freemont, and a host of friends and relatives.

Mr. Minor lived in the Pletcher community 45 years. He was well known and loved by the people of Chilton County. He was a member of Mt. Carmel Baptist church for 37 years, and was always ready to do his part in anything that stood for the right.

Funral services were conducted on Sunday by Rev. A. S. Bentley at Mt. Carmel church at 11 a.m.. The remains were laid to rest in the adjoining cemetery. Mr. Griffin of Prattville was in charge. Pallbearers were: Archie Giles, Enzo and Ernest Klinner, Malcom and Bascoe Chambers and Arthur Moates.

Mr. Minor will be missed not only by his family, but by his church and his friends and neighbors, for he was always ready to lend a helping hand to any one in need. We loved him, but Jesus loved him more and called him home to live with him on high forevermore. We will say to the family, weep not dear ones, for we feel sure our loss is heaven's gain. We know there is a vacant place that can never be filled. He can not come back to us, but we can go to him, where there will be no more sickness nor death, and where there will be no more parting, and no more pain, where we will all be happy singing with the angels around our heavenly father. All will be peace and love.—One who loved him.

BICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION IS OBSERVED BY CANADA

From British Columbia on the pacific to Newfounderland on the Atlantic, Canada is actively participating in the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of George Washington's birth, according to official reports received by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission. Throughout the length and breadth of the land fitting exercises have been held in sincere tribute to the memory of the first president of the United States..

In Toronto the American Women's club, with the cooperation of the Toronto Post of the American Legion and the office of the United Consul General, held a Colonial dinner and ball in the Royal York hotel. Dr. George W. Locke, chief librarian of the Toronto Public Libraries, delivered an address on Washington. Dr. Locke was introduced by Emil Sauer, United States consul general at Ontario. The event attracted wide attention in the Toronto press.

A service conducted by the Rev. H. R. Grant in Saint Andrews church at Fort William was dedicated to George Washington. The editorial column of the Times Journal of that city noted the occasion with approval and said, "Present-day Americans bear no grudge against George III of England than Englishmen bear against George Washington."

Under the auspices of the Americans Women's clubs of Vancouver a birthday luncheon was held in the hotel Vancouver. Attended by prominent Canadians and Americans, the event was particularly mentioned in Vancouver newspapers as a "perfectly arranged affair." Ely Palmer, United States consul general at Vancouver, delivered an address on the life of George Washington.

Interesting in its spontaneity is the project planned by the Memorial University College in St. John's, Newfounderland. A request from the college for material and information on George Washington has been forwarded to the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission with the explanation that students at the institute wish to prepare essays on the life and career of the first president of the United States. The college also plans to present a drama written around the life of George Washington.

There has been a good deal of uncertainty as to when to plant snap beans for fall crop shipment. It is generally felt that it would be advisable and better to not plant before the last of July or the first of August in order to get them as late as possible. Therefore those who contemplated planting them now soon, it is suggested that you wait until the general planting will be done, so as to come in with the others.

All those who would like to join in the shipment of corn, should report to this office this week, as we might ship a car during the first week in July. At this writting, there has not been enough corn ready to risk the loading of a car.

REFUGE

Our Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. are still doing nicely. Saturday and Sunday were our regular preaching days. Rev. M. Lockhart delivered three wonderful sermons. His subject Sunday night was on "God's Signal," which everyone enjoyed.

Our revival begins at Refuge on the fourth Sunday in July. We wish to ask all praying people to be much in prayer for this revival. We have also learned that the revival at Pates Chapel starts the fifth Sunday in July, and at Maples Springs the first Sunday in August. Everybody be much in prayer for the revivals.—Reporter.

FROM THE PAXONS IN GEORGIA

Editor Union-Banner:

We would like to say howdy to our friends and neighbors at Clanton and Thorsby. We are in the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Ga., where the people do not seem to be worrying about the depression. Folks around here are busy and have plenty to eat and wear, only scarce in money.

But they are not worrying about money, for they could not eat it if they had it, and they do not have to have money to buy something to eat. All the money and wealth in the vaults of the banks of this world would not make one bowl of soup.

On the plantation here we have several cows that give plenty of milk and butter. Over 10 chickens, 32 turkeys, six or eight hogs, several horses, and every kind of vegetable that grows.

If those who are out of a job and going hungry could get on a farm and get to growing something, they would be all right soon.

We never expect to find a more friendly people than our nighbors and friends in Chilton County. We will always remember them and thank them for their kindness. We wish all of you a long and happy life; and that speaks for The Union-Banner too. We get it every week, and it really is "like a letter from home."

W. A. FRANKLIN KILLED SATURDAY

His Neck Was Broken By Ernest Garner, His Brother-In-Law

Mr. William Anderson Franklin, well-known carpenter, was killed about noon last Saturday at his home near Clanton, in the Friendship community. According to reports, Mr. Franklin met his death at the hands of Ernest Garner, his brother-in-law.

It was stated that Garner came to Franklin's home to see his (Garner's) little three-year-old girl, who was living with the Franklins. As Garner and Franklin were talking out in the yard, it is said Garner began to insist that Franklin permit him to take the little girl to live with him. When Franklin expressed his disapproval of Garner's taking the child with him, it is said that Garner struck him in the chest with his fist, knocking his breath out. As Franklin started to fall face forward, it is said that Garner grabbed his head with his hands, giving a sharp twist that broke Franklin's neck. Franklin died without regaining consciousness.

Notification of the officers was made immediately. They went to Franklin's home and brought Garner to jail. Spigener's ambulance brought the dead man to Clanton and prepared it for burial.

Mr. Franklin was 52 years old. Burial was at Walnut Creek Sunday at two o'clock p. m., with Spigener in charge. The funeral was conducted by Rev. M. J. Parrish. Pallbearers were Walter Teel, Steve Baker, John Farley, Allen Gore, John Gore and Ed Miller.

Survivors of Mr. Franklin are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Franklin; three brothers, J. W. Franklin, of Clanton, J. E. and John Franklin; four sisters, Mrs. Mary Price, Mrs. J. A. Bates, Mrs. J V. Coe, and Mrs. Lillie Weldon.

Garner's first wife was a sister of Mrs. W. A. Franklin. Mrs. Garner died about three years ago, leaving an infant child. Mr. and Mrs. Franklin took the child and have kept it ever sice. It is said that Garner recently married again, and wanted to take the little girl to live with him. He lived in a little hut on the bank of Coosa River at an isolated place about eleven miles east of Clanton.

ADULT SCHOOLS OPEN JULY 18

Teachers Announced For The Different Schools of the County

The opportunity schools of Chilton County will begin Monday morning, July 18, at 8 o'clock, at the following places and possibly the following teachers:

Smith; County Line, Miss Ruth Mize; Mineral Springs, Miss Lera Bean; Free Springs, Mrs. Marjorine Henley; Refuge, Miss Mabel Parker; Chestnut Grove, Mrs. Claud Billingsley; Mullins, Miss Ruth Jones.

In connection with these schools, we will have two centers in the county for economic work of some kind. At each center will be two groups, one for students of opportunity schools and one for the women who do not attend school. These classes are absolutely free.

Coker; County Training, Mamie Calloway; Thorsby, Frances Wood; New Convert, Ada W. Davis; Maplesville, Vivian Thompson Williams; Stanton, Lillian Price; Jemison, Evelyn Cooper.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Lowe of Decatur, Mr. Shux Cleckler and Miss Charles Shelton of Athens were visitors to Clanton the past week end.

WESTERN UNION QUITS HERE

We suppose it is a foregone conclusion now that we shall not again have a Western Union Telegraph office in Clanton. The office in the Hayes Building has been dismantled, the equipment either disposed of locally or sent somewhere else.

For many months past the business of Western Union in and out of Clanton has been handled through the railroad office. The downtown office has been closed for a long time, the company giving the reason for closing it that it was a losing proposition, financially.

The closing of the office was not at all satisfactory to many of the business people here. An effort was made repeatedly to have the telegraph company reconsider and keep the office. They reconsidered; but they did not change their minds. Now the office is gone for good, and we are back to where we were many years ago in the telegraph business; If you want to send a message, you will have to do it through the railroad office.

NEW BAKERY TO BE OPENED HERE

Enterprise Will Be Operated By Snow and Floyd of Meridian, Miss.

The Sunlight Baking Company is the name of a new and up-to-date cooking concern which is now installing its $3,000 plant in the Wade building next to the post office. The establishment will open for business about the middle of this month. Part of the machinery is already here and the rest is arriving from the foundries daily. All the equipment will be new.

The owners are Mr. W. J. Snow and Mr. Floyd Lynch, both of Meridian, Miss. The operator of the cooking department will be Mr. A. D. Owen also of Meridian. Mr. Owen has had sixteen years experience in the baking business and is a graduate of the American Baking Institute of Chicago. Their products will consist of cakes, pastries, loaf bread, Etc. In fact, they will be equipped to do everything that is usually done in a real first class baking plant.

Mr. Owen and his wife are already living in Clanton. Mr. Lynch will move his family here soon. Mr. Snow will also live here, but he has no family.

The Union - Banner welcomes Messrs. Snow, Lynch and Owen into our midst. They seem to be nice people, and we are sure that Clanton people will like them and that they will like to live here and do business with us. Clanton needs a good bakery, and the right kind of one run in the right way can make good here.

SINGING AT LIBERTY

There will be an all-day singing at Liberty church, on the Highway, in Autauga County, the third Sunday in July. All singers are cordially invited. The Clanton Quartet is expected.—I. D. Huett.

A CURIOUS ROOT AND OLD PLOWS

Relics Presented By Rev. E. A. Norris of Corinth Community

For a few days there has been lent to The Union-Banner by Rev. E. A. Norris of Corinth community a very curiously shaped pine root which was sawn from a clay root by his boys some years ago. Since that time the root has served admirably as a blue bird nest, having been hung up on a pole or tree near the Norris home. It is not a straight root as they usually grow, but is just a solid mass of root all coiled up and grown together. The whole thing is hollow and there are two nice round holes just the right size for birds to enter and build their nest. The root is solid heart and was sawn from the extreme end of the tap root.

Also Bro. Norris brought in three old home-made plows which have not been used for half a century. They were very likely made a hundred years ago, and it is said that their maker was the grandfather of Louis T. Dennis who now lives near Midway. The plows are the kind that were occasionally repointed when they became dull and worn too short.

If you happen to be in town within the next few days, it will be interesting for you to drop in and see these exhibits.

Grover Bice Continues To Insist On Tax Reductions In Chilton County

Thorsby Postmaster Replies To Judge Reynolds By Citing A Newspaper Report of Tax Reduction Program Being Advocated In Jefferson County

Editor Union-Banner:

Will you give this letter and clipping the same front page publicity that you gave Judge Reynolds' reply to me?

In the first place I am going to assume that Judge Reynolds ought to know what the law provides regarding tax re-valuation in Chilton County. Listen tax payers, the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, controlled by the Probate Judge of this county, pays out $600.00 per year, (the tax payer's money) to a lawyer for advice. Think of that, $50.00 a month for legal advice Etc., this lawyer happens to be the son of Judge Reynolds.

Judge Reynolds says (we note that you suggested that the Commissioners Court appoint an appraisal board to re-valuate every piece of property in Chilton County. As the law provides how a tax payer shall proceed to get his property valuations reduced, of course, it would have been absurd, ridiculous for the Commissioners to have followed your suggestions; I thank the Judge for this compliment.

Now Mr. Editor, I herewith inclose a clipping which I clipped from the Birmingham Post, date of may 27th, 1932, kindly print. I want the tax payers of this county to read this and decide whether my suggestions were ridiculous, deaf to reason or not, (Judge Reynolds said it was).

County Plans to Revaluate all Property. Job to Take Six Months. May Start Soon

Revaluation of every piece of property in Jefferson County will be ordered by the county commission at an early date in a move to bring about tax readjustments made necessary by the depression.

This disclosure came Friday in the wake to vigorous demand for lower assesments from property owners and business men, who have organized a new division of the Birmigham Real Estate board to fight for tax relief and economy in government.

Commissioer William E. Cornig declared a reappraisal of all county property "is absolutely necessary and will be made." Although it is too late for 1932 assessments to be affected, he said the work in all probability would be completed in advance of the next assessment period. Corning added that his view is shared by the other commission members.

Six Months Job

George Tarrant, agent of the state tax commission, agreed that a revaluation is "badly needed" and suggested it should be made "as soon as conditions warrant." Corning declared 'now is the time to make it," and estimated 30 field men could do the

Contrasting The Two Political Party Platforms On Prohibition Question

Perhaps the most talked-about item of business in the recent national political party conventions is the planks of the platform dealing with the Eighteenth Amendment. For the information of our readers, all of whom will be interested in this subject, we publish below the exact wording for the "Prohibition Plank" of both the Republican and the Democratic parties. These planks represent the expressed attitude of the parties, from a national standpoint, upon which they will go to the people of the country in the General Election in November.

THE REPUBLICAN PLANK

The Republican party has always stood and stands today for obedience to and enforcement of the law as the very foudation of orderly government and civilization. There can be no national security otherwise. The duty of the President of the United States and of the officers of the law is clear. The law must be enforced as they find it enatced by the people. To these courses of action we pledge our nominee.

The Republican party is and always has been the party of the Constitution. Nulification by nonobservance by individuals or state action threatens the stability of government.

Forsaw Changes Need

While the Constitution makers sought a high degree of permanence, they forsaw the need of changes and provided for them. ARTICLE V limits the proposals of amendments to two thirds methods: (1) Two-thirds of both houses of Congress may propose amendments, or (2) on application of the Legislaturees of two-thirds of the states a national convention shall be called by Congress to propose amendments.

Thereafter ratification must be had in one of two ways: (1) By the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states; or (2) by conventions held in three-fourths of the several states. Congress is given power to determine the mode of ratification.

Cite Big Controversy

Referendums without constitutional sanction cannot furnish a decisive answer. Those who propose them innocently are deluded by false hopes; those who propose them knowingly are deceiving the people.

Anation-wide controversy over the eighteenth amendment now distracts attention from the constructive solution of many pressing national problems. The principle of national prohibition as embodied in the amendment was supported and opposed by members of both great political parties. It was submitted to the states by members of Congress of different political faiths and ratified by state legislatures of different political majorities. It was not then and is not now a partisan political question.

Members of the Republican party hold different opinions with respect to it and no public official or member of the party should be pledged or forced to choose between his party affiliations and his honest convictions upon the question.

We do not favor a resubmission limited for the issue of retention or repeal . For the American nation never in its history has gone backwar and in this case the progress which has been thus far made must be preserved, while the evil must be eliminated.

Subject To U. S. Rule

We, therefore, believe that the people should have an opportunity to pass upon a proposed amendment the provision of which, while retaining the federal government power to preserve the gains already made in dealing with the evils inherent in the liquor traffic, shall allow states to deal with the problem as their citizens may determine, but subject always to the power of the federal government to protect those states where prohibition may exist and safeguard our citizens everywhere from the return of the saloon and its tendant abuses.

Such an amendment should be promptly submitted to the states by Congress, to be acted upon by state conventions called for that sole purpose in accordance with the provisions of Article V of the constitution, and adequately safeguarded so as to be truly representative.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLANK

We favor the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

To effect such repeal, we demand that the Congress immediately propose a constitutional amendment to truly representative conventions in the states called to act solely on that proposal.

We urge the enactment of such measures by the several states as will actually promote temperance, effectively prevent the return of the saloon and bring the liquor traffic into the open under complete supervision and control by the states.

We demand that the federal government effectively exercise its power to enable the states to effectively protect themselves against importation of intoxicating liquors in violation of their laws.

Pending repeal, we favor immediate modification of the Volstead act to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and other beverages of such alcholic content as is permissible under the constitution and to provide therefrom a proper and needed revenue.

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

It takes grit and grace to get up on Monday morning after a Sabbath like July the 3rd, and with a sweet spirit invite folks to church. If you were a pastor and loved the church that you are serving, your heart would be broken if you should have to administer to 49 at Sunday school, 56 at 11 a.m. and 29 at night. No complaint is to be made against those who were present. In spite of the indifference so manifest I am at my weekly (and I might spell that word "weakly") job of inviting you to church next Sunday.

We want to serve you with the word of God at 9:45 in one of our Sunday school classes. We would be so happy to break the bread of life to you at 11 a. m. and at 8 p. m.

When you get up Sunday morning the devil votes for you to skip church that day and God votes for you to go. If you vote with God, you go, if you vote with the devil you stay away. Next Sunday you have another ballot. Be careful how you vote.

COUNTY PICNIC FRIDAY, JULY 22

Everybody Urged To Make Preparations To Attend This Big Event

Did you tell your neighbors about the big county-wide picnic that county agent Stapp is arranging for July 22nd? Mr. Stapp states that he is going to do everything he can to make the 22nd of July a day long to be remembered by those who attend the picnic. Mr. Stapp is having the grounds cleaned now. The picnic will be in that beautiful grove of pines and oaks about 1½ miles south of Clanton on the highway and just across the highway from Mr. Boswell's barbecue stand.

Mr. Boswell has offered to cooperate with Mr. Stapp in every way he can to help make it a great day.

Mr. Stapp has already arranged a splendid program and is now making ready to get up loud speakers so every one can hear. The fiddlers are registering for the fiddlers contest.

Mr. Stapp states that he is arranging this picnic so every white family that so desires can come, see and hear a fine program, spread their own lunch and have a good time without having to spend a nickel.

Mr. Stapp says that he is going to provide plenty good free ice water, and for those who just want to spend some money that day, he has arranged to have on sale cold drinks, ice cream and barbecue, the profit from the sales to go toward helping defray expenses of cleaning the grounds, building speaker stands and seats, and providing ice water and other comforts.

We are wondering who will get the $2.50 gold piece for having the largest family—all present. Someone suggested Eugene Mullins. Well, there are so many good things on the program until we hope everybody will cooperate with Mr. Stapp in making it a great day in Chilton County.

SINGING SCHOOL BEGINS JULY 11

Three Weeks Session Will Be Held By W. M. Devaughn at Thorsby

As per arrangements completed several weeks ago, Prof. W. M. Devaughn will teach a three weeks singing school at Thorsby, beginning next Monday, July 11th. The school will be taught in the Public School building.

Thorsby and vicinity are about the singing center of Chilton County, the people there always take considerable interest in the advancement of sacred song. When they undertake a thing, they believe in doing it up right; this is the spirit behind the singing school. And they have a teacher who is on to the singing racket too. Prof. W. M. Devaughn is recognized as among the foremost singing teachers in central Alabama. Therefore, with these facts as a background, indications are that the singing school at Thorsby will be a noted success and the results of it will be felt among the singing element of our people all over the county for years to come.

The tuition for the school will be in agreement with the prices made by the other leading teachers of the county. All patrons are urged to meet Prof. Devaughn at the school the first morning.

WILL BEGIN LAY DAM ROAD PAVING

First Project Will Extend Two Miles From The City Limits

At a meeting of the Commissioners Court of Chilton County last Friday, an order was passed to begin the program of asphalt paving on the Lay Dam Road. The first project will begin at the city limits (Gore's Bridge) and extend two miles toward Lay Dam.

It was determined that the County would employ men with trucks, teams and wagons, to prepare the road bed for putting on the pavement. This preliminary work will involve some grading, ditching, and perhaps graveling some places that may not already have sufficient gravel base to support the pavement.

Contract will be let by the county to the lowest bidder for putting down the pavement after the base has been properly prepared under the supervision of county authorities.

The Commissioners Court expects to employ local labor in this work. And it is stated that it would be provided in the contract for the paving that local people in Chilton county would be employed to do the work.

The first project of two miles will be bid off by a contractor for the paving, with a provision in the contract that the county may accept a bid on the same basis for building the Lay Dam Road as far as the Cane Creek cross roads.

This work will provide employment for several people during the summer months when they will have nothing to do on the farms. The county has a surplus of money in its road fund, and it is regarded as a worth-while object on the part of the Commissioners to build this road and furnish employment to people who need it.

At this time the Commissioners are building a steel bridge across the creek on the old Thorsby Highway between the city limits of Clanton and the mill village. This project will be done under supervision of the county and will employ local labor to do the work.

BURGLAR CAUGHT IN PARRISH HOME

White Man Entered House While Family Was Gone To Church

A white man, who gave his name as Reeves, from some place in North Alabama, was caught last Sunday in the act of burgalarizing the home of Mr. John Parrish, a mile east of Clanton.

Mr. Parrish and his family had gone to preaching at Concord church. Dr. W. L. Parrish, who lives nearby, with his father, Mr. E. H. Parrish, had also gone to the church, leaving at home only Mrs. Parrish and a negro boy who works there.

As the negro happened to be passing by the home of Mr. John Parrish he observed a man on the porch. He walked closer to the house. He knew none of the Parrish family were at home. As he came closer he observed a man engaged in cutting the screen door. As quickly as he could he ran back to the home of Dr. Parrish, and told Mrs. Parrish what he had seen.

Mrs. Parrish instructed the negro to take the car and go to the church as quickly as possible to get Dr. Parrish and John. She called the Sheriff at once. In a few minutes the Sheriff's forces were at the place, and several people had come with the Parrishs from the church.

The burglar had gone into the house and took several articles including a watch, a fountain pen, a shirt, and a few cents in money which he found on the mantel. The Sheriff brought the man to Clanton and put him in jail.

SECOND TERM OF SUMMER SCHOOL BEGINS MONDAY

Announcement is made that the second term of summer school at the Chilton County High School will begin next Monday morning, July 11. One whole unit of old work or two half units of new work may be taken at this short term. The teachers will be the same as in the first summer term—Prof and Mrs. L. C. Warr.

The first term closed last week, and reports are that it was very successful.

POOR ORIGINAL

DAT BLOOMIN PREACHER

This week's Blossom.—

Bible sa, "De love ob money is de root ob all evil."

Ah, sa, lots ob church members is full ob roots.

You remember las week Ah tole you bout de trouble Ah had wid dat model T ob mine. Well Ah done traded it off, Ah swapped it fur a washin machine, one ob dem whut you turn wid a crank. An atter turnin it Ah hab desided dat nothin but a crank wood hab one. But mah ole oman wanted it cause her washins has increased since de hot weder started. She sa dat Ah will be gone fum home at leas three doys outen each week now.

Ah will read fur a lesson dis mawnin de 4th chapter of Isaiah. (Reads lesson). De tex dis mawnin is de 29 verse ob de 7th chapter ob Ecclesiastes. "God hath made man upright; but they have sought out man inventions." A study ob Solomon writin will sho dat he wuz a close student ob history, an dat he wuz well qualified to rite on de various aspects ob human life. You remember dat he wuz de one who sed "Boast no thyself of tomorrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forh," Prov. 27:1.

An when he wrote de words ob de tex, his mind mus hab ben led on down thru de ages to our day by de spirit. Ah dont belebe dat he ment de difrunt kinds ob machines invented by man, if not, to what kind of inventions does he refer? Since de fust part ob de tex seys, "God made man upright." We can, wid reasonable assurance, sa dat after de great transgression, man begun to seek out ways an means to justify his sef in de sight ob God who made him upright. De fust invention wuz when Adam sed "De woman gave to me and I did eat." An while he stood dar inventin dat excuse, he had anuther inventin in de shape ob a apron of fig leaves pinned round him.

We come on up to de time ob Saul. An we find him inventin a story dat to him, wuz fine. God, through the Prophet Samuel, told Saul to destroy the Amelekies, together wid their sheep an oxen. But Saul returns wid some ob de fat cattle an sheep. An when Samuel called his attention to it he sed dat he brot dem to sacrafice to de Lord. Dat wuz purely an invention of Saul; he wanted to save some ob dem cattle fur his sef. We cood find lots mo men in de Bible whut sought out inventions, but Ah think dat is nuff.

Now less see bout de people ob our own time, take fur instance, one certain oman dat sprung to prominence some years ago by her invention. She begu to set forth de doctrine ob "Christian Science" which teaches, first, de transmigration ob de soul. Second, dat God dont no nuthin bout sin, dat is only de creature ob man's brain, or dat man invented it his sef. Den take de case ob another one: He invented a plan whereby evy body cood be sabed atter dis life, dat is, da wood hab another chance to git rite wid God atter da died. An des how many inventions individuals can seek out fur da selves Ah cant sa, fur Ah has had so many difrunt kinds presented to me dat it wood take me a long time to tell bout um.

One man tried to prove to me by de Bible dat God made two men to start wid. De fust one wuz spirit an de second wuz human, an referred me to de two accounts as foun in de fust two chapters ob Genesis. Dat man claimed dat ef you wuz a descendent ob de fust man, dat you would be sabed, an dat ef you wuz a descendent ob de second man dat you wood be lost. An dat dar wuz no wa fur us to no fum which one we descended till de dividin time comes. Den he referd me to Matt: 25, an sed dat de sheep dar spoken ob wuz those who descended fum de spiritual man an de goats wuz those who descended fum de human or de second man.

Dar is so many ob dese individual pinons or inventions dat it wood be hard to name dem all. So Ah will jes gib you one mo. "De universal Fatherhood ob God." While those holdin dis doctrine differ widely mong demselves as to whut da means by it. In general, da teach dat all chilluns are born into dis worl pure an holy an therefore de chiluns ob God, dat they remain chiluns ob God until such a time as da forfet dat relationship by lives ob rebellion an transgression ginst God; dat all dat these errin chiluns ob God hab to do to be received back to de family ob is to reform an clean up an live rite an keep God's commandments. Ob course dar is some mong dem who go further an teach dat God is too good to send any ob His own chiluns to hell an fur dat reason deny eternal punishment.

A man whut belebed sich stuff as dat sed to me once, Preacher, dont you kno dat God is to good to punish His own chilun. Mah friens, all ob de inventions dat Ah has set forth cant hab but one source, an dat is de evil spirit or de debil. It stans him in han to keep men inventin dese difrunt doctries so dat da wont hear de gospel an accept Christ an be sabed. Sinner let me ax you dis question, do you feel lak you is good nuff jes lak you is to go to heben? If so, please tell me why Jesus come to dis earth an suffered an bled an died? Wuz it not to redeem men fum under de curse ob sin? Can you explain to me why de Gospel mus be preached to all men? Can you tell me why some men try to please God wid their lives an some dont?

It seems to me dat all men wood be jes lak you, an wouldnt need no Bible an evy body wood drink an cuss an lie an steal. Oh mah friens, let me beg you to stop inventin ways to try to satisfy dat longin in your heart, an hear de gospel ob de son ob God an put yoah trust in Him stid ob dese inventions ob men. Ah will now close. Ah thank you all fur de tention you gib me. Now stan an be dismis.

THE BICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION IN ENGLAND

From England, the country whose king George Washington once opposed, have come official reports to the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission of sincere tributes to the memory of the first president of the United States as part of the celebation of the Two Hundreth Anniversary of his birth—a celebration which has found enthusiastic participants in sixty-seven countries, uniting the world in the greatest observance ever held in honor of a national hero.

Among the most interested of the English participants in the celebration are the people of the town of Washington, County Durham. These people are so proud of their connection with the Washington family that they are using every means at their command to honor George Washington.

It was in the town of Washington that the Washington family had its origin in 1183 when William de Hertburn came into possession of lands in that village. Following the custom of the time Hertburn took the name of his new estate, then spelled Wessyngton, and became the founder of the Washington family.

Through the activity of Frederick N. Hill, headmaster of Washington Biddick School, many Bicentennial features have been carried out in the town and vicinity. Mr. Hill has delivered several lectures on Washington based on material published by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission. George Washngton portraits, also supplied by the United States Commission, have been framed and placed in public buildings in the town, including the public library, the parish church, the George Washington Lodge, Ltd., and several schools and other prominent buildings.

Mr. Hill, who is also historian, is publishing a booklet giving the history of the town and tracing George Washington's descent from original Washingtons.

School children in the town of Washington wear on their caps the Washington crest, which is the same as George Washington's seal. The device also hangs over the door of the Urban District Council Office and is used on the Urban District ambulance.

A suggestion, now under consideration, was made by Mr. Hill and William F. Doty, American consul at Newcastlelon-Tyne, that five schools in Washington, D. C., and five schools in the town of Washington exchange British and American flags.

Mr. Doty also reports that a special Bicentennial program was held in the Stoll Theater in Newcastle at which Sir Thimas Oliver, noted British scientist, presided. The Reverend Herbert Barnes, minister of the Church of the Divine Unity, deliverd a lecture on George Washington which received favorable comment in the press. In his lecture, Reverend Barnes pointed out that is was time to regard George Washington "not as a rebel against the British Crown, but as a deliverer of vast millions of mankind."

Authentic information that in 1930 the United States government collected $73,000,000 taxes on playing cards. This exceeded $6,000,000 per month. The tax on tobacco brought $450,000,000 in 1930.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture estimates that approximately 900,000 boys and girls are now enrolled in 4-H club work, in the United States. This total is a slight increase over 1931.

Believing that they had "too much coffee" the people of Brazil have destroyed large quantities to get it out of the way. It is a strange fact that there is distress in the world when there is an abundance of products which people want.

Uncle Pink Jones and son, Alphus, of Corinth, were visitors to Clanton last Saturday. They paid The Banner a visit while here.

HOW TO MAKE GOOD FRUIT JUICES IS TOLD

Auburn, Ala., July 7.—Fruit juices properly made are delicious and wholesome drinks and they are excellent for use in congealed desserts, puddings, sauces, ice cream and sherberts. If bottled without any sugar, the juices are useful for making jelly when needed. This method for making jelly eliminates tartrate crystals which form after the jelly has stood a long time.

Good fruits from which these juices are made are grapes, blackberries, strawberries and other friuts. On how to make the juices, Miss Helen Kennedy, extension nutritionist, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, recommended the following.

Select sound, ripe fruit.

Wash in cold water, drain well, crush, and heat slowly to simmering point (about 165 degrees F.) and hold at that temperature until berries are soft.

Strain through a double thickness of cheese cloth.

Let stand in a cool place for a few hours until sediment settles to bottom. Then pour off carefully from the dregs.

Pour the warm juice into scalded bottles, put scalded stoppers in slightly, set bottles on a rack in the water bath, and process for 30 minutes at simmering point.

Remove from the bath, tighten the stopper, and when the bottles cool, dip the tops into meltd paraffin or sealing wax.

Foursquare Church

(F. E. Clements)
Pastor

When we read that Russians were massacred when trying to worship God, it makes us stop and think what a privileged people we are, to be able to worship God after the dictates of our own hearts. Those people, hearing the church bells on the Roumania side, came to the river edge to hear them better, and getting down upon their knees to pray, were shot down by machine guns by order of the Soviet commander.

Let us lay hold upon our privileges and come out to church that we may receive strength and inspiration as we worship God together.

LYNCHING RECORD FOR THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1932

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, I find that there were 5 lynchings in the first six months of 1932. This number is the same as the number 5 for the first six months of 1931. In 1922,, that is ten years ago, there were 30 persons lynched in the first six moths of the year.

During the first six months of 1932 there were 13 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Of these 2 were in northern and western states and 11 in southern states. In 9 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented; in the 4 other instances force was used to repel the would be lynchers; thus a total of 18 persons, 5 whites and 13 negroes, were saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the persons lynched 2 were white and 3 were negroes. The offenses charged were attempted rape, 1; rape, 1; murder, 1; threatening men, 1; dynamiting a store, 1.

The state in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Florida, 1; Kansas, 1; Ohio, 1; Texas, 1.

Everybody that are interested in farming come. There will be no admission.

The Department of Commerce announced on June 15 that the United States had a favorable foreign trade balance of approximately $20,000,000 during May. Exports were $132,000,000; imports $112,000,000. During the same month in 1931 exports were $203,970,000; imports $179,694,000.

During May of this year 501,000 bales of cotton were exported from the United States, a decrease of 44,000 bales from April but an increase of 165,000 bales over May, 1931. Cotton exports during the first five months of 1932 aggregated 3,863,000 bales, an increase of 1,564,000 bales over the corresponding five months of 1931.

BUY TIRES BEFORE PRICES GO HIGHER FIRESTONE URGES

Car owners of this city were strongly urged today by Mr. G. M. Wyatt, of the Woco Service Station, local Firestone dealers, to buy tires now in preparation of their mid-summer automobile trips.

"There is no reason this year," said Mr. Wyatt, "why anyone should risk spoiling his vacation enjoyment by driving on worn unsafe tires. Motorists now have a wonderful opportunity to equip their automobiles with new tires at the lowest prices in history. Wih an excise tax on tires and tubes effective on June 21, it is unlikely that the chance to buy at the prevailing low prices will continue much longer.

With the summer season on hand and with an eventual increase in price inevitable, no one should miss this unusual opportunity. The pleasure you derive from a motoring trip depends on your tires. It is the unwisest economy to mar your whole day through tire failure. The money saved in trying to squeeze the last few miles out of a tire is insignificant compared with the expense and worry of an accident, with possible injury to the motorist and his family, as a result of smooth or worn tires failing to stop the car in an emergency.

"In addition to the present low cost of tires, values have been greatly increased. In Firestone tires, the gum-dipped cords, two extra gum-dipped cord plies under the tread and the extra tough, slow wearing non-skind tread give the motorist the lowest cost per mile in history. These are construction features found in no other make of tire."

REVIVALS TO BE HELD

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space for an announcement regarding revivals at the following places, of which I am pastor:

First I want to correct a mistake of the correspondent from Refuge in last week's paper in regard to the revival at Maple Springs, which read that the revival would begin the frist Sunday in August. It should have read the second Sunday in August. The pastor will do the preaching.

As you doubtless noticed the revival will begin the fourth Sunday in July at Refuge. Rev. J. W. Jones of Thorsby will do the preaching here.

Also the revival will begin at Pates Chapel the fifth Sunday in July with Rev. E. A. Norris in charge. Watch the Banner for further announcements.—M. Lockhart, pastor.

LUTHER T. GRANT WILL TEACH SINGING SCHOOL AT COOPERS

Prof. Luther T. Grant will begin a three weeks singing school at Chestnut Creek church, Coopers, on Monday, July 11th. About half a hundred have already signed up to attend. Prof. Grant says that a number from Verbena will attend this school, and the prospects generally are that it will be one of the best schools ever taught in that part of the county.

Prof. Grant is a very competent teacher, as is known by singers all over Chilton County. He has been teaching for the past ten or fifteen years, and has a record of being especially good on discipilining a school. He asks for the wholehearted co-operation of the people near Coopers, as well as all from other parts of the county who can arrange to attend.

On August 1st, Prof. Grant will begin a school at Big Springs in Autauga County. Arrangements have been made gor a good sized school at that place.

Tuition at these schools will be 10 cents, 12½ cents, 15 cents and 17½ cents per day per pupil.

JOHN CRAWFORD SEES LARGE CROWD OF PEOPLE TRAVELING

John Crawford, negro, formerly of Lomax but now living in Clanton, asks The Uunion-Banner to tell its readers of another very plain vision that he has had. He says that it is God's way of warning his people. In the vision he said he saw a tremendous crowd of people, whites, blacks, women and children, all traveling. Just a short distance off they came to a high mountain that they could not get over. Some tried to climb over, but they went up a short way and had to come back down.

John says that this is a message from God to His people, and he wants the people to read their Bibles and try to figure out what it all means. He wishes to emphasize the fact that the mountain was only a short distance away; therefore he says that it will not be long before God will deal mightily with His people in some way.

Central Singing Society

No singing was held last Sunday afternoon at Concord on account of the funeral at Walnut Creek. The meeting place next Sunday afternoon is Providence. The last singing at Providence was the fourth Sunday in May, the annual all day singing; the society has not met there since the second Sunday in March. The singers of this section are cordially invited to attend next Sunday afternoon.

ALL DAY SINGING

There will be an all day singing at Freeman Schoolhouse on the first Sunday in July in the sacred harp and Christian Harmony books. Several visiting singers are expected. Everybody is urged to come and bring your books and plenty of dinner. This place is about seven miles West of Jemison on the Maplesville and Montevallo road.

NEW SALEM

This community is well blessed with rain each day.

Friends are sorry to know Miss Ruth Kate Maddox was carried to the Central Alabama Hospital Sunday afternoon and was operated on for appendicitis. She is doing nicely at the present. All relatives who do not know this are welcomed at the hospital.

We thank the friends of this community for their kindness to us. We hope Ruth will soon recover and be at home again soon.—Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Maddox.

IN MEMORY OF MY FATHER MR. JAS. R. MIMS

On Saturday, June 25th, God saw fit to carry away our beloved father. We don't understand why God called him away. God knew he was too good and sweet to stay in this sinful world. We miss him so much, it seems almost more than we can bear, although we know that we can meet him in a better home some day.

He was carried to the hospital in Montgomery Saturday, June 4th. Everything was done that loving hands could do.

It is so lonesome here,
Without my daddy dear.
I'm living to meet him,
In that home up there.

Mrs. Clyde Wright.

Mrs. W. Z. Hodges and son, William, spent the recent holiday in Tuscaloosa with Mr. Hodges, who is attending school at the University of Alabama.

EBENEZER—STANTON

To the members of the Stanton Baptist Church and to those of the community; I am writing to remind you that our revival begins next Sunday, July 10. Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the first Baptist church Clanton, will do the preaching. I just wish to say this about him, he is a man of God, full of the Holy Spirit, his heart full of love for the lost and for Saints and throughly furnished in every good work. In one sense these words are useless as most of the people of Chilton County have long since learned to know and love him. You will miss a treat and a blessing if you do not hear every message he brings.

Now it has been raining very much and you may be in the grass, but let me give this advice; get up early and work in the field till about nine or nine-thirty then quit and get to church. Then in the afternoon, you can go back and work about three hours and back to service at night. Anything else that you see you can do to help the meeting, I am sure you will do. Pray for the meeting and plan to do some personal work for the Master.

Dan. 12:3 says; "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." Christ won the majority of the desciples to Himself through personal contact and expects us to use that method as well as preaching the Gospel.

Come to the meeting and invite your friends and let no excuse get in your way.—G. G. Williams, pastor.

Thorsby base ball team played Calera Saturday afternoon, on Thorsby grounds and were beaten 6 to 0. Monday afternoon Jemison team came to Thorsby and played our home team. Thorsby defeated them 1 to 0. A second game was rained out. On both days there was a good crowd of rooters.

The Congrgegational church and Sunday school picnic held last Friday on the Martin Peterson place was as well attended as could be expected, considering weather conditions. About forty people were in attendance. Considerable work had been done to prepare the grounds and the site was ideal for a good weather gathering. By the time all had gathered, heavy clouds and rolling thunder warned safety in flight. A hasty retreat was made to shelter at the Peterson home, where a good time was enjoyed and the dinner eaten in peace, despite a heavy shower. By the time people were ready to go home the sun had come out and nature was smiling.

Thorsby people had been anticipating enjoyment of the usual fourth of July picnic, community picnic, under the auspices of the Lutheran church and Sunday school, on the grounds of Conrad Carlson, half a mile north of town. Although the skies were dark and threatening, upwards of fifty were on the grounds before noon. Just as dinner had been put on the plates a torrent of rain came down. The people clinging to their eats, scrambled into closed cars and the ice cream booth, or any place that offered some shelter. One good lady took refuge under one of the tables, others seeing her plight hastened with raincoats to fetch her to better quarters. All enjoyed it, or were disposed to make the best of it anyway.

GOOD DAY HAD AT COOPER

The day started off with a good attendance. Everyone came with the spirit of celebrating. A nice ball game led the morning activities with the Verbena orchestra playing at intervals. Both were enjoyed by everyone present. Cooper played Prattville in the morning. The score was 5 to 1 in favor of the former team. After the ball game was over the barbecue was sold for 25 cents per plate. While this was going on a rain scattered everyone for a short time, but they came back with the determination to have a good time. The first game in the afternoon was between Prattville and Titus, the former winning 8 to 2. Cooper played the winner and was defeated 5 to 1. All players were satisfied with the decisions of the umpires. Local team and also the visitors showed clean sportsmanship throughout the day. Dinner was servied to the local and visiting teams.

We want to thank every one for the donations in any way, both small and large. We feel that without these donations that this could not have been a success. We also want to thank the crowd for the nice order. The ones that worked in the stands that day also deserves credit for their untiring help.

The proceeds of this picnic were for the benefit of the ball club. This is only for buying equipment for the club. We also want to thank every one again for their cooperation.—Cooper Ball Club, W. H. Thornton manager; L. A. Calloway, Sec'y-Treas.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert)

The beginning of a long and hard political campaign is at hand. Every four years, under the provisions of our constitution, it is necessary for the people of the United States to choose a leader for the ensuing four years. With the great political conventions over, the campaign will soon be under way. For many years it has been an economic axiom that presidential campaigns were always bad for business, and we approach the campaign months with some doubt and uncertainty even in the times of prosperity. But this year the country is already in a depression in which we seem to have reached the bottom, so that it is barely possible that the usual situation will be reversed and that the presidential cmapaign year may see the beginning of better times again.

We have had all sorts of independent political movements, almost from the beginning of the government, but every four years there comes to us a fresh realization of the necessity of political parties. Without them our government could not function in the way it was intended to function. There have been two great political parties ever since the foundation of the government, and we have gotten along pretty well and made fair progress since 1787. Even our enemies admit that. It is to be hoped and expected that we will continue the two party system, and not adopt the European type in which many blocs of voters with divergent ideas, are represented by political organizations, with the result that often many little parties must combine to form a government. The inevitable result of such a system in times of stress is a dictatorship.

Now for political parties to function properly there must be close and efficient organization, and the perfection of such organization must mean efficient and inspiring leadership. For it is vitally necessary, even in a free government like our own, that we have courageous, wise and patriotic leaders around whom the adherents of the various parties may assemble. Real leadership is one of the necessities of the hour. Republicans from each of the forty-eight states assembled in Chicago, chose by unanimous judgement, to pledge their faith in their leader of four years ago. Since 1928 we have been engulfed, as have all other nations in a world-wide depression, but the rank and file of the Republican party has approved the constructive efforts of President Hoover to alleviate conditions and return the nation to stability and for that reason, through their assembled delegates have selected him as their leader in the allimportant campaign of 1932.

Since the Democratic candidate has been selected we will hear more and more about leadership and it is well that this is so, because after all a party must be judged by the leadership it selects as well as the principles for which it stands. For principles must be written into action to become effective and this can only be done by wise and effective leadership.

Will H. Hays well summed up the case for the Republicans in a speech in the State Convention of the party at Indianapolis when he said:

"There must be leaders, of course, in whom we have confidence and to whom we give our earnest and enthusiastic support. Otherwise an army is a mere mob. A political party without a leader is a mere masquerade, but the very essence of democracy is citizen cooperation, not unfair, unwise and destructive criticism. President Hoover has the unflagging constancy of an honest heart. He recognizes the resources of wealth and sincerely regards the necessities of the needy. He knows no latitude, no longtitude in his tireless efforts to help every man, woman and child in this country. No political position, no piled up wealth, no social station reaches a higher plane than the one upon which our president stands by virtue of his humanity."

There are seventeen political parties in the French Chamber of Deputies but they don't all have to hold national conventions.

Mexico was rocked by a violent earthquake last week. Maybe their Congress has been trying to balance the budget, too.

WATCH THE TAXES

Up to this time we have had deflation in everything except the cost of government in America and the resulting taxation. Of course, as everyone knows, taxes are now mounting because of the falling off of the federal revenues, and higher income tax rates and nuisance taxes will be necessary until there are added revenues resulting for a resumption of normal conditions.

It is obvious that there can be no real permanent improvement in America until taxes can be reduced, and that the only way taxes can be reduced is through a lessening in the expenses of government. The one beautiful sign everywhere is that the people are becoming outspoken in their opposition to new government ventures at this time. Governments everywhere, state and local, as well as the national government, are being importuned to reduce their costs of administration, and if people who are protesting will only translate their criticism into votes next fall, there will be some real reductions in the cost of government before many months.

In fact in many states and many communities geunine efforts are now being made by officials to reduce the cost of government. It is not to be forgotten after all, that most of the tax burden shouldered by the ordinary man comes to him from his local government, and it is here that the real tax reform can commence. The federal government is always under the watchful eye of political leaders and the newspapers of the country, and is the first to reduce taxes when the opportunity arises. But it is so easy to forget about the real burden of taxation—the local taxes—and to focus one's attention on the tax debates in Congress.

If there could be some assurance that lower taxes would be the order of the day during the next decade, this in itself would bring the assurance of better times. In the future the community which is efficiently managed and has therefore a low tax rate, is the one which is going to attract new industries.

LESS SPENDING, NOT MORE REVENUE

While the newspapers of all parties and no parties, and men and women in all stations of life up and down he land are demanding that the Congress reduce the expenses of government by at least a billion dollars a year, why do those in charge of this government spend all their time trying to find new ways of raising revenue? We might not need to find many new ways to do this if we were to cut our expenses to meet the revenue we have.

The people are distinctly opposed to being milked further and they are just as distinctly in favor of reducing expenses so that the milking process need not be extended.

Figures show that the cost of government in the United States—meaning the cost of all kinds of govenment—amounted to 17 per cent of our entire national income last year and statisticians say that this year the cost may be as much as 23 per cent. In other words, the average man will be working nearly one-fourth of his time in 1932 to support the government with its tens of thousands of idlers and wastrels and will defeat him next fall if he does not. its unnecessary agencies of one kind and another.

Of course the federal budget must be balanced, but that can be easily done if we first reduce the budget to the legitimate needs of the country. Our governments need to spend less rather than to collect more.

It is stated with some show of authority that the federal government alone has been spending $5,000 a minute in the last year in excess of its income, and some states and cities have been doing the same thing proportionately. It the national government will lack two and a half billion dollars this year of being able to pay its debts, the fault is largely in the unnecessary spending, not altogether in a lack of revenue.

Citizens have a duty to perform in this crisis. They can demand of every candidate for every office that spends public money, which means all of them, that he take a stand in favor of reducing the expenses of government, under the threat that the voters

It's time to quit trying to lift ourselves nnnnnnnnnnnnn kigthr-n Boama WaoScrdn by our bootstraps, time to quit employing stimulants for business and give it a remment, to some new form of taxes, not the edy. That remedy is lower costs of gover- trying out of some pet theory like that of the farm board which has cost the government a half billion dollars while the farmer's condition was gradually becoming worse.

The American railroads have reduced their operating expense 40 per cent since 1929. Had the governments of this country done the same thing we would not now be worrying about new tax laws and balancing budgets without sufficient funds.

With Manager John McGraw, of the New York Giants retiring at the age of 59 it makes those of us who can remember when he played third base for the old Orioles, begin to feel a little aged.

It is said that the baseball team which is ahead on July 4th in the league standing nearly always wins the penant. The same thing is not true, however of politicians.

The way those Europeans want us to saddle the expense of the World War would almost make one think that Uncle Sam started it all.

Well, anyway, since the depression started, a lot of parents are staying home long enough for their children to learn what they look like.

Now that the French and the Dutch and the Swiss have taken home all their gold, let's see how long they can keep it.

MORAL ECHOES

(By D. W. Haskew)

Two salaried men stopped at the cold drink stand and discussed together the way they spent their income. Tom asked his pal, "Sam, how do you spend your salary?" "Well let me see," said Sam, "I spend about 40 per cent for my car and gas to run it, I spend 25 per cent for cold drinks cigars cigarettes and sweets, then I spend 20 per cent for the picture shows, ball games and golf, I spend 30 per cent for food and clothing, and then I blow in about 20 per cent more." "You are crazy," replied Tom, after having added up his expenditures. "You only get 100 per cent and here you have an expense of 135 per cent. How can you spend more than you get?" "That is the sadness of those who sell me," replied Sam, as he smiled over his brightness. That is the tragedy of these hard times. Like Sam, we are spending more than we make. There is no relief in sight until we learn how to live within our income. Most young people are running on the theory that the world has an opening for them and when they try hard to find it they are heard to lament, "I am in a hole now."

A noble layman was standing on the steps of the church door talking to his pastor. The day had been hard and discouraging and pastor and official were with their backs to the wall. After a moment of silence the layman said, "Pastor, I am discouraged, you are discouraged, but there is nothing left for us to do but keep on keeping on." That layman was right. We are down below the valley in every nook of life. In every direction that we look there are walls and mountain peaks. There seems to be no help for the widow's son, but this is no time to lose heart. Our churches may be depleted, charity revenue cut off, society may be corrupt and politics may be rotten to the center, but still there was never a time when we need more real men and women than today. For the next three years things are not going to be as we would have them, but we must be real men and women and "Keep on a keeping on."

A funeral was being held in a country church and the preacher was telling one by one the character elements of the deceased. He was represented as a devoted husband, a loving father, a good citizen and a devoted church member. Just before the preacher reached the climax in having the man in the casket walk home to God, an unshaved man, clad in overalls, arose from his seat in the back of the church and deliberately stalked down the aisle toward the stand. The preacher thinking that he had left something unsaid that should have been spoken, paused in his oration and said to the man as he peered into the face of the dead: "Friend, is there anything special that you wanted to say?" "Naw," replied the man, "I decided from what you said we were burying the wrong man and I wanted to see for myself." That fellow had lived as a neighbor to the man in the casket and he knew that the funeral oration contradicted the life of the one who was dead. A man's life is his funeral oration and it is so foolish for a preacher to contradict a life record. The safe plan is to let the dead speak for themselves. The language of the life is the only voice that should be heard in a funral oration.

Two negro men were sitting on a saw log waiting for the coming of the truck. They were handling weighty matters from the tip of their tongues. The government came in for its share of philosophy. One remarked, "Dis government am mighty slack dese days. It am turning its men loose like Texas mustangs. Why don't Uncle Sam take us up and feed us like he should?" The other negro replied, "Dare you am, Mose, you be just like de odder trash, you think dat the government am due you a living. You better get dat out of your noggin. De government am due you nuthin but protection. If you wants to chew bread get out and make it." The negro had the correct philosophy of life. It is alarming to see how many people today who are possessed with the idea that the government owes them a living. They go to Washington in droves and camp there for weeks at a time clamoring for a "hand out" when they should be at home working for a living. There are thousands of vacant acres under the dominion of the stars and stripes that are calling for willing hands to turn the soil. These blistering acres are ready to make bread for all if willing hands will work for a living.

I was pestered with a family of mice. They had no regard for my things. They made free use of their teeth and feet and in self defense I set a trap. On the trigger of the trap I placed an attractive bait. Along came a little mouse and he took the bait and my trap took the mouse. I baited again and another little mouse came along and took the bait and again my trap took the mouse. The simple little things kept taking my bait and my trap kept taking the mice until until all the mice had been taken. It is an easy matter to understand the devil's methods. He baits his trap with an attractive bait, and along comes the one for whom it is set. He takes the bait and the trap takes the man. The devil baited his trap with gold and beautiful garments and Achan took the bait and the trap took Achan. The devil baits his trap with whiskey, you take the whiskey and the whiskey takes you. The devil's trap is baited with pleasure, you take the pleasure and the trap takes you.

WRESTLERS

Over in Turkey they claim to have a wrestler who is 115 years old, but you can't stop a wrestler from faking even his age.

Some inventor could make himself a fortune by designing a political plank which is dry on one side and wet on the other.

Remember the old fashioned mother who wouldn't permit her daughter to use face powder or to play rag time on the piano?

One of our friends who went to a burlesque show the other night tells us that the chorus girls wear just as much now as they did when times were prosperous.

The Turkish government was able to borrow $15,520,000 the other day. Bet they didn't get it from our banker.

THE COOPERATIVE MOVEMENT GOES FORWARD

Farm Cooperatives have shown remarkable strength and stability during a period of almost unprecedented stress.

Since 1928, in spite of the collapse of prices and markets, the 11,400 farmer-owned cooperatives in the country have increased their total business $100,000,000. The number of cooperatives has increased to about 12,000 and less than 80 failed. There has been a total membership gain of 150,000 in the last six months.

Here is a definite hope for the farmer. Apparently the depression has given him a new realization of the value of the cooperative. If that is true, hard times will not have been in vain. They will have been the driving power that prepared hundreds of thousands of farmers for sound prosperity and a stable business in the future.

It cannot too often be repeated that the success of the cooperative movement lies in the loyalty of individual members. No cooperative, no matter how strong, can survive unless the bulk of farmers in its territory work for the common good. Every member must back up his cooperative and must do his best to bring his neighbors. It he does that, the farmer's tomorrow will be bright indeed.

The MAN in the MOON

Looks Over All—
Overlooks None.

All The World's A Stage

What a time our Democratic friends had at the Democratic National Convention at Chicago last week. They realized that there was a chance to yell and rip just as much as they pleased, since everybody else was doing it, and they proceeded to make the most of it. How they did howl. Listening in, by radio, I could get a pretty good picture of the wild disorder. They howled for Roosevelt, they howled for Smith, for Garner, for beer, for anything they could think of. Shakespeare said "All the world's a stage," and those poor old Demmies surely made the most of their big act. The chairman begged for order, Mayor Cermak of Chicago begged for order, other notables begged, pleaded, appealed, and then begged again, all with the same result—only exhaustion and lack of something new to howl for finnally got them quiet enough to have the roll call. And then they nominated Roosevelt. I suppose they hoped by that charmed name to arouse some belief that Franklin D. Roosevelt might have enough of the "Teddy" Roosevelt blood in him to bring things to pass. Sad to say, though, they are alike in name only. Well, all we can do is just hitch up the same old steam roller to old Jumbo, and flatten them out again this fall. We've told 'em—now we'll show 'em.

How Does It Look?

How do you like the looks of the list of candidates we have in the field this time? If you haven't done so, already, stop reading long enough to look over under the mast head and read the list. How does it look? Pretty good? Atta boy! Now, let's all get behind every last one of them and put them over the top in grand style. They have all stood firm and true to the Republican party of Chilton County in days past, and, so, have a right to expect the party to stand by them in their fight this year. Let's go!

Moths Around A Blaze

Did you ever sit and watch a moth or a bug as he buzzed around a lamp, trying to get to what he thought was something he wanted. These disgruntled fellows leaping the fence to the Democratic party made me think of that. They buzz and buzz all around, hunting a hole t oslip in by. After a while they get in. And into what? From the outside everything looked pretty and bright inside. Very inviting. But once they are in there, the business of keeping cool keeps them too busy for them to have time to enjoy the scenery, even if it were delightful. First off, they get their wings singed, then their heads, hard as they are, begin to get all hot and everything, and, pretty soon they keel over and die. If you are wise, you'll take a lesson from the moth and stay on the safe, cool side of the glass. Remember, once you're inside, more than apt you'll get something you did not see from the outside—something unpleasant.

Victory In The Air

The Montgomery Journal of the issue of July 4th carries a big, long-winded article headed "Victory In the Air," and goes on to tell how they have the presidential race all sewed up. If they have a victory anywhere it must be in the air—and "hot air" at that. Poor fellows. They're forever having victories "in the air," but for some reason they never light in fair territory. If they ever light at all, it must be away out where nobody ever hears of it. This will be just another "victory in the air."

Something New

Mooched around down by Calloway Drug Co., recently and there was Joe—pardon me, please—Dr. Calloway, all dressed up in his overalls and arranging his spirits of this and that all over his shelves in the rear of the drug store. Oh yes. It's "Dr." Calloway now. Joe has passed the examfnation required, and is a full-fleged pharmacist, now.

Not Much Doing

Every once in a while there comes a week when it seems everything tries to happen at once. And then there are other times when it seems I'll never find enough to fill this old column. This week is one of the last-named flavor. What with nothing much of interest happening on the glorious Fourth, and these long, hot days being so good for sleeping purposes, and one thing and another, things in general are pretty dull. Here's hoping for the time to roll around when we can get down on the firing line in earnest, adjust our peep sights and begin our barrage on the enemy's lines, follow up with a bombardment of heavy artillery, and then "over the top" when zero hour comes in November. 'Nuf sed-until next week.—Man in the Moon.

The Man on the Corner

and Some He Saw Not.

Here To Get Information

Ex-Sheriff John L. Gore, of Beat 12, was in Clanton Tuesday. He spent part of the day in Lewis Easterling's office at the courthouse. It looked natural to see Mr. Gore in the old gang swapping yarns and having a jolly good time. He said he came down to get some information. I did not inquire what kind of inormation he was seeking, but I am sure he got it all right, if he stayed any length of time on the front steps of the Courthouse.

Dr. H. G. Williams Here

Dr. Horace Greely Williams, of Birmingham, was here this week taking a part on the program of the Unity-Chilton Institute at the Clanton Baptist Church. Dr. Williams is one of the prominent Baptist preachers of Alabama. He is a native Chilton county man, whom we knew years ago as "Greil" Williams, the schoolboy. From his early days as a youth he has been a preachre. He used to preach to us at the old Clanton High School. Many a morning before school took in he got his Bible, read a chapter, and preached the students a sermon from the front steps of the schoolhouse before the teachers arrived.

An Unfortunate Occurrence

The incidents that brought about the death of Bill Franklin last Saturday cast a pall of sorrow over many a friend of this good man. Mr. Franklin was a man of quiet, peaceable nature. He did not have an enemy in the world. He had no children of his own. He and his wife had devoted their lives to making a home for the orphan child of Mrs. Franklin's sister. The father of the child came to take it away from them. Mr. Franklin wanted to keep the child, which everybody recognizes was the best thing for the child's future. The father, in a fit of madness, struck Mr. Franklin, grabbed him by the head while he was unconscious, and broke his neck. The life of a good man was taken to pay the price of a foolish notion that got into the head of another.

This was Quick Work

A burglar was apprehended last Sunday as he was entering the home of Mr. John Parrish. A bit of cool calculation on the part of Mrs. W. L. Parrish brought everything into play for the prompt and effectual capture of the thief. Instead of setting up a scream of terror she used her head in a cool and deliberate manner. A car was sent to Concord to notify the men folks, and a telephone call to the Sheriff quickly brought the officers to the scene. In the words of Uncle Lige Parrish, "In ten minutes there was a hundred men, a squad of officers, and no telling how many women all over the place. Mr. Burglar was overhauled and in jail before you could say scat."

Opening Veterans Hospital

The new Veterans Hospital at Tuscaloosa (which Glenn Boyd and I will always contend ought to have been at Clanton) was dedicated this week. The dedication was under the auspices of the American Legion and the Legion Auxiliary, in conjunction with the Veterans Bureau. It was a momentous occasion attended by many of the leading public men and women of Alabama. A delegation from the Chilton County units of the Legion and the Auxiliary, headed by Post Commander, R. D. Woodson, attended the festivities.

For the Storm Sufferers

Saturday afternoon there will be a "shower" at Union Grove for the benefit of the storm sufferers in that community. The event has been sponsored by Mrs. Shaw, who was Carrie Dorminey, daughter of the famous Governor of Stumps Hills, T. J. Dorminey. Everybody has been invited to come and bring some novelty that will be useful in the homes that have been rebuilt for those people by the Red Cross. Mrs. Shaw points out that the Red Cross has very graciously provided the homes and the actual necessities, but they could not provide any of those little novelties that transform bare walls into attractive places to live. The idea is a good one, and I look for it to receive the hearty response of a great many people of Chilton County.

Permanent Road Building

The program of the Commissioners Court to begin construction of some permanent roads in Chilton County, in my opinion, is a sound policy, and altogether justifiable in view of many circumstances which could be mentioned. The Lay Dam Road is the most logical place to start this program for many reasons. I understand that there is objection to this step being taken by the commissioners. Naturally there would be. There is always objection to the inaugural of any policy or program that carries the weight of importance to the future welfare of a people. But if we did not have men who are able to see something of the needs of the future and begin at the right time to build for those needs, we would never make any substantial progress. I hope those who may raise objection to this step on the part of the Commissioners will first lay their minds open to see the reasonableness and far-reaching importance of this program.

Best Time of His Life

"I had the best time of my life this Fourth of July," said J. G. Newton, of Mitchell Dam, Tuesday. "There are nine of us children in my father's family. We have been scattered all over the country for a long time. Monday eight of the nine, with our families, gathered at the old home place at Slocomb, for a Fourth of July family reunion. It was indeed the most enjoyable occasion of my life."

Lots of Rain These Days

There has been an unusual amount of rain in this section of Alabama during this summer. Particularly in the last few weeks it has rained somewhere close around every day. I don't know what the statistics will show, but it seems to me there has been more rain here this summer than in the last three summers all put to gether. The daily rains of the past two weeks have doubtless "laid by" many crops for the farmers.

POOR OR

A Trip to North Carolina

(By Mrs. Hattie M. Gerald)

We, including Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Moody of Birmingham, Mrs. Janie Sutlive, Miss Mary Ella Gerald and I left Demorest, Ga., at 7:30 a.m., on Tuesday, June 26 for a trip to Asheville, N. C.

We started north and the first place of interest was Tallulah Falls, Ga. The Georgia Power Co., gets a large part of its power in this section of the country from these falls. The power plant is located down in a deep gorge 600 feet down with an incline of 1,200 feet. The company has a substantial car, run on a cable, operated by electricity, in which the employees go up and down. Any visitors can go down on this car but before starting they have to sign an agreement that if any accident happens they will not hold the company responsible. However, we were assured there was no danger as they have a large emergency cable besides two small ones on which the car is generally operated. Part of our party went down. It takes from five to six minutes to make the descent as they go very slowly. After we arrived at the bottom we were shown through the power house and everything explained to us.

Going on, we passed through Clayton, which is quite a summer resort of North Ga. Crossing the line into North Carolina we passed through Franklin, Sylvia, Waynesville, Junaluska, where there is a beautiful little lake. We arrived at Asheville at 12 m., just in time for lunch, which we enjoyed immensely. We traveled all the way from Demorest to Asheville on paved road with the exception of a mile strip at Tallulah, which remains unpaved because the town can't agree on just where to run this little piece. This mile strip is the only unpaved road between here and Washington and between the St. Lawrence and the Gulf. The paved roads of North Carolina are especially good as people of North Carolina pride themselves on their good roads.

After our good lunch we took in points of interest in Asheville. It's post office is a fine building. We drove out to Grove Park Inn, which is the finest and largest resort hotel in the world. This hotel is built of stone. It has one of the finest pipe organs ever built; all its rooms are sound proof. On the main floor are two immense fire places made of large rocks, one rock of which weighs four tons. The andirons were about four feet high and we were told that some of the logs placed on it took from six to ten men to lift. This inn is surrounded by many acres presenting a panorama of beauty. On it's grounds are a tennis court, swimming pool and other forms of amusements, also industrial mills where they weave woolens and make them into cloths. We drove up around Sunset drive from which a beautiful view is to be seen of the city of Asheville and surrounding country. We also saw from here Mt. Pisgah, the highest mountain in North Carolina. On the left side was a mountainous formation called "the rat" which looked like a rat lying down.

As we were leaving Asheville we passed by the Biltmore estate, which was planned and built by the late George W. Vanderbilt. Leaving Asheville we drove south going through Hendersonville and flat Rock, down through South Carolina, passing through Greenville, Clemson, where Clemson college is located.

Our whole trip up through the mountains was wonderful and we could not but think of how bountifully God has bestowed his beauty on this section of the country which is known as the Great Smoky Mountain National Park.

We drove back into Demorest just as the sun was setting behind Mount Yonah, which seemed an appropriate ending of a perfect day.

I would recommend this country to sightseeing vacationists not only for its beauty but also for its climate. Coming to Demórest June 6th we have not had an uncomfortable hot day.

There are many beautiful drives out from Demorest within a radius of forty miles. Among these are Neel Gap, at an elevation of 3,108 feet, Toccoa falls out from Toccoa, Ga. Here a beautful stream of clear water falls over an almost perpendicular wall of rock on to rocks below. Here is located Toccoa Falls Institute an accredited High school. Tower Mountain, about five miles from Demorest gives one a good view of the country surrounding Demorest, Cornelia, Alto and Baldwin. Twenty-five miles north of Demorest is Lake Rabun, at Lakemont. This lake is noted for its fishing and boating and camping parties. Many beautiful summer and winter homes surround the lake.

CARROLL FAMILY REUNION

On July Fourth at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Carroll all of the children gathered together to enjoy the day. Ice cream and lemonade were served before noon and after noon, about 12 o'clock dinner was served to the following:

Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Carroll, Mrs. D. A. Jacks, mother of Mrs. N. G. Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Messer, and family, Jessie Willie, Grady, Oscar and Alma of Wetumpka. Mr. and Mrs. Elzie Carroll and children, Melba, Jewel, and Voncille of Jemison, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Carroll and children, Earl and Marzelle, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Carroll and children, Fred, Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Wyatt and son, Maurice, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Carroll, Miss Lila Carroll all of Clanton. Mr. Jessie Little of Clanton, Mr. Willie Jacks of Arcadia, La. Mr. and Mrs. George Morris of Clanton, Mr. Neweral Ruff of Wetumpka and Mr. Allen Ruff of Clanton.

This was the first time since the first child, Mrs. G. L. Messer married, for all to unite together. About 4:00 o'clock they all departed for their homes hoping to meet again next year.

Misses Leila Carroll and Jessie Messer are spending a few days with Mrs. I. E. Carroll, near Jemison this week.

All persons interested in the cemetery and yards at Pleasant Grove Methodist church, are asked to meet there on Friday, July 15, for the purpose of cleaning off same.—Rev. G. W. Stewart.

She had just been hired for a job in the circus and she said to the boss:

Is there any particular advice you would like to give me about this work I am starting?

Well, said he, thoughtfully, don't ever undress in front of the bearded lady.

Sandy McPherson was travelling to Glasgow, and on the way he felt thirsty so he took out a bottle and drew the cork. Just as he was about to take a taste, a fellow passenger in clerical garb addressed him:

Excuse me sir, but I'm sixty-five years of age and I have never tasted a drop of whiskey.

Don't worry yourself, said Sandy, you're not going to start now.

Young wife—Now Bill, I want you to go around to the minister and arrange for having the baby christened.

Bill (Shipyard worker) You mean to say you are going to let somebody hit that little thing over the head with a bottle?

Lesson for July 10

THE CALL OF MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 2:11-4:20.
GOLDEN TEXT—And he said, Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Bush on Fire.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Moses Given a Great Task.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Hearing and Heeding God's Call.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Accepting a Great Task.

I. Moses Trained in Midian (2:11-15).

The occasion of his being in the desert was the effort of Pharaoh to slay him when he heard of Moses' act in slaying the Egyptian who was smiting a Hebrew. Having fled from the face of Pharaoh, he took up his abode in the land of the Midianites. He himself needed further discipline for his great work. This he experienced through forty years in the desert.

II. His Marriage to Zipporah (2:16-22).

Soon after his arrival in the Land of Midian he defended the daughters of Reuel, the priest of Midian, against the shepherds, and watered their flock. Out of gratitude for this act Moses was called into the priest's house to eat bread. While dwelling in this house Zipporah, a daughter of the priest, became his wife.

III. The Lord Speaks to Moses at the Burning Bush (3:1-6).

While keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert the Lord appeared to Moses in a vision in a burning bush. Moses stepped aside to behold this strange sight and was taught the lesson of proper approach to God, who revealed himself as the God of his fathers, the covenant God.

IV. Moses Commissioned as the Deliverer of His People (3:7-10).

1. God's active interest in his people (v. 7).

a. "I have seen the affliction of my people." So keenly conscious is God of all that goes on in the world that not one of his chosen ones can be touched without his notice.

b. "I have heard their cries." No cry ever goes up to God from his child unheard.

c. "I know their sorrows." Many indeed are the sorrows of God's children, but he knows all about them and will adapt himself in grace to their need.

2. God's gracious obligation to his people (vv. 8, 9).

a. To deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians.

b. "To bring them up out of the land."

c. "To bring them into a good land and large, into a land flowing with milk and honey."

3. God's commission to Moses (v. 10). This call seems to have been a great surprise to Moses.

V. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (3:11-4:16).

1. His personal unworthiness (v. 11). He said, "Who am I that I should go unto Pharaoh?" He realized his insufficiency for his task. Moses did not refuse to go, but laid his difficulty before the Lord. God answered this difficulty by assuring him that he would be with him.

2. The difficulty of the people to understand Moses' relationship to God (vv. 13, 14). Moses knew how unwilling they were to acknowledge him as their deliverer forty years before. Since God changes his name as he assumes a new relationship to his people, Moses inquired as to what that new relationship would be and his corresponding name. This new name is "I AM." This name is from the Hebrew verb "to be." It indicates:

a. God's self-existence. It sets forth the idea that God is the self-existent one and the source of all existence.

b. His self-sufficiency. He said, "I AM THAT I AM." God is the unique one. He is not dependent upon any other existence.

c. His unchangeableness. "I AM THAT I AM" may be expanded to mean "I am what I always was. What I always was and am, I always will be."

3. Unbelief on the part of the people (4:1-5). This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders.

4. Lack of eloquence (4:10). Moses confessed that he was slow of speech and of a slow tongue. His ability to speak had not been improved since the Lord had spoken to him. This difficulty the Lord in his infinite patience met by providing an assistant in the person of his brother Aaron.

Laughter

Laughter should dimple the cheek, not furrow the brow. A jest should be such that all shall be able to join in the laugh which it occasions; but if it bears hard upon one of the company, like the crack of a string, it makes a stop in the music.—Feltham.

Consider This

BUSINESS SLOW WITH THE SHERIFF'S FORCE

Reports from the Sheriff's office reveal that business was unusually slow in their line for the Fourth of July season. Not a single arrest has been made for violation of the prohibition law during the past week. One man was placed in jail on that charge, but it was an old case where the man had been given up by his bondsman.

One arrest was made for murder; one for assault and battery; one for burglary and grand larceny; one insane person was put in jail.

Four arrests were made for game violations by Warden Lightsey during the past week.

The jail register Wednesday morning showed fourteen prisoners in confinement.

Indians and Salmon—a la Rector

By GEORGE RECTOR
{ World Famous Restaurateur and Daily Food Broadcaster }

A FEW days ago I went into a market in New York to do some of my wife's shopping for her. The manager of the store, who knew that I was interested in anything out of the ordinary in the food line, told me about an extra-special shipment of fresh salmon he had on hand, saying that this salmon was shipped directly from the Quinault Indian Reservation near Tacoma, Washington. What a series of memories he aroused with those words! I had spent much time in and around Tacoma and many were my visits to the Quinault Reservation; many were the delicious meals I had from the salmon caught in the Quinault River.

A friend of mine, a Mr. Hickey, who ran the old Tacoma Hotel, was on excellent terms with these Quinault Indians. He took me out to the reservation where I met all the Chiefs and Braves, and as a token of respect to my friend, who is their friend, they presented me with a freshly caught salmon. And what a salmon! These Indians have exclusive fishing rights in the Quinault River and Lake Quinault, both of which are on their reservation, and the fish caught there, all of the Sockeye variety, belong to them, making the entire Tribe independent and wealthy. The Indians smoke large quantities for their own use and sell the balance to white men, who Can about seventy-five percent and ship the balance to Eastern markets.

These fish "run" from March until July, going up stream to spawn in the Lake, the small fry returning after four years to this particular river, and here is an interesting point. The Quinault Salmon never goes down stream below the reservation; evidently it is just an Indian at heart!

Just because I shanoodize about Quinault salmon doesn't mean that I am not a true admirer of all salmon. Let me tell you, canned salmon, pink or red, lends itself to many delightful and inexpensive dishes

We served salmon in all its delectable variations at RECTOR'S, and, perhaps because I'm growing old, I just haven't the courage to tell you what we charged for those salmon dishes.

"Sauce Vert" adds a delicious touch to canned salmon. Try to get the salmon out of the can in large chunks, then put the sauce over it.

Sauce Vert
(To serve with cold salmon)

5 sprigs parsley
6 spinach leaves
1 small bunch watercress
Few blades chives or few drops onion juice
1 cup mayonnaise

Grind the parsley, spinach, watercress and chives through a food chopper, and then rub through a sieve. Add to the mayonnaise.

Salmon Souffle a la Rector

2½ cups milk
½ cup Mello-Wheat or farina
1 teaspoon salt
1 pound can salmon
3 tablespoons butter
3 eggs

Scald the milk, stir in the Mello-Wheat and salt, and cook for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from the stove and add the salmon which has been picked over and flaked, the butter, and the beaten egg yolks. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of eggs and pour into a greased baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven (325°F.) for 45-50 minutes. Serve with a well-seasoned tomato sauce.

TAYLOR PICNIC GIVEN MONDAY

About 150 Guests Enjoy The Fourth at Camp on Lake Mitchell

The Taylor Wholesale Grocery Company promoted a barbecue and entertainment on Monday, the 4th of July, at their camp on Lake Mitchell. As honor guests for the occasion they numbered about 150 of their friends, composed prominent business men of Wetumpka, Centreville, and Columbiana and others of their business associates and friends in Clanton and throughout Chilton County.

Among the out-of-town visitors were Mr. Leo Brewster, of Centreville, with a party of friends; Mr. J. R. Edwards, of Columbiana, and a number of friends; Mr. Rupert Ingram and Mr. A. A. Culver, of Wetumpka, with a party of friends, including Mr. John A. Lancaster, a prominent Wetumpka banker and business man; Mr. W. J. Billingsley, of Clanton.

Among the local people in attendance upon the occasion are mentioned Dr. J. P. Hayes, Sheriff Walter Gillespie, Dr. Hosea F. Downs, and Mrs. Downs, Rev. M. J. Parrish, Uncle Tom Taylor, father of the Taylor boys, Dr. L. D. Popwell, Jim Dupree, Dr. W. L. Parrish, Mr. L. F. Gerald, attorney, of Clanton, Jesse Baker, G. M. Wyatt.

These, with many others of their family connections and friends, made a total of about 150 persons who greatly enjoyed the feast of barbecued kid, mutton, and chicken, together with all the other fixings necessary for a hungry fourth of July appetite.

A downpour of rain just at noontime considerably marred the pleasure of the guests; but everyone accepted it with good spirits and continued eating and having a good time in spite of the rain.

It was planned after noon to have a Fourth of July address by Hon. Lawrence F. Gerald, and a talk by Rev. M. J. Parrish. This had to be dispensed with on account of the inconvenience caused by the heavy rain.

Everything considered, however, the Taylor Grocery Company is fully deserving the thanks of their many friends for the splendid manner in which they carried out their entertainment. They went to much trouble to provide everything for the convenence of their guests. The only reward they hoped for was the satisfaction and enjoyment of their friends, and we feel sure they are amply repaid in that respect.

BETHSALEM SUNDAY SCHOOL

Our Sunday school was called to order by the superintendent. The subject of the lesson was "The Influence of A Godly Home." After the period of school there was a luncheon served to the ladies by the men. Ice cream and a large table of different kind of food was placed before them.

The men lost out on the six point record system. So this is why they had to serve the ladies. The contest caused the people to work harder than ever.

If we would fix a goal to work forward to we could accomplish more work. Don't forget the singing next Sunday.

Mens heavy blue work shirts are 34 cents each at Jesse Baker's.

El Brendel and Fifi Dorsay score a bouble barreled triumph at the Wadesonian Theatre, where their latest Fox Comedy, "Mr. Lemon of Orange," is showing next Monday and Tuesday, July 11 and 12.

Both of these players in the past have contributed much in the way of comedy to productions in which others had the principal roles. In a picture especially built for them, they are immense.

Brendel essays a "dual" role in this production, and proves that he is able to enact a "straight" character part as well as his customary Swedish dialect performance. He is first and foremost the inoffensive "Mr. Lemon," a toy salesman in a big department store.

Through no fault of his own he is fired. Stumbling homeward, he walks right into the middle of a battle between rival gangsters over a truckload of liquor. And there the fun starts.

Mr. Lemon bears a resemblance to "Silent McGee" gangster chieftain, and is mistaken for the plug ugly by friend as well as foe. Miss Dorsay, whose brother was killed in the melee, invites the supposed "McGee" to her night club where she sings.

Once there, she tries to wrest information from him regarding the hijacked liquor truck, and later seeks to "put him on the spot". Brendel escapes from this precarious position and is one of the funniest scenes this reviewer ever has witnessed.

How he finally outwits both sets of gangsters and wins the high regard of Miss Dorsay provides further hiliarity.

Miss Dorsay is excellent in her characterization of the night club singer, and incidentally puts over a song ,"My Racket is You," in good style.

William Collier, Sr., does an unusually fine job in the role of Brendel's irascible brother-in-law, and adds much to the comedy when he starts in to beat up the hard-boiled "McGee" on the supposition that it is Mr. Lemon.

Ruth Warren, as Brendel's sister, also does good work, as do Donald Dillaway and Joan Castle, who have the juvenile leads.

John G. Blystone directed this picture and has turned out a production that will entertain everyone who sees it.

The story is an original one by Jack Hayes and the dialogue is the collaboration of Eddie Cantor and Edwin Burke. Miss Dorsay's song, is written by James Hanley.

Current Briefs

Critics have unanimously agreed that "Mr. Lemon of Orange," the Fox company co-starring El Brendel and Fifi Dorsay, is a "vertiable laugh riot." It gives both Brendel and Miss Dorsay the best opportunities that they ever have had to display their talent for fun making. Others in the cast include William Collier, Sr., Ruth Warren, Donald Dillaway and Joan Castle. John G. Blystone directed.

If you are a hijacker and the truck load of booze you have just stolen breaks down, call the police department and ask them to help you, This is the novel suggestion of El Brenlel to a gang of hi-jackers comedy. The gangsters have mistaken Brendel for their own leader and hail this suggestion as a great bit of strategy. The results, however, are not so happy.

A person is foolish to live beyond their means, in the opinion of Fifi Dorsay, famous French cemedienne, who is co-starred with El Brendel in Mr. Lemon of Orange. Fifi practices what she preaches and puts a goodly share of her weekly check into gilt edge bonds. "Our earning days are few," says Fifi, "and if we don't save when we're young, we may have a hard time getting along when we are old."

"UNION DEPOT"

The management of the Wadesonian Theatre announces a very fascinating picture on the program for Friday and Saturday of this week. It is a First National production entitled "Union Depot." The stars of the play are Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Blondell.

Mr. Wade says, "This pisture is love, hate, fear, joy, in fact every thrill you have ever known is portrayed with a degree of fascination seldom seen in a talking presentation. This program is an unusual attraction at the usual prices.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

DEMOCRATS PUT ON ROARING SHOW AT CONVENTION

Picked Roosevelt and Garner as Standard Bearers for National Race.

By WRIGHT A. PATTERSON

Chicago.—The democracy of America met in national convention in this city, and, at the end of six days and two nights of strenuous labor, had selected Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York as its candidate for President; Speaker John N. Garner of Texas as its candidate for vice president; adopted a platform, one plank of which provides for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and the immediate modification of the Volstead act to permit the sale of beer and light wines; listened to the speech of acceptance by its candidate for President, and adjourned.

The above paragraph tells the news of the Democratic convention. It tells what was presumably done in the convention hall, but no news paragraph can give the reader a picture of a national political gathering, nor can that picture be painted with only the ingredients found in a convention hall.

Both national conventions of this year consisted of a gathering of 2,308 delegates and alternates; men and women from every state in the Union and from every outlying possession. Quite naturally they felt they were at Chicago representing the sovereign will of their party members in their respective districts, and sat in the convention, in the glare of the spotlights, for that purpose. But of that 2,308 men and women less than one-fourth actually had a voice in deciding what would be done, and the one-fourth diplomatically or sometimes brutally, told the other 1,500 what they would do. A goodly percentage of the 2,308 delegates and alternates did not know just what it was all about.

On the floor of the convention about 90 per cent of the activities was bunk and ballyhoo, noise and hysteria, a useless effort to create sentiment for or against this, that or the other policy, or this that or the other candidate. The other 10 per cent consisted of the ratification of what had been accomplished by the leaders behind closed doors in committee meetings held in hotel rooms. If it were not done in that way a convention would never end, and party government in America would be impossible.

Conventions Much Alike.

That, in brief, is a picture of any national political convention, and it was as true of the Democratic convention as of any other, with the exception that the committees were in no sense unanimous, and there were minority reports presented from practically every one of them on practically every question of policy. In the end, however, the wishes of the majority of each committee were ratified by the majority on the floor.

The ballyhoo of the convention was particularly noticeable, as it always has been, at the time of presenting the names of candidates to the convention. It began shortly before two o'clock Thursday afternoon, continued until the adjournment at six, began again at nine that night and continued without a break until four-thirty Friday morning.

For nominating speeches, of which there were nine—Roosevelt, Smith, Ritchie, Traylor, Garner, White, Byrd, Reed and Murray—20 minutes each was allowed. For seconding speeches, of which there were more than 30, five minutes each was allowed. Following each nominating speech came periods of carefully staged hilarity which was supposed to represent enthusiasm, but which in the majority of cases represented noise prdiuced by the pipe organist with the aid of all the loud pedals on the instrument.

Gallery Always in Evidence.

The exceptions were the demonstrations for Governor Smith and Governor Ritchie. In these demonstrations the unruly gallery gods took a hand and supplemented the noise made by the pipe organ. To the gallery gods these two candidates represented beer, and beer to the galleries was the most important subject before the convention. The demonstration for Roosevelt lasted 45 minutes. Then followed that for Speaker Garner, participated in by the "Gray Mare band" of Dallas and a goodly number of Texans imported for the purpose. Then came the naming of Governor Smith, and pandemonium broke loose in the galleries, as well as with the Smith delegations. They kept it up for one hour and two minutes, the record for the convention. That ended the afternoon. Four hours gone and three of the nine names before the convention.

It began again at nine and through the long weary hours of an all-night session there was speech and ballyhoo, speech and ballyhoo, until four-thirty Friday morning when that part of the job was completed and the roll was called on the first ballot for the party's candidate for President. The result was: Roosevelt, 666¼; Smith, 201¾; Garner, 92¼; White, 52; Traylor, 42½; Byrd, 25; Reed, 24; Murray, 23; Ritchie, 21; Baker, 8½. Mr. Roosevelt lacked 103¾ of the needed two-thirds to secure a nomination. Two more ballots were taken without material change in the result, and then, at eight-thirty in the morning the weary crowd quit until eight-thirty Friday night.

Roosevelt Wins.

Trades were made during Friday. Speaker John Garner was assured of second place on the ticket if his delegates threw their votes to Roosevelt, and the nomination was made on the first ballot taken at the Friday night session, the fourth ballot of the convention, Roosevelt receiving 945 votes, Smith 190½, with 12½ votes scattered between Ritchie, Baker, White and Cox.

The Smith delegations stood loyally by their champion to the end, and there was no motion to make the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt unanimous.

At the Saturday session Speaker John N. Garner was chosen as the party's candidate for vice president. At that session Mr. Roosevelt, who had reached Chicago by plane, was present and was received with tumultuous enthusiasm. He was officially notified of his nomination and made his speech of acceptance.

The convention opened at 12:45—forty-five minutes late—on Monday. The stars of the first performance were National Chairman Raskob, making his last appearance; Commander Evangeline Booth, of the Salvation army, and Senator Barkley, temporary chairman. In his opening address the subtle wit of the national chairman was just a bit over the heads of his audience and did not produce the rip-snorting hilarity characteristic of a Democratic convention. Senator Barkey was more to the liking of the delegates and the audience, and his slaps at the Republicans brought down the house and created the noisy demonstrations that made it look and sound like a Democratic gathering.

The crowd on the opening day was not up to expectations. Chicago did not treat their Democratic guests any better than they had treated the Republicans, and a third of the seats in the Stadium were vacant. But Chicago knew the fireworks would not start the first day.

"Scraps" Not in Evidence.

With the opening of the Tuesday session at 12:50—fifty minutes late—Chicago was all set to witness a real Democratic shindig. There was the promise of a scrap over contested delegations from Louisiana and Minnesota; another over the permanent chairmanship, Walsh vs. Shouse; and a third promised over the two-thirds rule.

But the big Chicago audience that filled every available seat was disappointed. The session did not develop—on the surface—any fights but all the evidence of a Democratic love feast, except for Senator Huey Long's castigation of the "bunch of outlaws" that were contesting the seats of the senator's group of delegates.

To be sure it had not been possible for the committees on credentials and on permanent organization to arrive at unanimous opinions and there were minority reports from both committees brought to the floor of the convention, the vote of the various members of the committees indicating very clearly just where the strength or weakness of the leading candidate lay. In the committees with one vote from each state it was very evident that Governor Roosevelt could control the majority reports of these committees.

The first test came on the seating of the Long delegation from Louisiana, which was instructed for Roosevelt, the contesting delegation being uninstructed.

Long won. The minority report, the adoption of which would have unseated his delegates, was defeated by a vote of 638¾ to 514¼.

At the suggestion of Senator Barkley the oratory had been confined to the Louisiana contest and he also suggested that the convention dispose of that case before the delegates had "perpetrated" upon them the oratory in the Minnesota contest. The speech making in the Minnesota case consisted largely in the orators, and there were several, telling of the virtues of all Minnesota Democrats, only some had more virtues than others, depending upon which delegation they belonged to. The contestants were quite willing to be satisfied with half the honors, and proposed that both delegations be seated, each delegate having half a vote. In the end the contestants were defeated by a vote of 658¼ to 492¾.

Walsh Wields Gavel.

The settling of these contests was followed by what the chairman referred to as the "controversy" over the selection of the permanent chairman. The Roosevelt majority wanted Senator Walsh, the Smith, Ritchie, Reed, White, Murray, etc., etc., minority wanted Jouett Shouse, of Kansas.

JOHN N. GARNER

That "controversy" was productive of eulogistic oratory. Ralph C. O'Neill, of Kansas, eulogized Walsh while talking for Shouse, and J. F. Burns, of South Carolina, eulogized Shouse while talking for Walsh. Then came the former Democratic standard bearer, John W. Davis, who eulogized both Shouse and Walsh, though presumably talking for Shouse. On the roll call Walsh was elected by a vote of 626 to 528. To complete the love feast the elected and the defeated candidates had their pictures taken together on the speakers' platform.

The expected fight over the rules did not materialize, Governor Roosevelt had called a halt on the effort to change the century-old rule of a two-thirds vote to nominate.

Altogether it was a mild affair. No rip-snorting, roaring, Democratic demonstrations; no fistic arguments; no real entertainment for the Chicago audience that had purchased season tickets at prices up to $50; nothing to indicate that it was a Democratic National convention in session.

Wet Chicago went to the convention Wednesday night to help the wet Democratic majority put over its wet plank. It was a roaring, howling, good-natured mob that crashed the gates of the Stadium to the extent of thousands and finally forced the closing of the doors to the exclusion of large numbers who held legitimate tickets of admission.

Genuine Ovation for "Al."

The one outstanding note of Wednesday night's tumultuous session was the reception accorded Governor Smith when he took the platform to speak for the majority liquor plank. He was the hero of the convention, and, regardless of the fact that he will not get their votes, the idol of nine-tenths of the delegates. Despite every effort of the chairman to restore order that the business of the convention might be expedited, the roaring, howling, marching demonstration for "Al" lasted fifteen minutes.

The drys had a hard time. The gallery gods did not want to hear them, and made that fact evident. Despite every possible effort on the part of Senator Walsh, and all of the biting sarcasm he could put into his denunciation of the behavior of the mob, nobody was permitted to hear the speakers supporting the plank presented by the minority. But all of the oratory, whether heard or not, did not change a single delegate vote, and the "dripping wet" plank was adopted by a vote of 934¾ to 213¼.

POOR OR

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

BOLL WEEVIL

Field observations and many letters show that unusually large numbers of boll weevils are present in the cotton fields, in practically all parts of the state. Continued cloudy weather for the next three of four weeks will mean that weevil damage will probably be the greatest in the last fifteen years.

Do not get excited because of this situation. Everyone knows that with five cent cotton it is not wise to spend a large sum of money trying to poisen the weevil.

Picking up squares and burning them will protect cotton some from weevil damage. Such a practice can not do any harm and might be advised where family labor is available.

Those farmers that have an ample supply of calcium arsenate on hand should by all means use it. Start dusting when a ten per cent infestation is found and continue through the season as recommended in normal years. Where only a limited supply of poison can be had, it is advisable to wait until the cotton plants have reached their maximum fruiting stage and then make three applications of poison at four day intervals. In South Alabama the first brood of weevils are starting to come out. Cotton should be fruiting heavily also. Therefore, three or four applications of poison started July 1st might pay. For Central Alabama July 15 will be about right. In the northern part of the state, best results should be obtained by poisoning late in July.

Remember poisoning the boll weevil will not pay big dividends when cotton is selling for five cents.

PINE PERMANENT SPECIES IF DESIRED

Montgomery, Ala., July 5.—"Misinterpretation of scientific findings ofttimes is responsible for widespread error," says Colonel Page S. Bunker, Alabama State Forester. A case in point is the statement of plant ecologists and plant geographers that long leaf pine on a tropical pine site will be replaced by hardwoods, chiefly oak.

According to Colonel Bunker, many landowners have felt that they must immediately do something drastic to forestall the encroachment of broad leaved species in their stands of pine timber. Too often they have resorted to the use of fire to kill cut the undesirable growth. As a matter of fact, this is exactly the wrong thing to do, since the hardwoods have the ability to sprout from the root cellars, sending up several stems instead of one and thereby increasing the amount of underbrush.

There is no cause for alarm, states Colonel Bunker. Plant ecologists, like geologists, are prone to speak in terms of centuries and millenia rather than of years. What is meant in their statement is that in the course of thousands of years the long leaf pine growth will bring about sufficient soil improvement to enable hardwoods to thrive on the site. However, should it be desired to continue the areas in long leaf pine production, the owner can easily bring this about by simple silvicultural management.

CO-OP NAMES NEW MARKET MANAGER

Montgomery, Ala., July 5.—John E. Ivey, general manager of the Alabama Farm Bureau Mutual Supply Association, has announced the appointment of Ira B. Gaultney as manager of the marketing department of the association. Gaultney succeeds J. B. Sylvest, whose connection with the supply has been severed, Ivey said.

Gaultney has had 12 years experience in the produce selling business having worked in Birmingham and in Macon, Ga. He will have charge of the selling of poultry, eggs, fruits, vegetables, and other farm products handled by the cooperative.

His appointment is part of a general expansion program of the farm bureau associations, Ivey stated. For many years the supply association has been handling successfully chickens and other produce in carload lots and some farm produce in smaller lots. The aim of the new program is to expand this work to include every farm product offered for sale by farmers in any size lot.

Judge W. B. Bowling, LaFeyette, former congressman from the Fifth Alabama District, says that distorted distribution of wealth is at the bottom of the economic situation in the United States. He said that 90 per cent of America's wealth is owned by 10 per cent of the American people; and that 504 people had in 1929 a total income exceeding the total of all the wheat and cotton growers of the United States.

WORK OF COUNTY AGENT

7. Forestry—Fire prevention, thinning, fence posts.
8. Soil building—Terracing, legumes, barnyard manures.
9. Farmers cooperative work—Advising individual farmers, farmer groups or farm organizations in the county in marketing farm products or buying supplies entering into the production of farm crops and livestock.

FARM AND GARDEN QUERY BOX

(By K. C. Davis, Knapp School of Country Life, Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.)

Q.—Why do hens fall off in egg production when warm weather comes on?

A.—There are three chief causes. The poorest layers have laid out their string of eggs and will lay no more during the season or few more. Hens become tired of their feed and need a variety or change. The green feed becomes tough, and the hens do not eat much of it at this season. Probably the greatest cause of the reduction in the number of eggs is the attack of lice and mites in the hen house and in the nest. Treat these thoroughly as described a few weeks ago.

Q.—Please give directions regarding the culling of hens that fail to lay many eggs.

A.—The comb of good layers should be large, soft and bright. The laybones or pelvic bones should be thin, wide apart, and soft. The legs beak and ears should be faded or white, very little color being present. The keel or breast bone should be a long distance from the laybones or pelvic bones. The distance should be as great as the width of four fingers of a man. The vent should be faded in color and large. The eyes should be bright and prominent. The head should be long, deep and wide. The back should be long, deep and wide. Culling out of hens not showing these qualities should begin now, and be repeated at least once a month until cold weather. Culling saves feed and room in the hen house. Early culls bring better prices than late culls.

Q.—Will hens lay as well if roosters are not with them after the breeding season is over?

A.—Hens will lay more eggs when not bothered with male birds. Eggs are better for table use. They cost less in production. They bring better prices at the market. They are better for storage and more easily preserved. They withstand heat better. They stay fresh longer. They bear shipment better.

ANNUAL MEETING OF FARM BUREAU SET

Montgomery, Ala., July 5.—The annual meeting of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation will be held at Auburn, August 2, 3, and 4, it has been announced by J. L. Edwards, president.

On the same dates in Auburn the annual Farmers' Week exercises, and in addition the annual convention of the Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Clubs will be held.

A general program of instruction and recreation is being arranged by the Auburn Extension staff and in addition special programs are being arranged by President Edwards of the Farm Bureau and Mrs. J. D. Giles, president of the Council of Home Demonstartion Clubs.

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation will be the principal speaker on the farm bureau program. Another speaker will be Miss Mary Mims, extension sociologist of Louisiana State University, said to be one of the finest speakers to farm audiences in America and whose success in rural community organization in Louisiana has been remarkable.

The program will include visits to the agricultural experiment station fields where important agricultural questions will be studied.

FOOD PRESERVATION GROWS IN ALABAMA

Auburn, Ala., July 7—More food from gardens and more food from cans home-filled will be consumed in Alabama next fall and winter. And there will be more dried fruits and more beans, peas potatoes, and other good things to eat through the fall and winter.

Reports received at Auburn reveal that people are busy making gardens. Drying fruit will be done in July and August. Home demonstration agents are tstressing food production and preservation at their club meetings. Demonstrations are being conducted and instructions are given on canning and preservnig food products by other methods.

Proportionally, more vegetables are being canned. Due to the smaller crops, fruit canning is being done on a smaller scale. Fortunately, many homes have a surplus of canned fruit which was carried over from last year. More vegetables will give them a better-balanced diet, home agents explain.

An interest in gardening is being maintained on a larger scale than heretofore. People are cultivating, planting, fertilizing and harvesting vegetables. There are fewer weeds and grass in gardens and more vegetables.

For July and August planting in south Alabama, Julian Brown extension horticulturist, Auburn, names beans, sweet corn, cucumber, eggplant, endive, garlic, gherkin, melons, okra, onions, peas, pepper, potatoes squash, tomatoes.

The planting in Central Alabama was practically the same, with the addition of carrott, and collards.

For North Alabama, beans, cabbage, sweet corn, cucumber, endive, gherkin, Kohl-rabi, lettuce, peas potatoes, tomatoes.

RIGINAL

FROM THE JAIL HOUSE

A Prince Albert tobacco tin was thrown down from the jail Wednesday morning. In the can was this letter:

Please give space in Banner this week. To the good people of Chilton County: I want to say that I am glad to have met with some of you, especially the singing folks at Liberty Hill, Mulberry, Maplesville and Sardis churches. I sure do enjoy being with you in your song services. I hope to get better acquainted and meet with a lot of other classes. There is nothing I enjoy better than good singing. A real good spiritual song drives away trouble and sorrow, puts us on higher ground, brings us closer together in love that we may live for God and be a help to others.

I have been in this work for several years; have had the privilege of teaching some primary schools; and have sung for some church services. I am no normal graduate — just a country boy from the northern part of the State, but have attended schools of the Showaler Company, also the Vaughn Company of Lawrenceburg, Tenn. I have been handling Mr. Vaughn's song books for several years. I like the books because I like him and his men. They are good; and too I like the Stamps books and like to hear their music. They have some good quartets.

Do you ever have them with you in your conventions? If not, give them a special invitation. You will enjoy them.

I have been in your county only fifteen months, and like it, although we are under a great depression. All one hears mostly is hard times. I have had a heavy burden placed on my shoulders. We never know what the future will be—shadows or sunshine. We all have the dark hours sometimes, but God will pass it on and then the light comes.

Our Sunday school teachings have been great this time. I love the reading of how God's great love worked with those men of olden times. Joseph, from his youth, seemed to have been after God's own heart. People today have the same God; but seems He is almost forgotten. People are all in a hurry, drifting with the tide. May God help us that we take time to serve Him in these last days—the evening of time. Come together in songs of praise, have more schools, keep the song waves going; help each other along the way.—Yours in Song, C. L. Cadle, Calera, Ala.

REFUGE NEWS

Our B. Y. P. U. and Sunday school are moving along nicely, yet always room for improvement.

A goodly crowd gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Easterling to celebrate the Fourth. There were about 11 families present.

Copelans Will Operate Peoples Telephone Co.

Dear Folks:

We are back here to try to organize the Peoples Telephone system, but without your cooperation we can do nothing. The switchboard as well as the lines are in an awful condition. They need lots of work and some new parts, and there is no money in the treasury to buy anything at all. We have moved the switchboard and have done lots of work on it. There is plenty still to do, but we will soon have it in as good conditions as can be expected under the circumstances. The lines will be put in good condition.

We urge everyone outside the corporate limits to get busy on your line. Cut out the rusty joints, put in new wire where it is needed and get your line in good shape so you can get service. You can do it if you will. You can make your telephone system something to be proud of. As it is, it is a disgrace to you, and your community.

Now let's get busy and get this thing going good. I can assure you we will do our part if you will do yours. Most everybody needs new batteries. You cannot get good service without good batteries. One of the greatest drawbacks to the country telephone service is their telephones. So many have 1,500 ringers. It is almost impossible to get service out of a country line unless you have 2,500 ringers.

We will be glad to install new telephones, all new subscribers will be welcome.

All phone holders have a cordial invitation to come and see us at any time, and those who do not know me already, get acquainted. You will remember me as your old telephone operator for about five years. I gave you service then and I will do it again, just try me.—Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Copelan, (Nettie Culp.)

W. D. Bishop, chairman of the county commission, said the need for a reaadjustment had been under discussion some time.

Meanwhile, the board of review, consisting of the county commissioners and Tax Assessor, L. A. Whetstone, continues to receive protests against tax assessments for the current year.

Predictions that the total number of protests will reach 40,000 by Monday, last day in which protests may be filed, was made Friday by Sidney W. Smyer, of the property owners division, Birmingham Real Estate board.

Given To Committee

The county commission, constituted, by law as a board of tax review to hear the protests, will pass them on to be heard by a committee of three.

This committee consists of Tarrant and John B. Rosentihl and A. F. Alexander, clerks of the county commission in its capacity as a board of review.

"This committee will have from June 6 to July 11 to pass on the protests," Smyer reported, "but it seems impossible for them actually to investigate more than a fraction of this huge number.'

"If those unheard, or those refused, are appealed to circuit court, it will take years for them to be heard and might bankrupt the county."

May Urge Court Fight

"I advised the Real Estate board, in case the board of review does not show an attitude of fairness, to counsel all protesting tax-payers to appeal their cases to circuit court and in this way hold up distribution of any tax monies they pay in until the cases are disposed of. However, I would not recommend such drastic action unless the tapayers are forced to it."

ROAD WORK TO START AT ONCE

Order Passed By Commissioners Court In Session Last Friday

In pursuance of further plans relative to the program of hard-surfacing the Lay Dam Road, the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, in session last Friday, passed the following order:

"It is ordered by the Court of County Commissioners that L. H. Reynolds, Judge of Probate, advertise in the manner provided by law, for bidders to build, construct and repair two miles of different grades of hard-surfaced road on the Clanton and Lay Dam Road, commencing at the corporate limits of the Town of Clanton, and continuing two miles from said point toward Lay Dam; the Court reserving the right in said advertisement to build the same of hard-surfaced road to be accepted by the Commissioners, to the cross-roads at the Cleve Littlefield residence on said road, at the same price for which said two miles is to be constructed.

"Owing to the depressed condition of many people in our county, and many who will suffer for the actual necessities of life, the Court deems at this time it will be of material benefit to many people in furnishing labor and providing them with the actual necessities of life.

"In order to relieve as much distress as posible, it is ordered by the Court that all labor that can reasonably and profitably perform work upon this road be employed in Chilton County, and particularly employing those who are in needy circumstances and that proper provisions to this effect be inserted in any contract that might be awarded for this work.

"It is further ordered by the Court that Commissioner A. P. Vinson have the road machines in his district prepare said two miles of road in proper condition to be hard-surfaced at once, and also have said two miles of road graveled where necessary for said hard-surface material.

"It is further ordered by the Commissioners Court that the money appropriated for the above work will in no wise affect the money to be appropriated this fall for winter work, such as graveling, etc., on the public roads of Chilton County; and there will be the same amount of money appropriated for the different roads of Chilton County as would have been if the above work had not been done."

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

The pastor is this week engaged in a meeting at Dayton, Ala., but will return to Clanton Saturday and will be in readiness for your services next Sunday.

Sunday school meets at 9:45 a.m. Your presence will add much to the program.

Preaching at 11 a.m. and at 8 p.m.

The young people's organizations meet at 7:15.

Anybody can go to church when the weather is just right and when there are no hindrances, but it takes a real member to be faithful and loyal when everything seems to be out of joint. Anybody can stay at home on Sunday, but it takes folks with sure enough will power to attend church when there is a blazing sun and a blistering heat coming down. Be a real church member and be in your place next Sunday.

PROF GRIFFIN WILL GO TO BILLINGSLEY SCHOOL

According to information given out by Superintendent Lawrence, Prof. J. D. Griffin has accepted the principalship of the Billingsley High School, where he will take up his duties at the opening of the school term this fall. The announcement also stated that Prof. Griffin's place at Isabella will be filled by Prof. G. G. Williams.

For the past nine years Prof. Griffin has been principal at Isabella, during which time the school has progressed from an ordinary rural school to a fully accredited vocational agricultural high school., Mr. Griffin and his family have exercised a fine and effective influence in the Isabella community for every interest of progress and community welfare. Their activity has been an inspiration to all the people of the community. It is universally regretted that the Griffins will leave Chilton County.

Prof. Williams, who will succeed Prof. Griffin, is one of the outstanding educators of this county. He is a native of the Mulberry community, and is eminently able to carry on the great work which has been so well founded upon the ability and foresight of Prof. Griffin.

TORNADO CASES ABOUT FINISHED

Red Cross Reports Fourteen Cases Remain On Their Relief List

Birmingham, Ala., July 10.—Another errand of mercy has been completed by the Red Cross.

Only 14 hospital cases remain from the March tornadoes in Alabama all of which are expected to be closed by August 1, and the last bill incurred in rehabilitating storm victims has been marked paid.

Miss Helen Colwell, director of rehabilitation since June 6, has closed the central office here and the records of relief work have been bundled up and sent to Washington to take their place among other archives in which other deeds of the organization are recorded.

Although the headquarters office has been closed, Miss Margaret Giles, nursing supervisor, will remain in the state until the remaining hospital cases are disposed of. She will be the last of 80 workers to quit the field.

Final figures show 326 persons were killed by the tornado in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee. More than 700 persons required hospital treatment and 3,277 families were affected. Aid was given 2,830 families numbering 17,000 persons.

Debris and trees scattered over the countryside by the mad winds have been cleared away and there is nothing left to remind one of the destruction dealt by the storms on the night of March 21 and a week later.

The above article was taken from the Montgomery Advertiser Monday. The last paragraph can not be applied to Chilton County's storm area. There is still plenty of signs in our storm section that something has happened not so long ago.

The writer made a trip through the section Sunday. Many of the wrecked houses remain a pile of tangled disorder. Wooded sections of land have grown up with trees piled into a mass of trash. Some of the people still live in tents while their houses are being rebuilt.

But it is a very comforting fact to see the great number of handsome bungalows that have been rebuilt through the help of the Red Cross. Every time we think of the storm we wonder again what in the world would have become of the people of Chilton County, had it not been for the help that came to us through the Red Cross.

BALL GAMES THIS AFTERNOON

At 2:30 this afternoon (Thursday) the American Legion Boys Baseball team will play the boys from Selma. Following the game by the bays, a scrap team of Clanton men will play the Southern Shops team of Selma. Both of these games promise to be thrillers, so everybody come out to the ball park and see them.

The Clanton boys went over to Selma Tuesday afternoon, and came back with a score of 3 to 2 in their favor. Our Legion boys did some real ball playing in Selma. Howard of Jemison pitched. Only one error was made by the Clanton boys.

REV. COLLEY WILL PREACH

Rev. J. W. Colley of the Baptist Orphanage at Troy will preach in a revival meeting at Mt. Creek Baptist church, beginning on the second Sunday in August. An invitation is extended to everybody to attend and join in the services.

Judge Reynolds Once More Explains Law On Tax Values

Continued Agitation By Grover A. Bice, Postmoster of Thorsby, Brings Second Explanation of Probate Judge On How Law Provides for Revaluation of Property

Under date of July 12, Judge L. H. Reynolds addressed the following letter to Mr. Grover A. Bice, Postmaster of Thorsby, in reply to a letter previously published by Mr. Bice, relative to the subject of revaluation of property for taxation in Chilton County:

Mr. Grover Bice, Postmaster,
Thorsby, Ala.
Dear Sir:

If you desire to be honestly informed as to the tax laws of Alabama, and especially those governing assessments and valuations in Chilton County, I suggest that you read these tax laws or get some advice as to what they are. Fake promises and false hopes held out by candidates in heated campaigns as to what they propose to do are not laws under which we operate. The statement referred to in your letter of the Union-Banner on June 7, 1932, are but the hopes and expectations of candidates, hoping to mislead some voter and taxpayer to follow them. If you read the Birmingham papers last week, you will further notice that this appraisal, one of the members of the County Commission referred to for Jefferson County, would cost in the neighborhood of one-half million dollars. As you stated in your last article, no relief can be granted until the assessment year, commencing October 1st, 1933.

As stated above, your first communication on this subject was dated May 31, 1932 and was received by the Commisioners Court a day or so later. Under the law any objections to the values fixed must have been filed with Akins Collins, the tax assessor, on or before May 30, 1932, one day before your letter was written. Why this tardy and sudden interest on your part in behalf of the taxpayers of Chilton County? If you were honest and sincere in your efforts to assist any distressed taxpayer, why did you not do something constructive before the law shut you out? Did you not just have an abrupt awakening when it was proposed that Congress cut the lucrative salaries now paid to the postmasters such as you and other federal employees?

In several public addresses in the county, made by me, prior to the primary in May and within plenty of time for each and every taxpayer to file his objections with Akins Collins, the tax assessor, on or before May 30, 1932, I called the people's attention to their rights and at my instance and request the Union-Banner published the followng extracts from the tax laws of Alabama in an issue probably two months before May 30, 1932:

"The four members of the Court of County Commissioners and the tax assessor constitute the Board of Review. The Tax Assessor is secretary of the Board and the Board selects a chairman from among the membership.

"When the Tax Assessor shall have completed the assessment, valuation and equalization work in his county, it is his duty to notify each member of the Board of Review and the Board shall meet on the SECOND MONDAY IN APRIL and sit at the courthouse of the county from day to day until their duties are completed, which shall not be later than the FIRST MONDAY IN MAY, and shall review, revise, correct and fix the assessments of any person, partnership, corporation or association.

"Upon the completion of the work of reviewing and adjusting the assessed valuations by the Board of Review, the Tax Assessor shall give notice by publication once a week for three consecutive weeks in a newspaper published in the county that the assessed valuations of the property listed for taxation having been fixed as provided by law and that the tax return list showing thereon such assessed valuations are in his office, open for public inspection and that the Board of Review will sit at the Courthouse of the county on the FIRST MONDAY IN JUNE to consider such objections as may be filed by the taxpayer as hereinafter provided.

"Any taxpayer who is not satisfied with the valuations of his property as fixed and entered on the return list, may file objections in writing to such assessed values, with the secretary of the Board of Review (Tax Assessor), on or before the LAST MONDAY IN MAY. The taxpayer shall set out in such objection filed the descrpition of each item of property and his reason for makng objections to the assessed valuations as claimed therein.

"For the purpose of hearing objections filed in writing to any assessment or valuation fixed as provided, the Board of Review shall sit at the courthouse on the FIRST MONDAY IN JUNE for such hearing, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and shall continue as long as may be necessary, provided such sitting shall not be extended beyond the SECOND MONDAY IN JULY.

"At this sitting the property owner may appear in person or by agent or attorney and produce evidence in support of his objectinos to any assessment or valuation theretofore made. The Board may examine the property owner under oath and also any other witnesses in order to arrive at the fair and reasonable market value of such property. The Board of Review shall then fix a valuation at sixty per cent of its fair and reasonable market value and which amount shall constitute the assessed value of the property.

"In cases where abjections have been filed in writing by a taxpayer, his agent or attorney, as provided and the objections having been overruled by the board, such taxpayer may take an appeal from the action

Debt Cancellation Given Local Application By J. Wiley Littlejohn, of Clanton

Since the World War we have heard much about debt cancellation. The reference has been to debts the European countries owe Uuncle Sam, and therefore the discussion has not appealed very forcibly to the average citizen.

Now comes J. Wiley Littlejohn, former merchant of Clanton, who makes an announcement about debt cancellaton that will be very readily understood, and no doubt highly appreciated, by quite a number of people in this neck of the woods.

Mr. Littlejohn states that there are about three hundred people scattered over the country around Clanton, who owe him money in amounts ranging from a nickle to a hundred dollars. "I propose to cancel the whole thing," said Mr. Littlejohn, "and I want you to publish it in the paper. I don't want anybody to feel like I am a rich man and can live without the money. I am in bad circumstances, financially, just like everybody else. These three hundred people owe me about four thousand dollars for merchandise I sold them out of my store.

"I fell like they are not able to pay it. And I do not want to be worried about trying to collect it. Maybe it will help lighten the burden on some of them, at least, if they know their obligations to me are settled. For that reason I have determined to make the public statement that all the accounts owing to me are considered cancelled.

"In connection with this statement, I want to add that I hope in the future, when those who owe me money will meet me with a smile, and not with a frown. They are my friends, and I want them to continue to be my friends, and I want them to be cheerful when I meet them."

This action of Mr. Littlejohn is a new departure, it would seem. But he reminds us that it is a very, very old custom. Somewhere, sometime back in the past, he says there was a country where the custom was for creditors to declare all debts canceled every seventh year. He says that custom is the beginning of the bankrupt laws, as we have them today.

HERE IS YOUR RECEIPT

To any and all persons who owe me anything, this is a receipt for the account in full to date.

You will, therefore, please clip this out and preserve it in the future.

I hope my action in this manner of disposing of my accounts may prove of financial benefit to the people concerned; and when you meet me, I hope you will meet me with a smile instead of a frown.

J. WILEY LITTLEJOHN.

Clanton, Ala., July 11, 1932.

AIRPLANE LANDING FIELD NEAR MITCHELL DAM

According to information current in Clanton, and articles published in Montgomery newspapers, an emergency landing field for airplanes is being made on the banks of Lake Mitchell, two miles above Mitchell Dam. The exact location is given as the old Higgins bottoms on the Coosa side of the Lake, just below the mouth of Cargyle Creek.

It is said the project is being sponsored by Lion G. Mason, manager of the Montgomery airport, William Mark, Tom McGough, Jr., and other Montgomery airmen. The field will embrace about sixteen acres, it is said, being approximately 1,600 feet long and 400 feet wide.

Although the work of placing the field in condition is yet far from completion, it is reported that several planes have made landings there. The field will doubtless be used by many people from Montgomery who visit the lake regions quite often.

DR. B. J. BALDWIN DIED

Dr. B. J. Baldwin, prominent Montgomery physician, died at a hospital in his home city Sunday morning.

Dr. Baldwin was well-known in Chilton County, having lived for many seasons in past years at his summer home in Verbena.

KIWANIS HELPS NEEDY FAMILY

Appeal Made for Milk and Eggs For Tuberculosis Sufferers

Recently the under-privileged child committee of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, composed of Earle Thomas, Judge L. H. Reynolds and C. E. Stapp, investigated the family of Harrison Glaze of Plantersville R. 2, and found a very serious condition.

Their report was as follows:

Harrison Glaze, age 27 years, has an active case of tuberculosis; Ethel Glaze, age 20 years; Louise Glaze, age 2 years; Marshal Glaze, age 5 months.

Harrison has been unable to do any work since March. He and his family are living in a one-room house owned by Mr. A. B. Jones. They have nothing except what the community gives them.

The doctor who has been attending Harrison says that he should have fresh eggs and milk every day. After Judge Reynolds and Mr. Stapp visited this family last, they decided to make an appeal through the papers for hens for Mrs Glaze.

If you have one or more good hens that you would like to give to Mr. Glaze, and will leave them at the Farm Bureau office in Clanton, Mr. Stapp, Judge Reynolds and Mr. Thomas will see that they are delivered to Mr. Glaze. This committee hopes that more than enough hens will be brought in. If more than are needed are given, the extras will be sold and used in the fund to buy a cow for this family.

VATCHEL VISITS COOSA

Vatchel Lindsey spent his vacation last week visiting old friends in Coosa County. He left here last Monday morning, going to the ferry at Log Cabin Beach, below Mitchell Dam. From there he went to the home of C. N. Dozier, near Weogufka, where he stayed until Saturday. The days were spent at the old Weogufka Cross Roads, where Vatchel reports he had a most enjoyable time with old friends and acquaintances.

Saturday he went up to Sylacauga and spent the day, returning Saturday night to the home of T. O. Dozier, near Weogufka. Sunday Mr. Dozier brought him back to Log Cabin Beach, from where he came on home Sunday night. "I had the most enjoyable trip of my life," said Vachel. "I was treated fine by the people of Coosa County, and I wish all of my friends over there the best of luck in the future."

LEGION OFFICERS ELECTED

At a special meeting last Saturday night, Chilton County Post No. 6 of the American Legion re-elected the same staff of Post officers for the coming year, as follows:

R. D. Woodson, commander; W. M. Wyatt, first vice commander; J. E. Gore, second vice commander; A. L. Robinson, adjutant.

Delegates to the Alabama State Legion Convention at Gadsden were named as follows: R. D. Woodson, K. M. Vinson, Percy Pitts, W. M. Wyatt, Joe Calloway, J. G. Newton, J. E. Gore, A. L. Robinson and Eugene Deramus. The State Convention will be held July 24, 25 and 26.

CITIZENS PROTEST ON ROAD PAVING

Meeting Called At the Courthouse, Saturday, July 16 At 2:30 P.M.

Word having come to us that the Commissioners Court has voted to pave two miles of the road from the city limits of Clanton on the Lay Dam Road, and feeling that this is a mistake, we protest such action and call the citizens of Chilton County to meet at the courthouse on Saturday, July 16, 1932, at 2:30 o'clock p.m., to discuss such action and to determine on a course of procedure.

We believe it improper to pave the two miles for the following reasons:

1. The State of Alabama has just about bankrupted itself in an effort to construct hard surfaced roads, having spent $50,000,000 besides the gas tax collected for the counties, and spent by the counties, which amounts to about $50,000 annually for each county in the state.

2. Two miles will not benefit anyone except those who may own property adjoining the paved strip.

3. This is a time for retrenchment and a reduction of expenses and not a time to undertake such an expenditure of funds.

4. The cost of county government for the years past is sufficient grounds for believing that the county is not able to construct this permanent road, at the present time.

5. Permanent road building has passed the experimental stage. Thousands of miles of roads have been built in the past years and therefore we could not say that this would be an experiment. Millions of dollars have been spent by the state and federal governments in this experiment and having bankrupt themselves, why should Chilton County bankrupt itself?

We hereby call on everybody interested to be present at a mass meeting next Saturday and show whether or not you are for the proposed project.—W. G. Shaw, E. E. Martin, B. M. Killingsworth, J. L. Harrell, P. M. Martin, Ed Y. Conway, H. H. Armstrong, B. L. Cobb.

COUNTY TREASURER CALLS ATTENTION TO THOSE DUE OLD WITNESS FEES

I want to call special attention to the part of the Treasurer's Report, listed as "Fiduciary Fund." This is a group of witness fees which stayed in the Circuit Clerk's office for 5 years, and as they were not called for, it became his duty, under the law, to report them to the Treasurer's ofice. This has been done, and they are now in my office. Unless the owner calls for the money within the next two years, it will be the duty of the county treasurer to transfer them to the General Fund.

I am therefore asking that the readers of The Union-Banner, look over the list and cooperate with me in letting the owers know about this money.

If the owner has lost the certificate which he received as proof of his attendance in court, an affidavit may be made and I can give a check for the amount.

Respectfully,
GERTRUDE P. CALLOWAY,
County Treasurer.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Duffey of Mt. Creek have as their guests for several days their niece, Miss Edna Burgess of LaGrange, Ga.,

Revival At Refuge On Fourth Snnday

Rev. J. W. Jones, Pastor of Thorsby Church, Will Do The Preaching

As formerly announced, Rev. J. W. Jones, of Thorsby, will do the preaching in the revival beginning the 4th Sunday in this month at Refuge Baptist Church. Refuge is located six miles northeast of Clanton. We ask that the readers bear the date in mind and come out and hear Bro. Jones. They who have heard him know that he is a live wire in a revival.

Rev. Jones preached here last year and there were 27 additions to the church. The writer has been very closely associated with Rev. Jones, and has learned that he is a man of God, which is the secret of his being such a power in the pulpit. The meeting will doubtless extend through the following week.

DAT BLOOMIN PREACHER

This week's Blossom:
Jesus sa, "Were there not ten cleansed, but where are the nine?"
Ah sa, da is down on de ribber fishin.—The Elder.

Will you gib heed while Ah reads a part ob de 16th chapter ob Luke? (Reads lesson about the rich man and Lazarus.) Ah wants us to study dis scrpture togeder dis mawnin, because in it de Son ob God pulls aside de curtains an lets us take one look into de unseen worl. This was His testimony as to de reality ob Paradise an ob Hades. He had seen both befo He came to dis worl, an His testimony was that ob an eye-witness. In dis passage He answers practically evy modern heresy at its vital points wid His own testimony. So de issue is clearly drawn as to whom you will belebe—Christ or dese false teachers. You can't belebe both.

If de Son ob God spoke de truth, da are all found to be liars, an that upon de testimony ob de Son ob God, who is to be their judge. From His verdict dar is no appeal to a higher court. His decision will be final. An He will not reverse Himself.

Let us examine whut He said: Let us lock fust at modernism. De modernists denies de accuracy ob de writins ob Moses. Christ, here in dis chapter endorses it, an elsewhere he plurtly says, "If ye believe not Moses writings, how shall ye believe my words? Modernism teaches dat man evoluted fum de brute, an when he dies, dat he dies lak a brute. The Son ob God's answer to dat is de picture ob dis rich man in hell. It matters not how brutish a man may be here. He may live lak a brute, live to drink an fare sumptuously evy day; but he dont die lak a brute. Der is a hell ob conscious torment to whch all sich materialists go. Da also deny de reality ob sin, an ob de punishment ob sin. De Son ob God's answer to dat is dis rich fool's prayer to Abraham to send Lazarus to his father's house to tell his brothers dat is alive an warn dem not to follow him into hell.

Now dar is another sect dat denies de reality of sickness, dat is, da, sa, dat it is just whut you thnk bout it. If you think you is sick, you will be sick. An if you think you is well you is well. De Son ob God here plainly testifies to de reality ob Lazarus's sores. Ah guess, accordin to their teachin, Lazarous jes thought he had sores all over him. Ah mus tell you dat his sores were no delusion ob mortal mind. An dese people teaches dat death is not real. The Son ob God testifies dat de rich man died. Da denies de realality ob sin an ob hell. De Son ob God testifies frum His own personal eye-witness ob men in hell as to de reality ob sin an de certainity an eternity ob de punishment ob all whose sins have not been washed away in His atoning blood. Dar is another set ob folks whut denies dat death end all probation. De Son ob God here plainly teaches there is no second chance. They also deny de reality ob hell. De Son ob God here bears testimony to its reality an de awful suffering in conscious torment ob all who go there. Da teach too, dat hell is not real fire. De Son ob God plainly speaks ob its flames an ob de cry for water by de damned, who ar dar.

One great body ob Christians teaches dat prayers to de saints are answered. This rich man prayed to Abraham; but his prayer wuz not answered. Thse people teach dat de Pope an all others go to purgatory; that even babies go to limbo, especially unbaptized babies, an dat none go at once into de presence ob God. De Son ob God here teaches dat de righteous go at once into a state ob rest an bliss; an dat de wicked go at once into a place ob consicous torment. He also teaches dat dar is no escape fum de place into which da go by any who go dar.

If, as da teach, when da sa masses fur de dead, their popes an cardinals an other high muck-a-mucks, go to purgatory when da die; din da are all still in hell; for dar is no way to git out when da once git in. De Son ob God sed so. These, an some others, teach dat men will hab another chance atter dis life. De Son ob God gives de lie to all sich teachins in dis passage when He testifies dat dar is no escape fum de place into which men enters at death. A fixed gulf prevents their passage fum hell to heaven. Dis scripture proves to be false de Mormon idea ob babtism fur de dead. Da teach dat ef some livin man is baptised fur some dead one, dat de dead one may thus pass fum hell to heaven.

De Son ob God in dis passage proves dat to be false then He says dar is a great gulf fixed so dat da can't pass fum torment into paradise, ef da would. Dar is lots ob others whose teachin agree in part wid de teachins mentioned above. An besides teach dat God is a God ob love an dat He is too good to damn any body fur all eternity. De Son ob God gives de lie to all da sa, in dis passage as well as in many others. God is too good not to damn de wicked. He would not be good at all ef He did not tell de truth. He has sed He will "by no means clear the guilty" an dat "every transgression and disobedience shall receive a just recompence of reward." De Son ob God plainly testafies dat all sich materialists as dis rich man, who live for de present to enjoy de good things ob dis life, will git their evil things in de next.

De Son ob God concludes dis awful picture wid de solemn warnin dat mens eternal doom will be determined by their attitude towards de bible. There are no untried means to bring men to salvation here an to heaven hereafter, if hey will not heed de warnins ob God's bible. Dat is God's last an final word to de lost. Hell is de portion ob all who reject de bible an its Christ.

Sinners, let me say dis in conclusion: widout Christ, you will go to be wid dat rich man. An wid Christ, you will go to be wid Lazarus. Which will you take? Ah do hope an pray dat de Lord will use dis to git some to turn fum sin an be sabed.

Ah will now cum to a close. Stan an be dismis.

OLD TIME SINGING SUNDAY

We are requested by the pastor and people of the Mount Pleasant church community to come out there next Sunday afternoon and sing for them in the old song books. Let me urge that all who can sing come out and be with us. This church is about six miles northeast of Jemison. This will be an all-day gathering, but the morning will be spent in other exercises. Don't forget the date, next Sunday, July 17th. Come and be with us. Yours for a good singing.—J. N. Scott, Jemison, Ala.

Mrs. Claud Jones and son and Misses Sarah and Elisabeth Daniel, of Greenville, are visiting Mrs. Spurgeon Calloway this week. Mrs. Jones is a niece of Dr. L. V. Stabler, formerly of Thorsby.

BOY SCOUTS HAVE GREAT TIME AT THEIR CAMP, SPRING VILLA

That the Boy Scout work is advancing in the Chilton County area, is evidenced by the splendid report by John J. Sigwald, scout executive, showing accomplishments of the Chilton County boys who attended camp at Camp Spring Villa recently. Mr. Sigwald's report is as follows:

Wade Alford advanced to second class.

Junior Deal advanced to second class.

Wesley Brown advanced to second class.

Irby Wood advanced to star: personal and public health, reptile study and first aid.

Phillip Nelson advanced to star: personal health, poultry keeping, public health, reptile study, swimming and first aid.

Thomas Marcus advanced to star: first aid, life saving, personal and public health, reptile study.

Searcy Martin advanced to star: first aid, leathercraft, pathfinding, personal and public health and reptile study.

Owen Deal advanced to star: first aid, leathercraft, pathfinding, personal and public health and reptile study.

Eugene Wilkinson advanced to star: leathercraft, pathfinding, personal and public health, reptile study.

Julius Martin advanced to star: first aid, leathercraft, lifesaving, personal and public health, reptile study.

Joe Hall Johnson advanced to first class star: cooking, first aid, personal and public health, first aid to animals and reptile study.

Hayes Marcus advanced to star: first aid, leathercraft, personal and public health, reptile study and pathfinder.

Bob Powers alvanced to first class: life saving and swimming.

Ed Lakeman passed in markmanship and leathercraft.

John Ezell passed in leathercraft, woodcarving, pathfinding, civics, reptile study, animal industry, cooking, poultry keeping, life saving and camping.

John Ezell was one of the assistant instructors during the three weeks of the camp and Mr. Sigwald reports that he was well pleased with John's work.

It is interesting to note that all but one member of the Lay Dam troop attended camp. This Boy Scout training is fine for boys, and needs the support of every citizen of the county who is interested in the development of our boys.

It is pointed out that scout work, like anything else requires trained leadership. The Chilton County area is a part of the Central Alabama Council and has as its executive John J. Sigwald. Chilton County area is expected to share its prorata part of the Central Alabama Scout Council's expense. Our part of this expense is $360.00 per year. The people of the towns and communities who are interested in scouting are urged to see Mr. W. M. Wyatt, finance chairman, and arrange to help take care of our part of the scout program expense.

70% increase in anti-knock makes the new SINCLAIR REGULAR GASOLINE actually superior to some premium gasolines—yet it costs you nothing extra!

Here is a new, high-test motor fuel with a 70% increase in anti-knock—a gasoline which is actually superior in anti-knock to some premium gasolines selling at three cents more per gallon.

Try a tankful of the gasoline on which Sinclair expended $18,000,000 in refinery improvements. Try it for knockless power on the hills. For speedier acceleration in traffic. For surprising fuel economy. For real motoring enjoyment!

Ask for the new Sinclair Regular, stepped up 70%—use it for 30 days and see the difference.

NOTE: For best results use either SINCLAIR OPALINE MOTOR OIL or SINCLAIR PENNSYLVANIA MOTOR OIL. Both have been de-waxed and also freed from petroleum jelly at as low as 60° F. below zero.

A COMPARISON OF SCHOOLS WITH OTHER STATE OBJECTS

Alabama Spent Five Times As Much For Roads and Highways As For Schools. Are Roads More Important Than Education of Our Children?

(By Supt. Buford Lawrence)

For months the teachers of Alabama have gone without pay. In Chilton County the teachers have not been paid but $20.00 since January. We we consider the condition in some other counties we feel that we are fortunate in not having been any further behind. Here are the six counties further behind than Chilton:

Winston, elementary schools, 8 month; high schools 10½ months. half months.

Cherokee, elementary schools 7½ months; high schools 9 months.

Randolph, elementary schools 7 months; high schools 7 months.

Crenshaw, elementary schools, 6½ months; high schools 7½ months.

Marion, elementary schools 6¼ months; high schools, 7½ months.

Clay, elementary schools, 6 months high schools 7½ months.

If the state would pay its appropriations all of these teachers would be paid. The salaries have been cut all over the state and these reductions should reach into every department of state. Reports from 41 counties show that school revenue has been reduced as much as 53.4 per cent. Certain reports sent out from the State Treasurer's office would lead you to believe that 51 per cent of the tax dollar has gone to education. This is erroneous and unfair.

A bulletin recently published by the Alabama Education Association showed that according to the State Treasurer's report for the year 1930-1931 the total disbursements for all state services amounted to $35,665,-814. Every good citizen is interested in knowing how this was divided, or how much was spent for each service of the state. Here is where it was spent:

Highways, 54.2 per cent or $19,-321,967.

Education 11.6 per cent or $4,-118,687.

Convict department 8.5 per cent or $3,040.142.

Pensions 4.2 per cent or $1,514,-314.

Charitable and correctional institutions 3.4 per cent or $1,213,965.

Bridge corporations 3.1 per cent or $1,119,707.

Interest 3.1 per cent or $1,103,028.

Miscellaneous 2.2 per cent or $775,670.

Health department 2.2 or $770,-169.

Administrative departments 2 per cent or $720,979.

Executive department 1.8 per cent or $650,965.

Legislative 1.1 per cent or $405,-418.

Judiciary 1.1 per cent or $402,-656.

Docks commission .7 per cent or $225,187.

Tax commission .7 per cent or $252,960.

Total 100 per cent $35,665,814.

Now every good citizen believes in good roads and they are important and necessary but who would for one moment believe them to be of more value than our children? And yet we spent in the state for the year almost five times more for highways than for education. The table shows that more was spent for highways than for all the other departments of state. (See bulletin page 13, "The School Situation in Alabama").

Calhoun County has seen fit to pass the following resolution, which gives us an insight about the school situation in that county:

"Whereas, the State of Alabama is now due the Calhoun County schools approximately $90,000 for the years 1930-1931 and 1931-1932, thus making it necessary for the teachers in this county to have their salaries unpaid from four to five months of the past school term and consequently to suffer great embarrassments and hardships, and this, in face of the fact that the teachers were forced to take a reduction of 10 per cent in their salaries the past year and will have to take an additional 10 per cent reduction for the coming year, which condition prevails to a greater or less degree over the entire state, and

"Whereas, the school authorities of this county and of the whole state, in attempting to make plans for schools the coming year, are faced with such a great uncertainty in school finances as to make it impossible for them to determine the length of school term that can be had, or to know whether the schools can open at all next session:

"Therefore be it resolved, that we, the citizens of Calhoun County and patrons of the Calhoun County schools:

"First, protest the discrimination against the schools as shown by the fact that other state agencies and departments take a prior claim on the state treasury over the public schools of the state, other state employees being paid salaries while the teachers go unpaid. Furthermore, we protest the evident effort to charge to the educational appropriations more than a just share of the state's present financial deficit.

"Sesond, we urge the Governor of Alabama to take definite and immediate steps to place the schools on a sound financial basis, to the end that our schools may not be forced to have a short term or possibly remain closed for the next year.

"Third, if reductions in state appropriation are found to be necessary, we believe the schools should bear only an equitable share of these reductions, taking into account that funds for public schools have already been reduced through reduced assessments in taxable property.

"Fourth, that a copy of this resolution be mailed to Governor B. M. Miller and every member of the state legislature."

In conclusion I wish to call attention again, and emphasize the fact that school people recognize the necessity of taking reductions but we feel and insist that it is right for every department of our government to take its proportionate share of this reduction. The one thing we object to is the whole burden is being placed on the educational department.

Demonstration School of Progressive Education At Montevallo College

(By Miss Bess Thomas, Clanton Grammar School)

The Progressive Education Association is now sponsoring a Demonstration School at Alabama College during the first summer school. Only one other such school is being conducted under the auspices of the association during the summer of 1932. This school is designed to serve the southwestern section of the United States, and in view of the fact that it is the first in the south, it was deemed advisable to confine the work this year to the elementary school.

The Elementary Training School is in charge of Mrs. Bess B. Lane, director of the elementary department of the Tower Hill School, Wilmington, Deleware. Mrs. Lane has had seven years of college and university education, also three years of travel and study in France and Germany. She has working under her supervision, three demonstration teachers, nominated by the Progressive Education Association, and three of the regular training school staff. These people are experienced teachers in one of the leading progressive education schools of the country, and are presenting to the many teachers of Alabama the progressive method of teaching.

A number of Chilton County teachers have observed the actual work of pupils and teachers during this first semester work, and have been wonderfully benefitted by their observations.

Progressive education seems to be a world-wide movement. It is not a panacea, rejecting accepted beliefs, adult judgements and traveling conditions, but it is a new approach to the study of the child, a belief that the development of his normal interests exceed in importance the imposing of standardized subject matter. It assumes that education develops from human experience, rather than results from the acquisition of skills for deferred needs. It is liberal and humanitarian rather than compelling and mechanistic.

Some of the outstanding outcomes of the progressive teaching as relative to child, are developing his personality, discovering aptitudes and inculcating the habits of critical thinking.

Those attending the observations during last week were: Miss Bess Thomas, Mesdames C. E. Stapp, Madge Scarborough Mullins, S. J. Ezell, Curry Thomas, Barney Burnett, J. S. McNeil, Georgia Billingsley.

EDITORIAL

FROM SUMPTER COUNT JOURNAL (York, Ala.)

We are one hundred per cent for economy. We believe in cutting to the core in lowering expenses in this state. We think our greatest need is to lower COST of government rather than RAISING TAXES, and we believe every department should bear its share of this necessary pruning of expenses. But we DO NOT believe that the schools should be the first attacked, nor bear an UNJUST share of the economy program. Certainly nothing should be done that would unnecessarily hamper our educational system.

There are useless expenditures in all departments, in our opinion, and we insist that the educational department take it's cut with the rest. We do not mean to imply that this department should be set up as a SUPER department that is above retrenchment. But to do anything that would cripple our schools for a short time even, would be an irreparable injury to our boys and girls, and our citizenship would feel it's effect for years to come.

We feel that this department should be the LAST rather than the FIRST object in the pruning program. Lack of education—IGNORANCE, if you please—is the most BURDENSOME tax any people were ever called on to pay.

Nothing should be done to hinder our schools from carrying on. Let the economy program be carried out, but by all means, let our schools go forward, unrestricted by unwise economy that would take ONE day from our school terms or leave our teachers with UNPAID warrants to meet the necessities of life.

Food Preservation

A Discussion of Practical Methods of Canning Food Products, by Miss Bertha Dennis, Home Economics Instructor at the Isabella High School

Some form of food preservation has been practiced through the ages. A very large quantity of sugar was required in the past days when preserves were stored in large crocks without sealing. The quality of the food was changed, but the very change made it no longer available for bacterial food supply. This method of food preservation is nowadays far surpassed by canning. Canning has become such an important part of Man's existence that it is one of the great commercial industries of the world today.

The underlying principles in every form of food preservation is the same, namely, to safeguard the food from destruction by bacterial growth. In drying and smoking meats the moisture is so evaporated that bacteria can not grow. In salting and preserving (in heavy syrup) the solution is so concentrated with salt and sugar that bacteria can not grow. Spicing and pickling puts the food into solution containing chemicals in which bacteria can not multiply. But all these methods change the quality and the flavor of the food. Canning changes flavor to the least possible degree. Modern methods by which food retain the nearest to its natural flavor, color and texture have been possible through a thorough understanding of bacteriology and the use of improved equipments. Canning changes the taste to the least possible degree, and accomplishes its results by destroying the bacteria that are present; and by sealing in sterilized jars so that no more may enter.

In order to accomplish this result it is evident that having the jars, tops and rubbers absolutely free from living bacteria when the food is put in, is a stride in the right direction. Organisms collect in and on jars, tops and rubbers, where they have been standing for a time after having been emptied of food. Wash the jars, tops and rubbers thoroughly in warm soapy water, rinse in clean water, and boil for fifteeen minutes (counting from the time large bubbles come to the top of the water and burst), then turn the jars top side down on clean sterilized cloth, to protect the inside from bacteria falling from the dust and flies in the room.

Starting thus, with utensils boiled free from bacteria, the canner needs to consider the bacteria which are inevitably in the food. There are in general, two ways to overcome bacterial growth in canning foods. With heat and by the use of chemicals. The most healthful and practical use is with heat. The heating methods most commonly used are the cold pack or can cooked, and the open kettle method.

The cold pack method consists of selection of fruits or vegetables that are sound, young and tender. Wash in clean water to remove dirt and dust, blanch by plunging into boiling water for a short time. A wire basket or a thin clean flour sack may be used to hold the product to be blanched. After blanching, plunge the product into a can of cold water for a minute or two, this stops the cooking, sets the color, hardens the product, making it cool and easier to handle.

The product is then put in a jar. Pack the jar as full as possible without crushing. Fill the jar with boiling water, syrup or brine according to the product packed. Remove all air bubbles that remain after the liquid has bee nadded by inserting a thin slender flexible paddle into the jar. Clean the top and threads of the jar. A very small seed or particle of food left on the top will allow air to get into the jar, and the air contains bacteria. Put the rubber and top on the jar, screw the top down, then place the jar on a rack or cloth in a canner that is four or five inches higher than the jar, add boiling water to cover the top of the jar at least two inches to allow for evaporating of the water by boiling.

Process the time required for the product canned. In processing bring the water to boil as quickly as possible to improve the product. Count the time from the minute the water boils vigorously, keep boiling steadily until the processing period ends. Never allow the water to cook away. If more water must be added, use boiling water to hasten the boiling and to protect the jar. A tight cover on the canner will prevent evaporation of the water and will allow it to boil sooner and continuously. Remove the jars from the canner and seal immediately at the end of the processing period. Protect the jars from cold draft—this will cause breakage. Turn jars upside down in a cool place. Watch for leaks and store in a cool, dark place if it is a food that requires only one period of cooking. Many foods canned by this method may have to be heated for three successive days or canned in a steam pressure cooker.

Active bacteria may be destroyed at twenty-two degrees, but spore are more resistent to heat. A jar of food which has been heated the first day sufficiently to kill any active bacteria which may be in it and then allowed to cool. As it slowly cools the spores in the food, unharmed by this mild temperature, begin unfolding themselves. Here are food, moisture, warmth, darkness, the setting is perfect. For food to keep, the spores must be destroyed when they become active bacteria. The three heatings with the lapse of time between, are for the purpose of allowing all the spores to develop.

A steam pressure cooker enables one to maintain a temperature much higher than two hundred and twelve degrees. This is the most effective method in case there are resistent spores to be killed. Such vegetables as corn, okra, butter beans, string beans, spinach, non-acid vegetables, may be kept by this method. Whether food subjected to such heat lose sufficiently in color, flavor, form and possibly vitamines to render the method inacceptable is a matter for personal decision.

Canning by the open kettle method the product is put in the preserving pan or kettle, cooked the desired time for the product in syrup or water, then the food is put in sterilized jars while still hot enough to destroy any chance of organism that may fall into the food from the air. Fill the can to overflowing before fastening the cover, remove any air bubbles so that every atom of bacteria laden air is driven out. This means boiling food vigorously and experience shows that much of the flavor and form are lost in such cooking. Furthermore, it is not always successful with all kinds of foods.

Food containging a fair per cent of acid offer resistence to bacteria in their make up, in addition to the destructive effect of the heat, and are more successfully canned. Tomatoes are outstanding examples of food which can be satisfactorily canned by the open kettle method. They often lose their shape, color and aroma.

In the past a very large quantity of sugar was required when fruits were preserved in large crocks without sealing. But with a knowledge of the bacterial action, the acids in foods, sterilization and with improved equipment preserves can be cooked with much less sugar, preserving the natural flavor, color and is available for bacterial food supply.

Soft fruits may be placed in alternate layers of fruit and sugar in equal proportions or three quarters of a pound of sugar to each pound of fruit and set aside until enough of the juice has been extracted to permit cooking in its own juice without the addition of water.

In preserving large fruit such as firm pears and peaches are cooked as rapidly as possible, dropping a small quantity at a time into boiling sugar syrup made of different degrees of thickness, from one-fourth to three-fourths cups of water is allowed to each pound of sugar and one pound of fruit.

A syrup solution that is too heavy shrivels and hardens fruit before it can absorb the proper amount of syrup to take the place of the extracted juices for this reason. The syrup is sometimes made of one-fourth the total sugar requirement and double its amount in water. Fruits are boiled in this thin syrup until tender and transparent, remove from the preserving kettle to stand while the rest of the sugar is added to syrup and cooked down to proper thickness. The fruit is then replaced brought to a boil, and stored in sterilized bottles or jars in which enough paraffin has been chipped; the paraffin rises to the top and seals the jar. The essential of canning is cleanliness in handling products, care of jars, tops and rubbers, and personal habits.

CANNING DEMONSTRATION

Two canning demonstratons were held in Chilton County last week under the directions of Miss Lavada Curtis, home demonstration agent of Dale County, working through the agricultural extension service of Auburn.

The first demonstration was held Thursday at the home of Mrs. S. P. Shaw at Jemison. There were 17 housewives of the community present and taking part in the work. Eight varieties of vegetables were canned, using the steam pressure cooker and the open bath processing. Also demonstration of canning in tin, using open top sanitary cans and Burpee copper for sealing.

The range of varieties of vegetables canned incuded okra, peas, string beans, butter beans, tomatoes, corn, squash, and soup mixture. Food prservation bulletins were given to each woman attending the demonstration.

The second demonstration was held at the home of Mrs. J. L. Abbott, at Pletcher, Friday, with 16 housewives in attendance. The same outline of work was done as at the demonstration Thursday. With Fiss Curtis at Pletcher was Miss Lelia Belle Smith, who will teach an opportunity school at Pletcher this summer. Miss Smith assisted in the work of enlisting the women of the community in the canning demonstration.

Tom Parrish has returned from Johnson City, Tenn., where he spent a month in a Veterans Hospital.

HISTORY OF OUR ADULT SCHOOLS

(By H. A. Harris)

In the summer of 1928 the Chilton County Board of Education entered a new phase of education; that of adult education or the removal of illiteracy by organizing and operating opportunity schools.

The first year only 9 schools were operated with an enrollment of about 300 (no definite information available). Many who had never attended school were taught to read and write. The second year we organized and operated 24 schools with an enrollment of 679. Ninety-two were taught to read and write for the first time in life. The third year only 14 schools for white people were operated, with an enrollment of 452. Of these 52 were taught to read and write. Nine schools for negroes were operated with an enrollment of 395. One hundred and forty-four were taught to read and write.

In 1930 no schols were operated. In the three years about 200 white people and 144 negroes have been taught to read and write. Several hundred who could read and write very little, can now read and write very well.

The people who have attended these schools have been taught practical arithmetic, health, citizenship and many other things that they needed in every day life. Many have learned to make calculations for themselves, many have learned to write checks and fill out business forms and last, but not least, many have accomplished a long-cherished desire—that of reading the Bible.

Our enrollment in these schools include people from 16 to 83 years of age. Some have traveled eleven miles to attend these schools. Since the opportunity schools are helping a class of people who have never had the opportunities for attending school and who are really worthy and need help there is no doubt but that these efforts are worthwhile and that the money spent in these schools by the County Board of Education brings greater results than a like amount spent in other schools.

CONFERENCE AT UNIVERSITY OF ALA. JUNE 13-17

Several Teachers From Chilton County Were In Attendance

(By J. A. Peterson)

Dr. Charles H. Judd, dean of the School of Education, Chicago University, was director and leader of the conference held at University of Alabama, June 13-17. The principals and supervisors had the opportunity of being in session with the county and city superintendents in considering the problems of school administration. Several Chilton County educators returned from the conference with much data concerning the modern trends in education.

These trends in education take the interest of the child into consideration. The new psychology insists that all the books be written around the interesting expressions of children. Then, the wise teacher, who uses the new method, will guide the child in matters essential for a well-rounded education. The child looks forward with greater interest to this larger unit of study. At the same time the efficient teacher will aid in creating the right atmosphere for this work.

It is the instructor's duty to see that fear disappears from the class room by foreseeing the situation and replacing fear with confidence. Children should be trained in successful behavior, composure, relaxation—beginning each day anew, with a confident teacher and a regular program.

Extra curricular activities give an outlet to activity. They balance the individual, make him better satisfied and adjust him to society. Organized play, if not overdone, does much in securnig health, poise, beauty, composure and fair play.

A beautiful demonstration of physical education work was given us Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. on the University campus. The elementary school children of Tuscaloosa City Schools took part in the demonstration under the leadership of Dr. E. J. Saxman, professor of physical education, University of Alabama, in cooperation with Miss Susie Smith, supervisor of physical education and health education, Tuscaloosa City Schools.

Dr. Judd stated that "the time had arrived for a consideration of the social studies as major elements of the curriculum, rather than minor and incidental factors. However, there must be prepared a new type of material before the social studies can be properly dealt with in the elementary and high school."

The speaker pointed out that social studies have been largely neglected in the American school program and the reason for the ommission of these studies from the curriculum is that the family, church and other social agencies were thought of as proper sources of training for the young people. With the development of the modern social order, it has been increasingly urgent that systematic training be given in the American schools.

The American schools is a success and Europeans are coming over here in larger numbers than ever before, and studying our educational system and institutions.

During the conference the State Parent-Teacher Association held its meeting at the University. Dr. Judd addressed this body of delegates while they were in session. He gave a hsitory of the organization beginning with the first P.-T. A. organization in America under Dr. John Dewey. The purpose of this organization was to support the school and not to run the school; ready to exchange ideas and these ideas worked out intelligently.

In view of the critical condition confronting the public schools in Alabama, it behooves each citizen, each parent to decide, whether you want schools or roads; whether you want schools with libraries, laboratories, shops, etc., or bare walls in which to educate children. If we do not have schools and the best schools, we will spend more money on penal institutions. If we neglect our children—Alamama's greatest asset—we have given them a lasting handicap. Surely it is time that every parent should pause for a moment and consider what an education means to his children. The best school houses, the best equipped schools, and the best instructors are none too good for our children. The future advance of our nation depends largely upon our public schools.

Those attending the state conference from Chilton County were:

Superintendent B. Lawrence, Prof. H. A. Harris, J. M. Parrish, Russell Parrish, Ralph Grant, Mrs. Madge Scarborough Mullins, Miss Bess Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson.

More People Killed By Acidity Than War Say Scientists

"All Deaths from So-Called Natural Causes are Merely the End-Point of Progressive Acid Saturation" Says Well-Known Authority

SCIENCE DISCOVERS The Human Body Consists of Eleven Essential Minerals. A Deficiency of Any of These Causes Many Human Ills.

Most Stomach Disorders, Indigestion, Gas, Bloating, Heartburn, Headaches, Constipation, Biliousness, Nervousness, Rheumatism, Sleeplessness, Loss of Strength and Vigor Are Caused by a Lack of Some Essential Mineral Element and a Deficiency of Vitamins.

In the light of recent scientific discoveries, leading Physicians and Health authorities agree that the human race could be practically free from most ailments, and could live to a ripe old age if the system could be regularly supplied with a sufficient quantity of the essential Minerals and Vitamins.

DEFICIENCY IN MODERN FOODS

The process of refining modern foods; bleaching of flour, rice, sugar, etc.; together with improper cooking takes out of our foods the very things that God intended we should have.

ACIDITY TEARS DOWN HEALTH

As the Mineral content of the body is lowered, slowly but surely the acid content of the system is increased until it finally reaches the point where the organs of assimilation and elimination cannot perform their natural functions. Our powers of resistance are lowered. Disease germs creep into the blood. The system becomes clogged with impurities. Various aches and pains appear, and before we realize what is taking place, we are on the very verge of a physical break-down.

SCIENCE PERFECTS NEW FORMULA

Fortunately for humanity, science has found a way to prevent most of these conditions. After years of careful research and experimentation, a new and remarkable formula has been perfected. This preparation, known as LEE'S MINERAL COMPOUND is a scientific combination of the eleven most essential Mineral Elements of the human body combined with Vitamins. It is not, in any sense, a patent medicine but is more in the nature of a FOOD VITALIZER. By supplying the system with the necessary Minerals and Vitamins, it aids nature in quickly balancing the Mineral content of the body so that good health naturally follows.

LEE'S MINERAL COMPOUND

IRON—which plays an important part in the building of rich, red blood, improves nutrition, exerts a tonic influence upon the nerve centers and increases the haemoglobin of the blood.
IODINE—which acts as an alterant in the blood, a stimulant to the thyroid gland, and is valuable in the treatment of chronic rheumatism, bronchitic asthma and goitre.
COPPER—which exerts a marked influence on the blood making organs and is valuable in the treatment and prevention of anaemia.
CALCIUM—which is essential in proper nutrition of bones, cartilege, tendons and muscles and a valuable reconstructive tonic for feeble, undernourished people.
MAGNESIUM—which acts as a stimulant to the glands of the intestinal tract and helps to clear the system of dangerous metabolic poisons. A valuable treatment in gout and uremia.
MAGANESE—which is valuable in the treatment of neurasthenia, and deficient nerve nutrition.
PHOSPHOROUS—which exerts a tonic effect upon the nervous system, helps in the building of bone, assists in correcting skin diseases such as acne and eczema and stimulates the blood making organs.
POTASSIUM—which has a marked effect upon metabolism and is essential to vital activity.
SODIUM—which assists in supplying a deficiency of phosphates, helps in the correction of constipation, infantile diarrhea and jaundice.
SULPHUR—which is essential to the health of albuminous organs and tissues plays an important part in the physiological processes of the body, increases the intestinal secretions and is an important element in nutrition.
CARBON—which plays an essential part in the building of tissues.
VITAMINS—without which, it is now believed, the human body would wither and die.

MALLORY GIVES SUGGESTIONS ON STATE PROBLEM

Expresses His Views On Way Out of Our Financial Difficulties

Hugh Mallory, who called upon Governor Miller some weeks ago in a letter which received wide publicity and approbation, to balance the state budget to fit the size of her income, has been requested by members of the legislautre to state his views on a way out of the financial difficulties which confront the state, and has complied with some pretinent suggestions which are sure to receive thoughtful consideration.

Mr. Mallory prefaces his suggestions with the statement that he is deeply interested in Alabama's school teachers who have rendered valiant service during the past year, and he urges that some way be worked out for their relief. Good teachers are more important than school houses or the continuance of standards the state cannot afford, he points out.

"Moreover," he continues, "it is imperative that the state live within its means. We are now face to face with the tragic example of the folly of any other course. Everybody knows that we cannot coninue our schools, roads or any other state activities along the ambitious lines upon which they have been conducted during the past decade. Each of them must submit to drastic cuts. Departmental expenses and personnel should be cut to the bone. Overlapping work should be eliminated and consolidations, both of departments and work, should be effected wherever possible."

Mr. Mallory believes that in the application of school funds prime consideration should be given to our grammar high schools and reaffirms his former statement that the legislature shauld make a conservative estimate of the expected revenue of the state to be derived from reasonable taxation, and then allow a given amount to each department, compelling the department to live within the same.

Mr. Mallory believes that many of the debts incurred by the state, which now owes between fifteen and twenty million dollars, have been incurred contrary to law. However, he points out that people have long acquiesced in this method of conducting the state's business, "and for that reason I think these debts should ultimately be paid, but in doing so we should serve notice that in the future no debts incurred without the legal authority will be recognized as an obligation of the state morally, or otherwise."

Mr. Mallory believes that some plan can be devised for handling these back debts whereby the legislature could issue long time, interest-bearing warrants in such form as might be approved by the Supreme Court. "This should be coupled up with a definite announcement that we are not to have any additional taxation and that expenses and appropriations will be cut to meet the revenue of the state," he stated. No ideal solution, acceptable to everyone, can be found, he believes, "but some such plan would relieve us from the impending fear of increased taxation and would set aside the rumor that taxes coming in this year will be used to pay back debts rather than for current expenses. It would also speedily bring about a feeling of satisfaction on the part of the people at large and restore their confidence in the management of state affairs," he points out.

The Lapsey bill, providing for the issuance of warrants along the lines Mr. Mallory suggests, and which the Supreme Court in an advisory opinion held to be unconstitutional, could be re-drafted in such form as to meet these objections. Mr. Mallory believes, and would provide forcaring for the retirement of a stated amount of debt each year. Such a plan would allow current funds to be released for current debts, he points out.

In presenting the ideas Mr. Mallory stated that he is sure that some feasible policy along the line he has indicated "will be welcomed by an overburdened people who are weary and depressed because of the condition of our state affairs, brought about by unwise and extravagant policies.—Selma Times-Journal.

Baked Beans of Puritan Ancestry Says Noted Food News Expert

By JUDGE GORDON,
Daily Food News Expert

THIS "bean porridge" ditty is a funny one for a full grown man to be singing, but I just can't help it. I heard some children singing it a few days ago while they were playing a game, and the simple chant has been running through my mind ever since.

A short time ago I made a trip through the New England states and I found that "bean porridge" is a standard supper dish through these states. The dish is a heritage from early colonists who in turn learned from friendly Indians how to cook it. The popularity of beans in those days was due in great part to the fact that the colonists were very religious, and that the Sabbath was strictly observed by them. The Sabbath holiday began on Saturday night and lasted till Sunday night. During that time nobody was allowed to do any cooking. In fact, in whole villages nobody even had a fire burning.

So all day Saturday every housewife baked beans. They had those beans for supper Saturday night; they had them warmed up for breakfast Sunday morning; and they had them again for the noon meal on Sunday. They warmed the beans in a big stone oven, beside the fireplace, still hot from the night before.

Some housewives baked their beans, and poured them, while still hot, into a bowl in which a strip of muslin had been placed. Part of the muslin hung over the edge of the bowl. When the beans were cold, and hardened into form, they were slipped out, in the muslin bag, and hung from a rafter in the shed. When the mother of the family filled the school lunch pails, she'd go out and hack off a big piece of this frozen food.

To leave history for science, let me tell you that canned beans, whether the pork and bean variety, vegetarian style or Boston style (sweet sauce instead of tomato sauce), are rich in proteins, contain Vitamin "A" and "B" and calcium. They are not only "body-builders," but they are a good source of energy, and make an excellent and inexpensive substitute for meat.

Dried pea beans, most popular for canned beans, come from Michigan, New York and other states. To show the popularity of the three styles of beans mentioned above, let me quote some figures: One corporation, Quaker Maid, which produced over 42,500,000 cans of beans in 1931 for the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., required 283,475,000 lbs of dried beans, or 7,875 carloads, for this output. I think that you will agree with me that this is a very sizeable amount.

I am having less and less trouble these days in convincing people that inexpensive foods can make delicious dishes. My friend and co-worker, George Rector, has done much to make an art of preparing everyday foods, and I have benefited from his suggestions. Try these two recipes. You will be delighted with their conformity to low budgets, and, here is a very important point, they are exceedingly tasty preparations.

Boston Club Sandwich

On a slice of hot buttered toast spread a layer of hot pork and beans. Cover with slices of tomato, add thinly sliced raw onion if desired, and top with two or three slices of crisp bacon.

Sliced bacon.

Turn the beans into a baking dish, add the chili sauce and onion. Cover with slices of bacon, and bake until the bacon is crisp and brown.

RIGINAL

DEATH OF WILL W. WILLIAMS

The sudden death of Mr. Will W. Williams at his home in Mt. Nebo community last Friday, brought to a close the life of one of Chilton County's most honored, useful and beloved citizens. He was in his normal condition of health until about 8:00 a.m. and died at 9:45 a.m.

Mr. Williams was born in West End, Birmingham, June 17, 1865, coming to Chilton County when a small boy. He joined the M. E. church in his early twenties. He attended church often and enjoyed religious work. He lived a moral life and was faithful to the end. Only a few days ago he made the remark that he was ready to go any time the Lord called him.

Mr. Williams was a kind, honest and faithful man in every respect. He always had a smile and kind words for everyone. His friends were numerous and all loved Uncle Will, as he was better known.

On January 2nd, 1890, Mr. Williams was married to Miss Anna Culp. They had seven children, all of whom survive their father. The children are Mrs. O. Y. Sims, Billingsley; Mrs. Dock Culver, and Mrs. W. B. Deason of Birmingham; Mrs. Owen of Shiloh community, Mr. Morris Wiliams of Selma; Messrs. J. D. and Eugene Williams of Mt. Nebo cummunity. There are 21 grand children still living.

The body of the deceased was buried at Mt. Nebo July 2. His funeral was conducted by Rev. Metcalf, assisted by Rev. F. A. Gibson.

We bow in submission to wisdom, superior to our own, knowing that the will of our creator must be done, and hoping and striving that we may meet our brother again where happiness shall reign forever and tears and heartaches will never be known.

CONCORD JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

We take this privilege to speak a few words of praise for our club boys and girls. They have had two plays this year and gave the proceeds to the school. They and their invited guests had a picnic from their own finance, and to say the least we believe the picnic was perfectly temperate in every respect, except probably in excessive eating.

They are to be commended for this and other activities, and have our undaunted appraisal, and the same of the community at large.

We believe our community has a club of boys and girls unsurpassed by any. Worthwhile boys and girls are good evidence of real men and women.—S. L. Baker, S. M. Devaughn, O. H. McDowell, School trustees; Ella Baker, president P.-T. A.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(©, 1932, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for July 17

THE PASSOVER

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 11:1-12:36.

GOLDEN TEXT—Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us.—I Corinthians 5:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Saving His People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The First Passover.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Memorial Feast.

TOPIC FOR YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS—Leader, Liberator and Lawgiver.

I. The Passover Instituted (vv. 1-23).

1. The date (v. 2). With the institution of the Passover came a change in the order of time. The common year was rolling on as usual, but with reference to God's chosen people, the order was interrupted and everything was made to date from this event. The time of one's salvation is the real beginning of time and life for the one redeemed.

2. The lamb set apart (vv. 3-5). This lamb must be a male without blemish, indicating that it must be both representative and perfect.

3. The lamb was killed by the whole congregation (v. 6). This shows that it was not for the individual only, but for the entire assembly. The setting apart of the lamb was not sufficient—it must be killed, for "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins."

4. The blood of the slain lamb was to be placed upon the side posts and lintels of the door (v. 7). When the destroying angel went through the land he passed over the houses where the door posts were sprinkled with blood (v. 33). The blood on the posts and lintels was the ground of peace.

5. Israel feeding upon the lamb (vv. 8-10). This denotes fellowship. Judgment preceded feasting. The lamb roasted signified the action of fire in God's judgment at the cross. The head, the legs, and purtenance thereof show that in the substitutionary sacrifice the understanding, the walk, and all that pertains thereto are involved. This shows that the atonement of Jesus Christ involved his obedience to law as well as his suffering in the stead of his own. The eating of unleavened bread signifies that no sin can enter into fellowship with Christ. Leaven signifies corruption (I Cor. 5:7, 8). The bitter herbs suggest the bitterness of Christ's sufferings. His sufferings were not mainly physical, but moral and spiritual.

6. They ate the passover ready for action (v. 11). They went forth with a staff in hand, shoes on their feet, and with girded loins. The girding of the loins betokened separation from sin and preparation and readiness for service. The fact of being shod indicated their willingness and readiness to march out of Egypt. The staff in hand indicated their nature as pilgrims, leaning upon a support outside of themselves. They were to leave behind them the place of death and darkness and march to the promised land.

7. The uncircumcised denied participation in the feast (vv. 43-49). Circumcision was typical of regeneration. The significance of the requirement is that only those who have become new creatures by the power of the cross have a right to sit at the Passover feast. Only the regenerated have fellowship with Christ.

II. The Significance of the Passover (vv. 24-28).

It was a memorial institution calling to mind the deliverance of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage.

III. The Awful Judgment (vv. 28, 30).

At midnight the Lord smote all the firstborn in the land from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sat on his throne unto the firstborn of the captive that was in bondage, even the firstborn of the cattle. There was death that night in every home throughout Egypt where the blood was not found. A great and awful cry went up from the Egyptians. This is typical of the coming day of God's wrath when all who are not resting under the shadow of the blood of Christ shall perish.

IV. The Great Deliverance (vv. 31-36).

So mighty was this stroke that Pharaoh called for Moses in the night and requested him to be gone with his flocks and herds. The Israelites made ready for their journey. They demanded of the Egyptians jewels of silver, and gold, and raiment. The word "borrow" in verse 35 means "demand" instead of the sense in which we use it today. It was just on the part of the Israelites, who had served the Egyptians so long, to demand now some compensation.

The proud parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Jackson, and they are going to call the little one Mabel Alice.

The only person who can make any more noise than a saxaphone player is a demagogue politician orating in behalf of the dear people.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert)

Troubles of the delegates at Lausanne, seeking to settle the reparations question, and of those at Geneva trying to come to some agreement on disarmament, tend to prove once more the statement which has often been made by neutral observers of the European situation, to the effect that the difficulties of the old continent are not so much financially as politically. We hear all sorts of pleas from financiers in Europe and in our own country to the effect that European countries ought to get together and bury their difficulties for the sake of the general economic situation. The world, we are told, is fast going to ruin and our modern civilization is doomed, unless the European nations find some means of getting together and starting a sane and constructive program designed to turn the world toward normalacy again.

And yet, often as this advice has been given, when the delegates assemble in conference, representing the nations of Europe, great and small, they are unable to arrive at any definite conclusion in spite of the economic situation which in most parts of Europe seems to be steadily growing worse. In short, the delegates of the various countries will not yield to the dangerous economic situation. This can only mean one thing, and that is that the principal European differences are not economic, but political. Each prefers to run the chance of natoinal ruin, rather than to yield anything tangible to the other fellow.

The conferences at Geneva and Lausanne are abundant proof of this. At Lausanne pleas have been put forward that Germany and France patch their troubles in the interest of the common good. Yet every attempt at an agreement has failed and there is no assurance that anything tangible or lasting may be accomplished. It is indeed true that the delegates may go through the motions of agreeing, to save their faces, but no student of affairs, that we know about, believes anything lasting will be accomplished.

France is determined to save something in the way of reparations and Germany says that she can not pay any more reparations. France is determined to save the reparations scheme not because she feels that to let it go by the boards would mean the ultimate revision of the Treaty of Versailles and the end of the French political dominance in Europe. The Germans, while they probably could not pay anything for the present, are determined to get out of reparations for all time to come, not because they feel that they may never be able to pay anything again, but for the reason that they want to end the whole scheme and then get rid of some burdens imposed on them by the treaty of peace, so interfering with French control of the continent, and increasing German prestige.

So the talk about the way Europe is going on the rocks in an economical way falls on deaf ears. The various nations are determined not to give in any further, and they are dominated principally by political questions. Perhaps they recall the fact that Europe has been ruined before and has survived, although they ought not forget the story about the old pitcher that went to the well once too many times. At any rate the economic situation is secondary with the statesmen who are running the nations of Europe, and it is probably equally true that economic conditions are secondary with the various peoples too. Otherwise the statesmen would not be able to survive.

There is a lesson in this for Uncle Sam. We have heard our government advised time and time again to cancel the European debts and lower the tariffs to relieve the economic situation of Europe and so save the world. But if, as demonstrated here, the trouble with Europe is political rather than economic, the program of cancellation would only be a temporary remedy, and nothing could be done to really help Europe until the nations over there straighten out their political difficulties. Cancellation and tariff revision, under such circumstances would only injure the United States without helping Europe. That is why the American administration has repeatedly advised the statesmen of Europe to iron out their own troubles and agree among themselves before they ask any further sacrifices on the part of Uncle Sam.

PEOPLE WILL APPROVE THIS STATEMENT

We are in receipt of a pamphlet (not printed at government expense) from Senator John H. Bankhead, in which is printed copies of speeches he made in the United States Senate recently while the federal revenue bill was being considered.

Scanning the remarks of Mr. Bankhead on this subject we find many expressions that will be highly applauded by the taxpayers who may chance to read them. We pick out this one as especially intereating:

"Down in the Agricultural Department they have a bureau to study the sex life of wild animals, and there is an appropriation for that bureau in the agricultural appropriation bill. There is a bureau to investigate insects that affect man and animals—sandflies, fleas, and other things of that sort."

Continuing his remarks, Mr. Bankhead stated it was his conviction that people of the United States ought not to be called upon to pay more taxes, merely to maintain bureaus and commissions of the type referred to above. Referring to the members of the Senate and Congress, Mr. Bankhead made this statement which must have sounded like thunder tones to some of his fellow-statesmen:

"If we could only brace ourselves to take that course, to cut to the bone, to perform a major operation, then we could almost release the finance committee from its search for all sorts of nuisance taxes, taxes upon checks, taxes upon admissions, all kinds of taxes which were applied during the World War.

"If we would simply make up our minds and have the firmness to reduce the appropriations around two and a half billion dollars, we would bring a sigh of relief to the people of this country."

What a pity there are not enough statesmen in the United States Congress to see the situation as Mr. Bankhead expresses it, and have the backbone to vote accordingly.

It is reported that Germany may offer France an economic and military alliance. When that is perfected we will expect to go to the zoo and see the lion and the lamb playing a friendly game of ping pong.

European nations in conference at Lausanne are bending every effort to find a solution to the world's economic difficulties by saddling as much of the burden as possible on to Uncle Sam.

It may be necessary to go to the World court to find out just who was the actual winner of that Sharkey-Schmeling fight.

It is all right to say that prosperity is just around the corner but the average man wants to be convinced is that he is not riding on a merry-go-around.

Now that the national conventions are over and when Congress goes home, maybe we can get down seriously to the task of doing a little fishing.

MORAL ECHOES

(By D. W. Hashaw)

When the Democratic Convention in Chicago adopted the repeal platform, pandemonium tore loose in the convention hall. State banners were moved into a long line of wet demonstration. Senator Abington snatched the Arkansas banner from the hands of Governor Parnell and started with it into the wet demonstration. A number of dry delegates seeing what took place leaped into the fray and snatched the Arkansas banner and tore it into ribbons. Their reason for this was that they had rather see their banner torn into strips than to see it a second time in the wet parade. These were delegates after the heart of the Man of Galilee. That was the only thing happening in connection with the convention when character and conviction were in evidence. To the man who was listening in, it was a spineless convention on the whiskey problem. Democrats at home must develop some spine to combat this wet deluge, or it will not be ten years before the whiskey business will snatch our flag from our hands and tear into ribbons the red, white and blue of our American life. The fight is on to a death struggle.

The farmer came home late in the afternoon and as he seated himself on the back steps his devoted companion came out of the home and seated herself by his side. Together they talked over the sowing of the plantation that day. The husband complained of being tired. He said, "Wife, today many seed have gone from my fingers into the soil." That farmer had spent the day sowing seed into the soil. By faith he was looking down the months ahead to the harvest time. Life to that man and his companion was just the sowing and reaping. A recent writer charges this same thing to American life in this language, "We have been sowing foolishness and now we are reaping folly. We have been sowing sin and now we are reaping lawlessness. We have been sowing loose moral conditions and we are reaping the breaking down of society. We have been sowing pleasure and we are reaping empty church pews. We have been sowing wrong ideals of patriotism and now we are reaping applause for Babe Ruth and Jack Sharkey in place of applause for the red, white and blue of our flag. We have been sowing information in unrestrained university life, and now we are reaping intelligence without character. We have been sowing a false conception of science and we are reaping a crop of self conceited fools who think that they can dethrone God." We are reaping today what we have been sowing.

While viewing the rapids below the Niagra Falls, our guide pointed out to us a boulder from which the English swimmer leaped into the water to swim the rapids. This man had crossed the English Channel in the water and said that he could swim any stream of water in the world. The authorities at Washington would not let him try the rapids from the American side and so he went over to the Canadian side and took his fatal plunge. Jumping into that surging, rushing, rolling body of mad water was nothing less than madness on the part of the swimmer. For the applauditis of men he took a risk that meant certain death. Many hours after he had disappeared beneath the water, his body was taken from a whirlpool several miles down the stream. Why will men lose their heads for the applauditis of men? The spirit of taking a risk is one of the most deadly foes moving in the human race. If "no one but a fool will take a risk" there must be plenty of fools still alive. Let mangled bodies, broken bones and newly made graves speak the truth, "I took a risk." The skillful swimmer thought that he could swim the rapids and took the risk. The auto driver thought that he could cross ahead of the train and he took the risk. The empty skull thought that he could get there quicker by speeding up and he took the risk. The money mad thought that he could make a lot of easy cash by stilling the fire that burns out vitality and character and he took the risk. Taking a risk means death sooner or later.

I visited a big man-of-war as she was anchored in the Hudson Bay. We had a guide given us as soon as we landed on board. On our sight seeing trip we were carried to view one of the big guns mounted on deck. I stood by the side of that gun and listened to the description of this pride of the navy. It weighed hundreds of tons, its barrel looked like a smoke stack, it cost more than a hundred thousand dollars to make it and it cost five thousand dollars to fire it one time. The guide said to us, "That gun is just one of our many pumpers." I stood by the side of that death dealer and thought. There was represented in that gun a handsome endowment for a university. I saw there the money that would have built more than 100 beautiful churches in the rural sections. I saw there enough money to support 100 missionaries for a year in a foreign field. The cannon was a thing of beauty but also a thing that dealt out death. Do you want to know why we have hard times? It is because we have spent our money in producing the things that will kill, rather than in spending it for things that will bring in more abundant life. How foolish to put ten million dollars into a war ship when people are straving for bread.

Of course it is a little tough for federal employees to have to take a month's vacatoin without pay, but anyhow they still have their jobs with a reasonable assurance of a pay check twice a month.

The way Congress hangs on would lead one to think that the statesmen were paid by the day.

IT'S HARD TO BEAT

The biggest liars of the fishing world are giving their imaginations a workout in preparation for the annual Alabama deep sea rodeo in Mobile Bay. Aubust 8, 9, and 10. For Fisherman Watts, of Louisville, Ky., who won the annual "biggest liar" contest last year has announced that he will be back to defend his laurels against all prevaricators. Here's Mr. Watts' 1931 prize winner: "Six of us were fishing, when suddenly the man in the bow hooked a mighty tarpon that threatened to pull him overboard. The nearest man sprang to his aid and grabbed him around the waist just as he started over the side of the boat. But what should come along but another big tarpon that grabbed the hooked fish by the tail and started pulling both men overboard. One after another we went to the aid of the struggling men but as we did a new tarpon would hook on behind the others until finally we were having a tug of war with a school of tarpon. Giving a last mighty heave, he pulled the whole school up to the side of the boat but the darn line broke and they all got away."—Alabama Journal.

TO CONSIDER CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS

The Republican Executive Committee of the Sixth Alabama District will meet at Gary Springs, in Bibb County, on July 20th, to consider the matter of nominating a Republican candidate for Congress.

This question evokes little interest among Republicans in the district, because of the fact that there is no visible possibility of electing a Republican to Congress from this district.

Congressman Oliver, who has represented the Sixth District for many years, is strongly entrenched. Then too, since the legislature of Alabama redistricted the State, they have it arranged in a manner that was carefully calculated to minimize the possibility of electing a Republican, not only in this district, but every district in the State.

There are some Republicans in the Sixth District who would be capable and worthy of the place of Representative in the United States Congress, but there will not likely be one among them so optimistic as to accept the nomination at this time and make a campaign.

As this paper has said before, since it appears that we shall have to be content with Democratic representation in Congress, we feel fortunate that Mr. Oliver is our man. He is one of the strongest men among Alabama's Congressional contingent, and withal, one of the most genuinely courteous and affable men in the State's public life.

Old Time Community Affairs

In the hurry and bustle of modern life, I believe we are losing out on an old custom, which, if retained, would make our everyday life more pleasant. In other days, from time to time the people of the different communities would all meet on different occasions, such as picnics, corn huskings, log rollings, Sunday singings, etc., at which they would really and truly enjoy themselves. Last Sunday afternoon I attended the singing at Providence. I suppose nearly everyone in that whole community was there, as well as numbers of others from "outside." The singing was good—I enjoyed every bit of it. And then, before the beginning and after the closing of the singing, the people were all gathered around out on the yard, chatting, joking, and having a good time generally, among themselves. From time to time I listen to some elderly person tell of the "good old days" when people really enjoyed themselves. It is true that life is much easier for us now than it was in olden times, but I just wonder if we really "live" like they did then—I wonder if we really enjoy life and get as much out of it as they did then. I don't think so.

Mr. Hoover and Mr. Miller

For some time lots of people have been laying the depression in Mr. Hoover's lap. Now, people of Alabama seem to lay the bad conditions of the state in Governor Miller's lap. How anyone can blame these two men, personally, for conditions, as they do, I am unable to understand. How can one blame Mr. Hoover for our nation's economic troubles, when there is a belligerent Congress fighting every move he makes, no matter what it is. Too, in the state's affairs, Mr. Miller has been balked at every turn by forces which oppose his administration. Now, I understand, a move is on foot to impeach the governor for incompetency, and other like charges. I cannot believe that anything will result from this move, but if so, the governor will be the victim of circumstances beyond his control. In both cases, state and national, a little cooperation would go a long way toward correcting the troubles which surround us. Quarreling and scrapping amoung ourselves will get us nowhere—working together would work wonders.

Will We Have Schools?

For the past several days I have been busy going around over a section of the county listing children in the school census. A number of people wanted to know "Will we have any schools this winter?" For the past several weeks it has looked like it might be impossible for Alabama schools to open this fall, but in one of the morning papers one day this week I noticed an article in which some state official stated that the schools MUST open—that some provision MUST and WILL be made, whereby the state will be able to run the schools this winter. This must surely be good news to numbers of people. The people of the state owe it to their children that they shall have a chance of an education. Whatever has caused the hard times, it most certainly is not the fault of the children, and they should not be penalized.

Our Boy—Jack

"Our Boy—Jack," as Jack Hayes is known in and around Clanton by his baseball fan friends, is proving a valuable man in the Chicago White Sox line-up. At the first of the season we stated that we would try to keep the readers of the Union-Banner, and Jack's friends, posted on how he kept coming along this summer. At the first of the season, for one reason or another, Jack was kept out of the game. But a few weeks ago he was given a chance, and is making good with a bang. Ever since Jack has been in the majors he has fielded with the best of them, and, now that he is being given his regular turn at bat, he is going good in that part of the game, too. He is batting in second position in the line-up at present, which calls on him to put on the bunting act pretty often, and you all know he was always a wizard at that. Do you remember back during the high school days, when Jack, Crit Jones and Howard Thompson used to use all kinds of crazy antics to win ball games for Chilton County High? Well, Jack is still at it. Every now and then he laces one over the fence or into the bleachers for a home run, too. He's good, and we're proud of "Our boy—Jack."

Let's Hope

Mr. Babson, the statistician, predicts a turn for the better for economic conditions during the next ninety days. You remember he's the same man who predicted that cotton would sell for seven cents a pound last fall, and that if the farmers wouldn't grease the skids by glutting the market, the price would stay up, and maybe get better. Well, cotton did go to seven cents, but the old boys just couldn't stand the pressure. When that price level was reached they dumped everything they had in the way of cotton, except shirts and overalls, on the market, and, as was to be expected, it slid out from under them. We are now about to draw a new hand in this cotton game. Why not take a lesson from the past—be reasonable. And, by the way, let's hope Mr. Babson knows his stuff again, like he has in the past. By all the laws of averages, we are due to see the beginning of the return to normal soon. It can't come any too soon for me. It might be a little hard on the heart to see a little money, but I'd risk it right now.—Man in the Moon.

Slow Driving Unusual

As I started to work one morning last week, Beck Barnett came by driving Rockett's hardware truck. He let me ride to town. It was seven o'clock and Beck was already dripping wet with sweat. He had delivered a load of cement somewhere. As we rode to town, passing corners and crossings I noticed Beck was driving very carefully. My remark about it brough the statement from Beck that these days when a fellow wants to "show out" he drives slow. "Used to be you had to drive fast to show out," said Beck, "but now everybody drives fast." That statement had such a keen application to present-day automobile driving, it stuck in my mind as worthy of a paragraph.

Gillette and Goodrich Dead

News dispatches Monday morning related the death of two figures of international prominence in the business world. King Champ Gillette, who perfected the double edge safety razor blade to brighten the shaver's morning, died at the age of 77, in California. Charles C. Goodrich, age 60, wealthy tire magnate, and member of the Maine House of Representatives, died Sunday at his home in York, Maine. He was the son of B. F. Goodrich, founder of the Goodrich Rubber Company, one of America's leading tire manufacturing industries.

Shorty Miner Comes Back

Shorty Miner is back in Clanton to live. His friends are glad to see him among us once more. For a few years he has been living in Montgomery. "I don't know what I am going to do yet," said Mr. Miner, "but I will find some way of making a living." Jobs are few and hard to get in these times, but I will venture the guess that "Shorty" Miner will have a job before he is in Clanton many weeks. He is a man who is widely known for his integrity, honesty, industry, and clean living. You can't keep a man like that down. He is worth too much to be left idle.

Visitor From Florida

Hon. Cecil Smith, attorney, of Lakeland, Florida, is spending his vacation with home folks in Clanton. Cecil is the son of the late lamented Col. A. C. Smith, of Clanton. Discussing conditions in Florida, Mr. Smith said: "I believe people down there are in a better spirit, financially, than they are here. We have gotten accustomed to hard times in Florida, because we have had them longer than you people up here. People of Florida have been down in the dumps ever since the boom; and the truth of the business is the people are in better spirits now, I believe than at any time since the flush times of six years ago."

Development of Mineral Springs

Through the efforts and activity of Mr. W. T. Hand, of Jemison, Mineral Springs, in Beat 12, is getting back on the map. Mr. Hand has begun extensive improvements at the spring, having built a nice cottage, with rooms fully furnished to accomodate any who might seek a quiet cool place to rest. And still there is the spring, which has for many, many years been recognized as the finest water in Chilton County. The great overflowing fountain has been built around with concrete, and a sanitary drinking fount installed. Beautiful flower beds give a touch of charm to the place. People who go there can get delightful meals at the boarding house. Mineral Springs had a season of popularity that lasted for quite a while twenty years ago. If present plans of Mr. Hand are not interrupted, there is not any reason why the popularity of this lovely retreat should not return with even broader extent than it used to have.

Dr. John R. Sampey Here

Those who attended the Mission Study Institute at Clanton Baptist church last week were especially impressed by the lectures from Dr. John R. Sampey, president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. This week Dr. Sampey is preaching in a revival at Verbena Baptist church. We are gratified to learn that he will preach in the revival at the Clanton Baptist Church in the first days of September. John R. Sampey is one of the towers of strength in Southern Baptist denominational work. Clanton and Chilton County are proud that we have the honor of some local relationship with him. His father lies buried in the Clanton cemetery. He is a brother of W. L. Sampey, who was at one time a leading merchant here. Mrs. A. C. Duggar, wife of the pastor of Verbena Baptist church, is a daughter of Dr. Sampey.

Our County-Wide Picnic

County Agent Stapp is going ahead with arrangements for the county-wide picnic at Popwell Woods, just south of Clanton, on July 22. The undergrowth is being cleared away from the grounds, and the beauty of the place is becoming more and more impressive. Loud speakers will be installed so everyone may hear the program. Under the plans any white family in the county may come and bring a picnic lunch and enjoy the day without any expense. Such additional refreshments as may be desired can be bought on the grounds. Mr. Stapp says "I hope that farmers, merchants, lawyers, doctors, bankers, and in fact, people in every vocation will join and help make the program on this day really worth something to Chilton County." It can be made a day to go down as important in the history of our county if our people will come together and take advantage of the oportunity to meet each other and become better acquainted.

Dr. Gragg is Air-Minded

Dr. V. J. Gragg has always had a weakness for airplanes. When the things first came in fashion, he could not rest until he had taken a flight in one. Then he flew again and again at every opportunity. Finally he got a notion in his head he would like to drive a ship. He began to read "flying" magazines. The bug kept biting. He got acquainted with a flyer in Montgomery a while back. This acquaintance only aggravated the doctor's desire to drive a flying machine. One day last week he was in Montgomery. His flyer friend carried him out to his landing field. They got aboard and went to ride. While they were up in the air the doctor took a couple of turns at piloting. Did he like it? I bet it was as big a thrill as when he learned to swim in Walnut Creek. I would not be surprised if we yet see Dr. Gragg with a plane of his own, flying where and when he takes a notion.

POOR OR

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

MORE AIR NITROGEN FOR ALABAMA FARMS

Auburn, Ala., July 12.—Billions of little nitrogen-gathering plants will operate on Alabama farms next winter and spring. They will be Austrian winter peas and hairy vetch, two winter legumes which are very popular among Alabama farmers and gaining rapidly in favor.

J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, Auburn, says that annual plantings increased from almost nothing a dozen years ago to 3,000,000 pounds of seed in the fall of 1931. He hopes that the 1931 record will be equaled in the fall of 1932. With adequate finances it would be much larger, he explained.

"These little plants," continued Mr. Lowery, "Will grow during the winter and early spring. They will take nitrogen from the air and store it in the soil. In addition they will produce a lot of humus, another important need of Alabama soils."

And this is the best way now known for Alabama farmers to enrich their lands, he added. The cost is very low in comparison to commercial fertilizer, and inoculation for winter legumes will prepare an acre of land to make big yields of either cotton or corn (or any other summer crop planted after the winter legumes are plowed under next spring.

By planting winter legumes the experiment station at Auburn and the county agents have found that Alabama farmers can increase their herds and flocks of livestock and poultry because they can produce feed. Unless either hairy vetch or Austrian peas are planted in the fall it is uneconomical to produce corn on most land in Alabama.

Cotton too, makes much bigger yields following either hairy vetch or Austrian peas. Some of the best cotton field yields in Alabama are being made following hairy vetch and Austrian peas, Mr. Lowery said. Where this is done the winter legume adds all the nitrogen needed, in addition to legumes, leaving only phosphate and potash to buy.

MARSHALL COUNTY PRECINCT ESCAPES THE FOREST FIRES

Montgomery, Ala., July 12.—Marshall County precinct No. 22 wholly escaped damage from forest fires during the first half of 1932, according to field inspections made by the Alabama Commission of Forestry. This is notwithstanding that the first quarter of the year was one of the driest of similar periods on records.

That freedom from forest fires is more significant than the mere fact itself, is the view expressed at the office of the Commission of Forestry. It is regarded that landowners who will go to the trouble to exclude fire from their holdings usually practice good judgement in other forestral matters. Thus the timber owner who is wide awake enough to protect his property is usually too good a business man to sell the trees before they are mature. Further, he will make certain that sufficient seed trees or young seedling and saplings are left to reforest the land after the present yield is removed.

PLANS BEING MADE FOR FARM MEETING

Auburn, Ala., July 12.—How to farm better and how to live better are subjects which will be emphasized during the annual farmers week exercises at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, August 2, 3, and 4. Attention will be focused upon "better farming under 1932 conditions," said Prof L. N. Duncan, extension service director.

Successful farming under present conditions, explained Prof. Duncan, requires producing, financing and marketing at lowest costs. With low costs must be combined a system of living at home by producing cheaply food for the family and feed for the animals.

Facts about the farmer and cooperation will be presented during the annual meeting of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation which will be held in Auburn during these three days. One of the speakers will be Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

A special program is being arranged for farm women, said Miss Helen Johnson, state home demonstration agent. The Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Club Women, of which Mrs. J. D. Giles of Selma is president, will hold an annual convention in Auburn those three days, said Miss Johnson. Their program will be of general interest and in addition, there will be general sessions with men and women attending.

"Our intention," said Prof. Duncan, "is to make the program interesting and as practical as it can be made. We hope that our visitors will enjoy their stay at Auburn and know that they will get information which will be helpful to them on their farms and in their homes."

COTTON ACREAGE IS REDUCED 9.5 PER CENT

The United States reduced its planted acreage to cotton by 9.5 per cent according to the government report. This gives 37,390,000 acres planted last year, reports F. W. Gist, 189,000 planted last year.

Alabama reduced her acreage by 10 per cent, the total being 3,079,000 acres compared with 3,421,000 planted last year, reports F. W. Gist state and federal statistician for the department of agriculture.

The reduction in Alabama varied considerably in different sections of the state. The north tier of the counties above the Black Belt made a reduction of about 1 per cent. The Black Belt reduced its acreage about 2 per cent. The Piedmont section reduced about 6 per cent. That part of the state south of the Black Belt reduced about 11 per cent.

The failure to reduce more in north Alabama and in the Black Belt is thought to be due to the return of quite a number of people from the industrial sections to the farms. It is estimated that about 9,000 persons returned in this way to the farm this year, leaving about 6,000 net new farmers. Most of this gain in new farms was experienced around the Birmingham district and on the large plantations of the Black Belt.

Secretary of the Treasurer, Mills, recently announced the deficit of the U. S. Treasury is the largest in this country's peace-time history. Receipts for the year ended Thursday, June 30, reached $2,121,000,000, he said, while expenditures mounted to $5,006,000,000.

A London dispatch, July 1, states that Great Britain made ready yesterday to raise a special $11,000,000 annual tarriff barrier against the Irish Free State in retaliation for that dominion's failure to buy land annuities.

Rev. G. W. Stewart, pastor, announces that the revival meeting at Concord (Billingsley) will begin next Sunday. The pastor will be assisted in the meeting by Rev. G. B. Golden.

COUNTY PICNIC FRIDAY, JULY 22

Everybody Urged To Make Preparations To Attend This Big Event

Did you tell your neighbors about the big county-wide picnic that county agent Stapp is arranging for July 22nd? Mr. Stapp states that he is going to do everything he can to make the 22nd of July a day long to be remembered by those who attend the picnic. Mr. Stapp is having the grounds cleaned now. The picnic will be in that beautiful grove of pines and oaks about 1½ miles south of Clanton on the highway and just across the highway from Mr. Boswell's barbecue stand.

Mr. Boswell has offered to cooperate with Mr. Stapp in every way he can to help make it a great day.

Mr. Stapp has already arranged a splendid program and is now making ready to get up loud speakers so every one can hear. The fiddlers are registering for the fiddlers contest.

Mr. Stapp states that he is arranging this picnic so every white family that so desires can come, see and hear a fine program, spread their own lunch and have a good time without having to spend a nickel.

Mr. Stapp says that he is going to provide plenty good free ice water, and for those who just want to spend some money that day, he has arranged to have on sale cold drinks, ice cream and barbecue, the profit from the sales to go toward helping defray expenses of cleaning the grounds, building speaker stands and seats, and providing ice water and other comforts.

We are wondering who will get the $2.50 gold piece for having the largest family—all present. Someone suggested Eugene Mullins. Well, there are so many good things on the program until we hope everybody will cooperate with Mr. Stapp in making it a great day in Chilton County.

SINGING AT LIBERTY

There will be an all-day singing at Liberty church, on the Highway, in Autauga County, the third Sunday in July. All singers are cordially invited. The Clanton Quartet is expected.—I. D. Huett.

Miss Frances O'Neal and her mother, of Columbia, are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Deal, at Lay Dam.

Since 1930 Connecticut, Indiana, North Carolina, Oregon, South Dakota, and Washington have enacted laws lessening tax penalties by allowing installment payments, or otherwise reducing the hardships of the tax burden, principally on real estate.

The pink boll worm of cotton was discovered in Florida in June. The infestation was found in a small field of cotton near Miami and also in a field of wild cotton in a section extending from Miami to Key West. This region is about 400 miles from the commercial cotton plantings.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish publicly to thank our friends and neighbors for their many expressions of kindness and sympathy in the sadness that fell upon us by the death of W. A. Franklin. The people were good to us in a manner beyond words to express; and our thanks and appreciation for the same are likewise unmeasureable.

We especially thank those who took part in the beautiful burial ceremony—M. E. J. Brand, the undertaker, Rev. M. J. Parrish, Rev. B. Lawrence, and the Clanton quartet. —The Franklin family.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. W. W. Williams and children wish to express their thanks to friends, Martin and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy shown them in their sorrow by the sudden death of husband and father. May God shower His richest blessings upon every one, is our prayer.

Mr. and Mrs. Matt Ware and children left Clanton in their car early Monday morning for Detroit, Mich., where they will spend several days visiting Mrs. Ware's brothers, John and Wallace Fox.

Mr. A. N. (Shorty) Miner has moved back to Clanton from Montgomery. His many friends here are glad to see him and his family back at home.

NOTICE

Everybody that is interested in the Isabella cemetery will please meet at the church Friday morning, July 15, for the purpose of cleaning off the same. We will also have another cleaning on the following Tuesday, July 19th.

Some Figures on County's Cripples

(One phase of Child Welfare Work)

The Chilton County child welfare records show the names of 51 cripple children in the county, 45 of whom have attended the clinics held in Clanton under the auspices of the Cripple Children's Society, the state department of education and the welfare work's being discontinued Child Welfare department. On account of the depression and child in this county, a clinic is not being held this year here.

Mr. E. H. Gentry, supervisor of vocation rehabilitation from the state department of education was in the county last week visiting some of the most urgent cases to assist them in making arrangements for hospitalization. Selma and Montgomery have raised enough money to keep two beds for cripple children in one of the Selma hospitals and with Mr. Gentry's assistance, those beds will be full all the time.

The following report is a statement of the cripples from July 1930 to July 1931, and since that time 5 have had operations and two given artificial appliances.

BEN LYONS AGAIN PLAYS ROLE WITH CONSTANCE BENNETT

Ben Lyon's appearance in a leading part with Constance Bennett in "Lady With a Past," opening at the Wadesonian Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday July 20 and 21, marks his second prominent assignment with this RKO star. He previously appeared with her in "Bought" which coincidently also was written by Harriet Henry whose novel supplied the blonde star's current vehicle.

Lyon is of German-English parentage, having been born on a certain February in Atlanta, Georgia. He was educated in Baltimore, played baseball and basketball as well as small roles in the school dramatic club.

His earliest ambition was to become a doctor, which seems to be the ambition of almost every Baltimore boy because of the proximity of John Hopkins University. The possibility of an M. D. at the end of Lyon's name was dispelled when the family moved to New York.

While going to school in the big city, Ben visited a studio to watch filming. The man he chanced to ask "how to get into the movies" was a director who took a good look at the lad and told him to report the next day. He played extra roles without getting very far. Se he tried the stage. His first important role was in "Seventeen"; then he played with Jeanne Eagels in "The Wonderful Thing." Other play followed, his favorite role being in "The Boomerang."

Lyon prefers the screen to the stage because of the opportunity for home life. His favorite screen role was in "Hell's Angers." His favorite screen star is Bebe Daniels, whom he married on June 14, 1930. His ambition is to become a director. If he should forsake the screen he would go into aviation.

"Lady With a Past" was directed by Edward H. Griffith and adapted by Horace Jackson. In addition to Lyon the splendid cast with Constance Bennett includes David Manners, Astrid Allwyn, Merna Kennedy, Albert Conti, Don Alvarado, Nella Walker, Blanche Frederici and Dorothy Christy.

John J. Sigwald, of Opelika, Boy Scout Exerutive for this area, was in Clanton last week.

R. L. Duffey of Mt .Creek was in Clanton Wednesday morning on his way to Maplesville, where he will attend the annual meeting of the Chilton County Masonic Conference Wednesday and Thursday.

BIG WESTERN FEATURE

A fast-moving unusually thrilling western feature, keyed to a speedy tempo, is to be said of "Beyond the Rockies," the latest in RKO series of westerns starring Tom Keene, which comes to the Wadesonian Theatre Friday and Saturday, July 15 and 16.

Directed by Fred Allen, the film presents popular young western star in a series of hair-raising and dramatic episodes in which he escapes death and danger by daring ruse and fearless nerve. He depicts an undercover agent hired by the cattlemen's association to discover the lair of a group of cattle rustlers, the public enemies of the frontier days. Audaciously he enters into conflict with the foe by accepting the foremanship of their ranch.

Rochelle Hudson, a newcomer to the leading lady ranks and a youngster for whom great things are predicted, portrays the heroine, and is seen as the daughter of the owner of a cattle ranch which is beset by the twin disability of rustlers and disloyal cowhands. Recently, Miss Hudson scored in the heart-appealing role as the romantic lead opposite Eric Linden in "Are These our Children?" Her previous plaudits include selection as a baby wampas star.

The story is replete with gripping gunplay, hard riding, fierce fighting and whirlwind action. It is portrayed in true wild and wooly west style, presenting a host of surprise turns and twists which aim for ace western entertainment suitable for all types of audiences.

Burglars entered Van Smith's store in South Clanton Tuesday night, and left with goods valued at about $70 according to Mr. Smith. Entrance was made by removing one of the front windows. No trace of the guilty parties has been found at this writing. Mr. Smith's store has been entered by burglars several times this year. In the raid Tuesday night a quantity of groceries and wearing apparel was taken.

MUCH ADVERTISING TO BE DONE FOR LEE'S MINERAL

This week in the Union-Banner there appears the first of a large series of advertisements for Lee's Laboratiores of Atlanta, Ga., telling of the marvelous qualities of Lee's Mineral Compound. This nem medicine abounds in vitamins, about which lately there has been much discovery by the medical science.

Look for the big advertisement this week, as well as those to follow, and take time to read them. They will have a message that will likely be of interest to everyone, whether you are sick or not.

PEOPLES TELEPHONE SYSTEM BEING PUT IN BETTER SHAPE

We really must congratulate the country folks on the splendid work they are doing on their telephone lines. Only a few country lines have reached the office yet, but new wire and posts are being put in where it is needed, and several country lines will be in the latter part of this week.

We now have about a hundred phones in from the country and in the suburbs of Clanton; 17 are business phones, and still more are to be installed.

Now folks, let's get our phones to working and pay our dues which are only 25c on each phone per month, on each month until November 1st. which is the beginning of the telephone year. Let us get your name in the new directory we are making. We cannot say what the central fee will be after the first of November, but we can assure you it will be reasonable, and the more phones we have the better it will be.

Yours for better telephone service.—Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Copelan.

Mims Urges People To Attend Meeting

Road Paving Will Be Considered In Mass Meeting Here Saturday

Editor Union-Banner:

In complying with the requests of a number of people I am writing to call the people's attention to a mass meeting called by a number of citizens of the county to meet at the courthouse in Clanton on Saturday, July 16th, 1932, at 2:30 p.m.

It is understood that the Commissioners Court has passed an order to pave two miles or more of the Lay Dam Highway, beginning at the city limits of the Town of Clanton and extending toward Lay Dam.

This order involves the expenditure of a large sum of the people's money; it is therefore of necessity of vital interest to every taxpayer in the county. I hope and hereby insist that every taxpayer in Chilton County or citizen thereof, will make every effort possible to be at the mass meeting as above stated and there express his or her opinion on the project.

There appears to be much dissatisfaction among the people over the project, but I believe that if a representative body of the taxpayers will come together and make their wishes known, after due consideration, to the Commissioners Court, that they will abide by the same. Yours truly. —J. Z. Mims.

Shower For Storm Victims At Union

Many Things Given To People of Union Grove Last Saturday

The hearts of the storm sufferers in this community were made glad last Saturday afternoon when a great throng of visitors assembled at the church, bringing gifts of various kinds for our unfortunate people. The attendance was splendid, and our people were made glad for the kindly interest manifested by every visitor.

Refreshments of ice tea and sandwiches were furnished by the Taylor Wholessale Grocery Company, of Clanton. There was plenty for everybody and much to spare. Refreshments were served free to all. A great shower of gifts were brought and given to the people who lost things in the storm. The articles were little inexpensive things calculated to add charm to the homes that have been re-established since the distaster of March 21. They were greatly appreciated by the recipients.

A program of entertainment was carried out according to the outline previously announced.

A box of gifts were brought by the ladies of the American Legion Auxiliary of Chilton County.

The pastor of Inglenook Methodist Church, with members of the Sunday school, were in attendance, and also brought gifts.

A delegation from the Foursquare Gospel Church of Clanton was in attendance. They were accompanied by their pastor, Rev. Clements.

Rev. J. Robert Bean, pastor of the Union Grove church, gave 10 Bibles to families who lost their Bibles in the storm.

TAX VALUATIONS

of said Board to the Circuit Court of the county and obtain a trial by jury. The appeal may be taken within thirty days from the final decision of the Board and the taxpayer may execute a bond and demand a trial by jury and the jury shall render jurgment fixing the fair and reasonable market value of the property for purposes of taxation."

From time to time The Union-Banner was good enough to call the people's attention to this law and as I have heretofore stated, about three hundred people filed their objections, and I am informed all but two obtained substantial reductions.

It is necessary that the Commissioners Court of Chilton County run their business according to law and not proceed by mob rule and in order that we do this, it is necessary that we employ attorneys. May we state that the county attorneys in this instance prepared the blanks and assisted many citizens of the county, without charge, in having their taxes adjusted by the Board of Review.

In order that the public may not get the impression that the Board of Review or the tax officials did not do their duty, I may add that Akins Collins, the tax assessor, published for something like thirty days in the Union-Banner, a notice to the effect that the valuations on property had been fixed by the board of Review and that if there were any objection to these valuations as fixed, they must be filed with him on or before May 30, 1932 and the Board of Review would sit at the courthouse on the first Monday in June thereafter and would continue in session long enough to hear all complaints.

It may be that you can run your business as postmaster at Thorsby, keep up all your entangling alliances in a political way and stay clear of civil service rules without a lawyer, but we must confess that in trying to operate the county's business in accordance with the laws of Alabama, we must have legal advice.

Now, in conclusion, I want to say to Mr. Bice that there is no official duty upon me under the law concerning tax valuations of property. This duty is upon the Board of Review, composed of members of the Commissioners Court and the Tax Assessor. Mr. Joe Cobb is chairman of the Board of Review, and Mr. Akins Collins is secretary. So far as I know, the Board of Review has complied with the law concerning tax valuations.

I say again, it is foolish and worthless for Mr. Bice or anybody else at this time to keep on nagging about tax valuations. I certainly do not see what he can hope to accomplish unless he has a motive not yet revealed.

If Mr. Bice really wanted to help the people by having tax values revised, why did he not get busy and try to do something at the time when the taxpayers could get their cases before the board of review for consideration? But the first thing Mr. Bice said about the matter was a day too late for any cases to be filed for revaluation.

As stated above, I did all I could at the proper time to get this matter before the people so they could take advantage of their rights under the law to get their tax valuations reduced. I feel that I did my duty; and I do not see where Mr. Bice can hope to help matters any now by keeping up his political nagging at me.—L. H. Reynolds.

Mr. Bowen L. Jones has moved his store from his old location west of the railroad, to the Walker Building on the highway, formerly occupied by Tom Parrish.

Mr. Jones wishes all his friends to know about the change in his location, and requests his former customers to come to see him, as well as soliciting the trade of the public in general.

BRO. PARRISH NEEDS HELP

Word come sto the Union-Banner that Rev. M. J. Parrish of Providence is in desperate need of the necessaries of life. His crib is empty, his smoke house is empty and his pantry is empty.

Bro. Parrish is not begging; he does not even know that this appeal is being made in the paper; but the Union-Banner vouches for the truthfulnness of the above statement. This old man has battled in the pulpits of Chilton County for the past half century, and the communities where he has poured out his life-blood must not and will not let him and his family go hungry. Let someone in the communities where he is known get in their car or truck and go around and get him some corn, meat, lard and anything that the people can spare. And do it just as soon as you read this in the paper. Do not wait, for he needs it now.

Mr. Floyd Lynch, who is connected with the new bakery in Clanton, has moved his family into the Phillips house on Second Avenue east. Mr. Lynch states that the bakery will open for business about Wednesday of next week. The business is located in the building next to the postoffice.

REUBEN FOSS CANDIDATE FOR MEMBER OF COUNTY BOARD

Announcement has been made that Reuben Foss, of Thorsby, is a candidate for member of the County Board of Education on the Democratic ticket.

Mr. Foss is one of the most popular men in Chilton County, and it must be said, regardless of politics, that he is a man who is eminently fitted to serve in the administration of our school affairs. Somebody is going to have to do some "tall" running to beat this man.

Burglars Raided Store At Lay Dam

Mr. J. A. Bialock's store, near the Lay Dam reservation gate, was entered one night last week by burglars and dry goods and groceries valued at about $300.00 taken.

A noise about midnight woke Mr. Bialock, but he thought the noise was caused by someone in his home. A little later he heard a car start from the store. He rushed out, but was too late to catch the burglar. The gas pump in front of the store was broken, and it is supposed some gas was taken. In addition, a few planks were torn off the side of the store, by which entrance was made to the building, and the other goods taken. So far no trace has been found of the guilty parties.

BAKERY TO OPEN HERE NEXT WEEK

Management Will Invite The Public To Visit and Inspect New Plant

All the machinery has been installed in the new Sunlight Bakery here, and the announcement is made by Mr. Snow, proprietor, that they will have their formal opening one day next week. They expect to give away ice cream, cake, etc., to those who visit them on their opening day. Mr. Snow says that he expects to do some baking this week, very likely Thursday, but he is waiting later for his formal opening so that the place may be thoroughly cleaned up and the front fixed up in attractive style.

The Sunlight Bakery, according to present indications, is going to be a real asset to Clanton. These gentlemen, Messrs. Snow and Lynch, are doing lots of work on the place and are spending lots of money. Their equipment consists of a big double-deck oven, in which can be baked 200 loaves of bread at a time; a big 5-horsepower electric dough break with four rollers and a six-foot belt; one electric high speed mixer; one roll divided for making buns and all kinds of rolls; one doughnut furnace, kettle and two sanitary wire separators.

The electric bread slicer will cut up 250 loaves of bread per hour. This will enable them to furnish bread sliced as well as whole. The bread will be wrapped in an electrically heated wrapper. The wrappers will bear the name "Sunlight". For aging the dough, there is a bread trough 15 feet long, 3 feet wide and 2½ feet deep. Other equipment is one 12-shelf roll rack, two 9-shelf bread racks; set of Baker Bill combination scales for getting the loaves to the exact weight; one 90-pound steam boiler to furnish steam to the six-foot proof box and the No. 16 Hubbard oven. An ornamental set will be used for decorating wedding and anniversary cakes.

All their cakes will be labeled "Tasty Cakes—Always Fresh." Seven different sizes of loaves will be baked to sell for from a nickel to 20 cents. There will be four sizes of Pullman loaves. They will also bake whole wheat bread, raisin rolls, all kinds of cakes and pies. Look for the announcement in next week's Union-Banner.

A supply of extracts, fruits, etc., for pies and cakes, costing about $250.00 has been stocked. A large quantity of flour, salt, sugar and shortening has been purchased from Taylor Wholesale Grocery Company here, to be used in their cooking. The cook, Mr. A. D. Owen, says that only pure Wesson oil will be used in cooking their doughnuts, and only butter will be used in the cakes, pastries, etc. A large supply of this oil and butter has been bought, says Mr. Owen.

LAW MAY HELP STORM VICTIMS

Plan Being Studied By Chilton County Representative, Percy M. Pitts

Hon. Percy M. Pitts, representative of Chilton County in the Alabama Legislature, believes that the State of Alabama should exempt from taxation for a period of five years, the property of all citizens who suffered loss in the tornadoes which hit Alabama last spring.

In pursuance of this idea, Representative Pitts has addressed letters to Senators and Representatives of all the counties which suffered losses in the storms, suggesting that those representatives and senators join him in working out plans for such legislation.

In the opinion of Mr. Pitts, it would require an amendment to the Constitution of the State, as was done in the matter of exempting all ex-soldiers of the World War from payment of poll taxes.

"Of course," said Mr. Pitts, "I have no assurance that aspecial session of the Legislature will be called. However, I think it would be a very commendable act on the part of the Legislature to propose such a law, and I believe the people of Alabama woud approve it. It would relieve a great many home owners who lost all they had in the storm. They need such a measure of relief."

According to Mr. Pitts, there are about three hundred property owners in Chilton County who would be benefitted under such exemption. There are many hundreds also in perhaps half a dozen other counties of the State.

COOSA CITIZENS PICNIC

The annual Coosa County citizens picnic will be held again this year at Log Cabin Beach below Mitchell Dam. The date is Sunday, July 31.

It is announced that there will be plenty of barbecue and fried fish. Addresses will be made by a number of preachers who will be in attendance. Music will be furnished by a string band, and no doubt there will be some old time singing.

Such amusements as swimming and boating will be available all day to those who desire to participate.

The invitation says "Everybody come and bring baskets of something to eat, and have a good time with your old friends."

A special request is made that people of Chilton County who formerly lived in Coosa County come.

VALUES REDUCED ON MITCHELL DAM

According To Ruling Made By The Federal Power Commission

Washington, July 15.—Precedents which will mean hundreds of million of dollars to the public have been set by the federal power commission in ruling against the Alabama Power Company in the long-standing dispute over the actual legitimate cost of its Mitchell Dam property.

The company claimed the actual cost of the project was $10,646.056. William V. King, chief accountant of the power commission, recommended that approximately $4,000,000 of this be disallowed as an improper charge. The commission has disallowed $3,651,260 of the amount in dispute.

If the company had been sustained in its contention, the cost to the public in the future recapture proceedings would have been greater by the amount disallowed. The larger sum might also have become a base for present electric rates.

The company included in its claims one of $3,500,000 as alleged value of land and water rights for the project. The commission allowed it only the actual cost of the properties, $76,135. While this ruling may not constitute an exact precedent for other cases in which millions have been claimed for alleged property and water values, it marks the way for possible rejection of these claims.

The commission also refused to allow the company to charge up fees it paid to a subsidiary construction company, owned entirely by it and with identical directors. This has been a favorite practice of holding companies for increasnig the ostensible cost of construction projects.

The company in its original claim attempted to charge up amounts paid to several employees described to the senate as lobbyists, representing the company in opposition to the passage of the federal water power act. This claim was considerably reduced by stipulations entered into before the matter was submitted to the new commission, but a claim of $4,000 for services of J. T. Newcomb remained in the record. The commission allowed $2,500 as apparently being for legal services, upon presentation of court record, and disallowed the balance.

The accounting decision is the first ever made under the federal water power act, since its passage in 1920. The Clarion River Power Co., sought a court injunction when an attempt was made to examine its accounts, but two federal courts have upheld the commission's right to do so. The same point is at issue in the new river case where the Appalachian Electric Power Co., is seeking to construct a power project free of federal regulations.

Officials of the Alabama Public Service Commission said Friday they would obtain at once a copy of the federal power commission's order lopping nearly $4,000,000 from the construction cost of Mitchell Dam claimed by the Alabama Power Co.

Hugh White, commission president, said the government figures would be considered along with the commission's own data in arriving at a fair valuation for rate-making purposes. White pointed out that the state body has been following the federal probe of the construction cost for several years.

The state tax commission, which last year cut the assessment of Mitchell Dam for taxpaying purposes, also will receive a copy of the federal order for use in fixing next year's assessments.

The federal court issued Thursday bore out the contention of the Washington commission's legal and engineering staffs that the construction cost claimed by the power company was padded.

CITIZENS PROTEST PAVING ON THE LAY DAM ROAD

Resolution Adopted Calling Upon Commissioners Court To Rescind Former Order For Hard Surfacing Two to Five Miles of Highway From Limits of Clanton

The meeting called last Saturday at the Courthouse at 2:30 p.m., by W. G. Shaw, E. E. Martin, B. M. Killingsworth, J. L. Harrell, P. M. Martin, Ed. Y. Conway, H. H. Armstrong and B. L. Cobb, was well attended from over the whole county. I judge about 500 people were present and a number had signed petitions protesting the paving of the Lay Dam Road.

By request from Mr. W. G. Shaw, Grover Bice called the meeting to order. Mr. J. Z. Mims was elected chairman and Grover Bice secretary. Mr. W. G. Shaw was appointed a committee to go down stairs and invite Judge Reynolds and the Commissioners to come into the meeting and voice themselves. Mr. Jim Mims said he voted to leave the paving of the Lay Dam Road up to a mass meeting of the citizens and taxpayers; also Mr. Cobb favored and voted for this. Judge Reynolds and Commissioner Vinson and Burnett said they voted to pave this Lay Dam Road, because we had hungry people in Chilton County, and they wanted to give them work. Judge Reynolds said we have people in Chilton county who have no bread, eating beans and soup without bread.

The chairman appointed on Resolutions committee: Jake Wallace, Will Gulledge, W. H. Conway, J. A. Raines, and W. I. Mullins. Moved and seconded that we take a straw vote to see how many favors the paving of the Lay Dam Road, two miles or to Cane Creek Cross Roads. Not one voted for the Commissioners Court to pave the Lay Dam Road, but about 500 voted against the Commissioners Court paving two miles of the Lay Dam Road or more if they see fit.

Moved and seconded that we hear a report of the Chilton County Treasurer, which was well rendered by Mrs. Calloway. The report showed that the general road fund is already over-drawn $2,284.79 and there is only $10,347.10 in the gas tax fund or a net balance of all road funds of $8,062.31 and $38,566.52 in the general fund which amount, if the Commissioners Court see fit, might be transferred to the road fund.

The question was fully discussed and the following resolutions were adopted unanimously:

To the Honorable Judge of Probate and the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, Alabama:

Gentlemen:

We the citizens and taxpayers of Chilton County in a mass meeting assembled on this, the 16th day of July, 1932, do hereby petition your honorable body to rescind the recent action of your body in which it was decided to pave two miles or more of the Lay Dam Road, beginning at the city limits of the town of Clanton, Alabama, for the following reasons:

Apparently the general road fund levied and collected for road purposes for the year 1932 is already overdrawn $2,284.79 and there is only $10,347.10 in the gas tax fund or a net balance of all road funds of $8,062.31; and,

Furthermore, there is apparently $38,566.52 in the general fund, which amount, if the Court see fit, might be transferred to the road fund; and,

Furthermore, the record of the road work in the county for the past 10 years show that on an average we have spent $8,333.33 per month, and,

Furthermore, we feel that if the Court has money it can spend on the roads, that it should be spent in every Beat in the county in order to serve the greatest number and in so doing will also benefit the greatest number of the people who travel the roads of the county, and,

Furthermore, since the Alabama Power Co., has reduced its assessed valuations and there is a great agitation in favor of reducing other property values, our taxes of necessity will be less in the future than has been in the past and since we have not been able to build pemanent roads in the past, we do not feel that we will be able to do so now in view of the above named reductions and the present conditions of our treasury, and,

Furthermore, since we have an indebtedness of one hundred and five thousand dollars and the interest to pay on said indebtedness we feel that we should begin to accumulate a sufficient amount of money to pay off said indebtedness in order that the county may be operated on a cash basis.

Be it therefore resolved, that we ernestly request that the Court of County Commissioners and Probate Judge do not undertake at this time any permanent road construction in the county. However, we wish it understood that we believe in good roads and we appreciate the splendid work which has been done on the roads in the past and the fact that we feel that we have above the average roads in the counties of the state of Alabama.—J. Z. Mims, Chairman; Grover Bice, Secretary.

Thorsby Protests

We, the business men and citizens of Thorsby, Ala., condemn and protest to the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, the spending of any money for paving roads in this county. This is no time to spend the people's money in such a project, and we request that the Commissioners Court rescind the order to pave the Lay Dam Road.

People Who Want To Work On Roads Are Requested To Make Application

Editor Union-Banner:

We would like for you to announce that there will be a meeting at the courthouse at 2 o'clock p.m. next Saturday, July 23, 1932, for the purpose of registering all the people of our county who are in distressed circumstances and who are able to work on the two miles proposed road to be built out of Clanton. The Commissioners have decided to build this road, and they are anxious to give this work to the needy of our county, regardless of who they are and where they live; and in order to divide this work, we would like to get a record of those who want to work with a truck, wagon and team, or as a laborer.

Any person, therefore, who is in distressed circumstances and who is in need of work can register at this meeting, and this work will be divided out among the people in order that all may profit as much as possible by the same.

We would like also for as many citizens of the county to come to this meeting as can and help advise on the work necessary for the county to do this summer and fall in order that our people may be given as much assistance as possible.

Chilton county has approximately $75,000.00 in the county treasury and with all current bills paid; and the only indebtedness being in bonds amounting to $101,000.00 due in 1947, and we are paying upon these bonds as fast as we can buy them. But at the present time we cannot buy any more bonds and this money, of course, is lying idle. We fell that it will be of great help to put a small portion of this money out among the people in each Precinct and over the entire county who are in distress. Personally, I am of the opinion that as long as our people are in distressed circumstances, I had rather see misery and suffering relieved, and food furnished to those who are hungry rather than bonds be paid, which bonds are not due until fifteen years in the future.

We are not calling a political meeting, and want every man, regardless of politics or residence, or any other conditions, if he is able to do a days labor and who is in needy circumstances to come and make his wants known at this meeting.—L. H. Reynolds, Judge of Probate.

BIG MEETING BEGINS AT FRIENDSHIP ON SUNDAY

The summer protracted meeting at Friendship begins next Sunday, the fourth Sunday in July, or rather Saturday night before. The preaching will be done by the pastor, Rev. J. Robert Bean. Services will be held twice daily—morning services at 11 o'clock and night services at 8 p.m. About thirty minutes of prayer service will precede each preaching service.

The people of the community and all others in reach are invited to attend as many of these services as possible. If you sing, take a seat in the choir, as your help there will be greatly appreciated.

Miss Theda Wyatt is spending this week as the guest of Miss Betsy Ann Duncan in Birmingham.

VISITORS AT FARM OF MR. H. S. SHAW

Interesting Tour of Inspection Was Made Last Friday Afternoon

A group of men, eighteen in number, accepted the invitation of Mr. H. S. Shaw last Friday afternoon to visit his farm in Coosa County, just across the river from Lay Dam. The purpose of the trip was to see the pasture which Mr. Shaw has developed on his place.

Mr. Shaw carried the men first to his barns, where we were shown his hogs, the trench silo, corn cribs, and methods of feeding cattle in the winter time.

From the barns we went into the large pasture. Mr. Shaw made a very interesting explanation of how his pasture was developed. Last February the seed of lespedeza, carpet grass and Dallas grass were sown on the land without any surface preparation. Part of the seed were sown on rye, part on oats, part on open land not in cultivation, but the largest portion of the pasture was on land from which a heavy growth of timber had been cleared.

The seeding of grass and clover on the land which was cleared of timber resulted in the best coverage.

Mr. Shaw explained that this method is recommended by Auburn, but he was at first doubtful of it. A little experiment last year convinced him it would work. And the fine pasture he has made in six months time is sufficient proof that it is very easy to make a good pasture by sowing grass and clover on the naked land where the growth has been cleared away. It is much better on such land than on land that has been in cultivation.

From the pasture we were shown the field of sorghum being grown to fill the silo this winter. A trip was also made through the corn fields where the results of winter legumes were seen.

The Shaw farm is taking care of over a hundred head of beef cattle.

The men who went on this very interesting and instructive trip were: J. N. Dennis, C. E. Stapp, J. D. Collins, W. J. Easterling, B. Lawrence, Martin Lawrence, W. M. Wyatt, J. Z. Mims, Walter Popwell, U. L. Popwell, Horace Popwell, Clyde Popwell, Walter Foshee, L. P. Easterling, Dr. W. L. Parrish, G. W. Willis, Hambone Gillespie.

CAUGHT A BIG FISH

They had a 54-pound yellow cat which they caught on a trot line were fishing at Tube Cleckler's, near the mouth of Mountain Branch.

RIGINAL

Interesting Story of The Life of Rev. E. W. Butler

Several weeks ago I promised my readers an interesting story—the life and work of Rev. E. W. Butler, of Thorsby. At this time I have it all together and ready to be published. It is in two sections, as the dates will show. The first makes an interesting story, and is written in the third person—the second part is in the first person—and all together it is one of the most interesting papers I have ever had the pleasure of reading. I pass it on to you for your enjoyment.—Man in the Moon.

June 10, 1932:

Rev. Elmer Wells Butler of Thorsby was born 78 years ago this month on an Illinois farm. Both of his parents had been school teachers. That may account for the fact that he has no recollection of learning to read or of learing the multiplication tables

But he remembers how the younger members of the family learned to read sitting in the lap of father or mother at family prayers, which were held after breakfast every morning, and pronouncing the words of the Bible verses read for the day, after they were pointed out and spoken by the parent.

Among his earliest recollections is that of the first time he ever saw his father shed tears, when a neighbor passing stopped to tell him that Abraham Lincoln had been assassinated.

He remembers also the day when he asked where father had gone, and mother told him that he had gone to town to vote. When she explained as carefully as she could what that meant, he wanted to know why she didn't go too. She couldn't explain that to his satisfaction. In fact he never did reach the place where he didn't think his mother quite as competent as his father to cast a ballot. (No reflection on father intended.)

He remembers also the day when father lay off work long enough to join the rest of the family in looking through smoked glasses at the sun as the moon was eclipsing it.

When the boy was six years old the family left the farm and moved to the village to give the children the schooling their parents wanted them to have. From that time on neither he nor any other of the children missed a day in school until high school was finished, except as the child was kept out because of his own sickness—and the school year was nine months long.

Mr. Butler's boyish ambition was to be a school teacher. As with the passing years the fascination of mathematics grew on him, he looked forward to the career of the surveyor or the civil engineer. But during his college course the influence of a room mate led him to believe himself called to the Christian ministry. He spent three years in Chicago Theological Seminary, and was ordained to the ministry 49 years ago. He spent a few years as pastor in frontier states, North Dakota, Wisconsin, Clorado.

In 1894 he took a pastorate on the East Coast of Florida. Whence in 1907 he came to Alabama to superintend the work of his denomination (Congregational) in this state. That work was and still is almost entirely rural, except for a church recently organized in Birmingham.

Mr. Butler soon became thoroughly convinced that rural Alabama's greatest need was for a much larger mixture of intelligence with her religion. Now for more than fifteen years his chief interest and work has been for and with Thorsby Institute and the girls and boys who, from all over the state, have passed through her doors.

So practically at the last he has gotten around to or towards the fulfillment of that early boyish ambition to be a school man. On Sunday he indulges his love for teaching in the Sunday school. The motto of the class he had for years is "Dare to Differ." He insists that he learns much more from the man who says, "I don't agree with you," than from the one who says, "Yes, sir, you're right."

In conclusion he refers to the fact which most of his friends know well, viz: that if you want to make him a friend for life, send him, for his playspell, a hard or unusual problem in Arithmetic.

July 18, 1932

Dear Mr. Moon Man:

You have asked me to supplement my notes sent you some week ago—here goes:

My birthplace was Payson, Illinois, a town, ten miles from Hannibal, Mo., (Mark Twain's town). My father's name was Ebenezer, and mother's maiden name, Cynthia Tiffany. Both of them were of New England descent, and I can give you the names of at least sixty others of my New England ancestors, but I hardly think your readers would care for the list. My birthdate was June 27, 1859. I was the oldest of four children. I attended public school at Griggsville, Illinois from 1866 to 1876.

Among the memories of those childhood years, I recall my mother's activity along with so many other Christian women of her generation to overthrow the liquor traffic. I didn't attend any of those prayer meetings in the saloons, but we heard about them, and I've no doubt that in those early days of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, was born that hatred of the liquor business, for which I have never thought it necessary to apologize.

I entered Illinois College (not University) at Jacksonville, Illinois in 1876, graduated 1880. Was a college mate of William Jennings Bryan for the four years, and as our college then never numbered 100 students in college department, we all knew all the others fairly well. Bryan was a leader, a conscientious, ambitious boy, who took first place in most of his classes. He was valedictorian of class of 1881. I also saw him frequently in the following years, when I was in Chicago Theological Seminary and he in Chicago Law School. His intimate friends believed in him and predicted great things for him. He was dependable, honest, a hard worker, and of course, a fine speaker.

Apropos of Bryan, this story may be of interest. When he was first elected to Congress I wrote him a letter urging him to strike some blows for prohibition. I have often regretted that I did not preserve his letter in which he protested that he did not believe in prohibition. He came in later years to be prohibition's most valiant defender. If he had been spared in health to this day some of us believe that the recent Chicago convention record might have been very different.

I inherited or absorbed from both of my parents a deep interest in politics. I suppose also they are somewhat responsible for the fact I have called myself an Independent in politics. I recall my "maiden vote." In the fall of 1880 I was in Chicago. The two great parties were furnishing passes to any in the city who wanted to go home to vote. I got a pass, traveled all night, and showed up at the polls in Griggsville on that first Tuesday in November. By my side to the ballot box, went my most intimate boyhood friend, a member for many years of the same church and the same class in Sunday school. One of us cast a straight Republican vote and the other a straight Democratic vote, and I said to myself, "Have I come 300 miles to do nothing but to kill the vote of Bill Jones?"

Since then I haven't done much "straight" voting. I've tried to do something else with my vote than to "kill" the vote of others as decent and as intelligent as myself. No man commands my respect with the announcement that he always votes the "straight" ticket. Other things being equal, I generally vote for the fellow who I think will be defeated. Alabama needs two strong parties. So does Chilton County.

I was married in 1884 to Carrie, oldest daughter of Rev. Henry M. Tupper, a pastor in central Illinois. After her death, her youngest sister, Jennie, took pity on my lonesomeness and has been my wife since 1905.

Three of my six children are living, Clarence, secretary of Jenkins Brick Co., lives in Montgomery, with his wife and two lovely daughters. Of his wife it should be enough to say they "made the match" when both were teachers in Thorsby Institute.

My daughter, Margaret, enjoys her work in Birmingham, and Dorothy, recently graduated from Oberlin College, and Emory University Library School, is at home hoping and looking for a library job.

In looking back again at the family record I find that it leads back to three "Lords of the Manor" in England, but as the amount of their blood in my veins can't exceed a fraction whose numerator is 3 and denominator 4096, I trust it may not be laid up against me. I never heard my mother speak of it. The only aristocracy I was ever taught to respect is that of goodness and intelligence, and I don't believe that depends on my ancestory or even the color of my skin.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How God Helps His People.

I. Israel in Straitened Circumstances (vv 1-12).

1. Going out of the land of Egypt (13:18). The tenth stroke from the strong hand of the Almighty made Pharaoh willing to let Israel go. The tenth turn of the screw of Omnipotence brought him to time. The Israelites went out from Egypt on their way to the promised land with a high hand. The way of the wilderness was a longer route, but it had many valuable lessons for them. By this way they escaped the experiences of war which would have come to them at the hand of the Philistines, but they learned the crookedness and perverseness of their own hearts (Deut. 8:12).

2. Hemmed in (vv. 1-3). At the Lord's direction they turned from their first course and were made to face a great difficulty. The Red sea was before them and mountains on either side. However, they should have been encouraged because the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to lead the way, and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light. He took not away the pillar of cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night (13:21, 22).

3. Pursued by Pharaoh (vv. 4-12). The stricken Egyptians had now recovered from their sorrow, and perceiving the straitened circumstances of the Israelites they interpreted this to mean that Moses was unable to lead them out of their difficulty. Therefore they went in pursuit, hoping yet to prevent their leaving the country.

II. The Miraculous Escape of the Israelites (vv. 13-22).

There seems to have been a twofold object in leading them in to this particular place.

1. To strengthen the faith of the people. To be delivered from such circumstances would impress upon them anew the reality of the love and power of God. The people, as usual, displayed their unbelief, and even censured Moses for leading them out of Egypt. Moses replied to their murmurs by saying, "Fear ye not, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." Standing still in such a trial is faith taking hold on God's promises. God said, "Wherefore criest thou unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." Having had his definite promise, to have prayed longer would have been unbelief. They were to go forward a step at a time without raising any question as to the outcome, for from the source from which came the command, came the power to obey. The presence of the Lord was adapted to their needs as they went forward. When the situation was such that the Lord's leadership was not necessary, the cloud passed to the rear and held the enemy at bay. The presence of God had a double effect—darkness and confusion to the enemy, and light and guidance to his people.

2. To lay a snare for the overthrow of the Egyptians. Those who will not heed the warning judgments of God may be allowed to go to their destruction under the presumption that the Almighty is helping them.

III. The Overthrow of the Egyptians (vv. 23-27).

Having seen the Israelites go across the sea dryshod, Pharaoh and his people madly pursued them. They insanely thought that they in their unbelief could follow in the wake of God's children. The Lord looked forth from the cloud and wrought confusion among the Egyptians. He not only looked upon them but took off their chariot wheels which caused them to realize that God was fighting against them. He then directed Moses to stretch forth his rod and bring destruction upon the Egyptians.

IV. The Song of Triumph (15:1-21).

Standing on the other shore of the Red sea they could fittingly sing the song of triumph because of their miraculous deliverance and the overwhelming defeat of the Egyptians. They attributed it all to God. In a glad coming day, a similar but much larger company will sing the same song with an important addition, namely, the "Song of the Lamb" (Rev. 15:3).

GEMS OF THOUGHT

The question of duty is one of the most serious. On that pivot swings both usefulness and destiny.

IN MEMORY

On April 12th, 1920, God saw fit to plant a human rose here upon this earth, to spread forth its fragarance and beauty in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Paul Mima. They called this infant daughter Delene. She grew, and daily did the mission that the Lord intended for her to do. As the days,, months, and years rolled on, she continued to grow as the tiny rose would graw, and rooted her love deeper and stronger in the hearts of her loved ones and friends.

In the early morning while everything was fresh with dew and sun, July 17th, 1932, God saw fit to take this rosebud, that was just begining to loosen it's petals in full bloom, to bloom and place it in His Garden of roses in heaven.

We will miss her in Sunday School and C. E. programs, that we have on various occasion, because Dalene was always willing to do what she was asked to do. Se, never, like many of us, said, "I can't," but always said "I'll try." There is a vacant seat in the home and in the church, that can never be filled, but we must say as Jesus did, not my will, but thine be done.

We would say to the loved ones and friends, weep not for Delene, but begin now and make preparations so that when our time on earth is ended, we will go to be with her as long as the years of eternity shall roll.

She leaves to mourn her, parents, and three brthers; Percy, Curtis, and Earl Mims, besides a host of relatives and friends.

The last rites were heard at Walnut Creek, on last Slnday evening, with the pastor, Rev. P. JA. Lynch, officiating, and was assisted by Rev. M. Lockhart, with J. Mell Martin in charge.

The honorary pallbearers were the girls that were in her Sunday School class, and the active pallbearers were Cleveland Driver, Vonnie Blalock, Judson, Curtis, and Clemet Easterling, and Howard Wyatt.

The beautiful floral offering was highly appreciated by the family.

Dedicated in rememberance by one who loves her, and will miss her.—Opal Lynch.

The vicinity of Clanton enjoyed a very welcome shower of rain last Sunday afternoon and Sunday night. It brought temporary relief from a sweltering temperature of around 95 which had prevailed for several days prior.

ELECTRIC POWER
one of the CHEAPEST items in the cost of
MANUFACTURING

ELECTRIC Power is one of the most important "Tools" in industry. Many a factory could not operate without it. One of the most important—yet one of the cheapest.

The cost of electric power is so low that if it were free the average manufacturer could not make more than a 3% reduction in the price of his commodities. Figures from the last United States Census giving the cost for both fuel and electric power for such industries as food manufacture, lumber, paper, machinery, iron and steel, transportation, rubber, textiles, wood products and the like show that the cost of electric power represents an average of only 3% of the total cost of making these products.

In the home, too, Electricity is one of the most important "tools"—yet one of the cheapest. Each year it serves in more ways, does more work, at rates averaging steadily lower. Average home rates in 1926 were 35% higher than for 1930.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF MRS. EMMA VANCE

On Friday afternoon, July 8, our home was much saddened by the death of mother. It came after a stroke of paralysis, which lasted about ten days. Although she has been in an invalid state for about two years.

Although an invalid, there was never a complaint from mother against the cruelness of fate. She knew her time was of the past.

Her past is a thing of beauty and perseverance — Over fifty-five years as a member of the church; not as one who sits back and watches, but as one who worked for the glorifying of God. Only a true Christian spirit could have endured so much pain and trouble without coplaining against God.

She was ready to go as she realized her work on earth was completed. Many who stay behind will now realize how great a work she accomplished. Her greatest accomplishment was making this world a better place to live in. She is gone, but her memory is here, and sweet it is. Her Christian life and work will keep her in many minds and hearts for many years. Doesen't that fulfil the aim of life, as given in Psalm of Life?

We loved her but Jesus loved her more and called her to come home on that shining shore.

There is a vacant place in our home that never can be filled. But why should we lament, and wish her back again? Since she has gone to her long home with Christ, to live and reign.

She leaves to mucrn her loss, her husband, two sons, six daughters, twenty-five grand-children. In this family of forty-one, there has been only two deaths, a grand-son and mother.

Funeral services were held at Liberty Hill church, of which she was a member. Rev. Holland and Homer Carroll officiated with grand-sons of the deceased as pallbearers. Spigener of Clanton was in charge. Mrs. A. C. Patterson.

REPORT FROM THE LIBERTY SINGING

Several years ago the third Sunday in July was set aside as the time for the annual all day singing at Liberty church in Autauga County. On last Sunday a very large crowd gathered there for that purpose.

Hand, Johnnie Boone. The chairman appointed Miss Ianther Hand to act as secretary for the day. We were indeed glad to welcome the largest crowd that has ever assembled here.

Directors before noon were Dr. J. B. Williams, Prof. Emmett Wilson, Ralph Grant, N. P. Hand, Edward Jones, Raymond Brigance, L. T. Grant. After dinner the directors were: Joseph Varner, J. W. Cagle, A. O. Boswell, T. E. Wyatt, Fley Devaughn, Gresham Lowery, Elvin Devaughn, Arthur Beaird, A. H. Glasscock, H. W. Love, Lee Grant, R. M. Robinson. Those who performed at the piano were: Ralph Grant, A. O. Boswell, Miss Hammonds, Joseph Varner, W. G. Culp.

Several quartets were sung during the day by the Loyal Four from near Montevallo, Thorsby quartet, The Christian Four from Montgomery, and the Clanton Quartet, all of which were greatly enjoyed.

The assembly was dismissed with prayer by Judge Posey of Prattville.

D. Huett. Mr. Huett says that the class is making more advancement than any he has ever taught anywhere. The community is proud of the school.

Prof. Huett began teaching on July 11th with 30 pupils, and he now has 45 on roll. The school will run for four weeks, and we are expecting great results by the time it closes. We people down here want our friends to visit us and see what we are doing.—Committee.

WILL START BUILDING HOUSE

Editor Union-Banner:

I want to let the people of my community and elsewhere know that on next Monday morning, July 25th, I will start building back my house and barn which were destroyed by the storm. My place is four miles west of Clanton and half a mile north of Liberty Hill Church. There are some who promised to give me free labor in putting back my buildings, and I want to say that I will thank each and everyone for what they may do in helping me.

I am a poor man, and I am not a carpenter. I will need somebdoy to build my chimney and stove flue. I will have to buy the top and some other material for my barn. I have no money in the world to buy it with. If there is someone who can make a contribution to help me buy those things, I will appreciate it. Send your contributions to me or to County Agent, C. E. Stapp.

Again I want to say that I will very greatly appreciate any help that is given to me, and I assure everyone that I really need it.—Yours very truly, J. A. Headley, Clanton Route 4.

We trust the friends of this mission school will remember it during the coming session with their gifts.

The next session will open August 22nd and will continue 9 months.

Let us urge all who expect to attend the Academy to make reservations at once, as only 125 can be accommodated, and due to the disturbed conditions of the state schools the rooms in the dormitory are being reserved rapidly.—A. B. Murphree, Principal.

J. H. JACKSON

Editor Union-Banner:

Will you please permit me to say a few words through your valuable paper, as I have been invited to visit different parts of the county, I wish to thank those for same.

I also want to say that we aim to make a speaking tour over the county before November. I will resubmit my platform to the people for their consideration:

First, I favor a reduction in valuation on real estate.

Second, I favor more permanent road building, such as graveling in the winter and less raking.

Third, I also favor letting the almshouse out on a salary basis, for the reason, What is the employee's gain is the inmate's loss. I believe that a way should be provided for them to go to church of their choice, at least once a month, if it is not too inconvenient. I also believe this plan to be cheaper and more satisfactory than the present one.

If the people see fit to elect me to the office of commissioner of the fourth district, I will serve them to the best of my ability regardless of creed or party.

If elected, your servant.—J. H. Jackson.

(Paid political adv. by J. H. Jackson, Clanton Ala., R 1.)

REVIVAL AT NEW SALEM

The revival at New Salem will begin next Sunday, the fourth Sunday in July, and will run all the week.

Rev. B. F. Dykes of Aurora, Indiana will run this meeting. Most of the people of this county should know Bro. Dykes, as he is a Chilton County boy. We are expecting a large crowd at the meeting.

Bro. Dykes has finished school in Louisville, Ky., and we are sure he will be still a greater preacher than he was last summer. Remember the meeting begins the fourth Sunday in July, the 24.

TEACHERS GET JANUARY PAY

Superintendent Buford Lawrence announces that the January payroll for the school teachers of Chilton County is now being issued. The amount of the same will be about $10,000.

Our revival will begin next Saturday night, conducted by Rev. A. C. Nelson.

We invite everybody to attend, especially our neighboring churches.

Our Sunday School is progressing nicely.

IN MEMORY

On June 29th, the angel came to our home an carried away our darling little daughter, Willie Fay. She was only 2 months old. We cannot understand why we had to give up the one that seemed so precious to us.

She suffered 5 weeks with whooping cough. All was done that doctors and loving hands could do, but God saw best and took her away.

Little darling, how we miss you,
Seems more than we can bear.
But we know that you are resting
In Jesus' arms up there.

—Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Mims.

American Legion State Convention

Will Be Held At Gadsden Next Week, July 24-25-26.

Everything is all set for the greatest American Legion Convention ever held by the Alabama Department, during the fourteen years of its existence, which will be held at Gadsden, beginning with the Memorial Service, Sunday evening, July 24, and ending with the election of officers, Wednesday morning, July 27. From the requests for reservations being received by the Housing Committee at Legion Headquarters, Hotel Reich, Gadsden, everything points that this will be, by far, the best attended session of any time in many years, and the Committees appointed several weeks ago by the Etewah Post No. 5, under the General Chairmanship of Prof. J. D. Samuels, are leaving nothing undone to make the stay of the thousands of visitors who will come to Gadsden for this convention a most pleasant and comfortable one.

One of the main features of the convention will be the appearance of congressman Wright Patman of Texas. Mr. Patman is the man who introduced H. R. No. 1, at the beginning of the first session of the 72nd Congress, last December, which bill passed the house by a large majority but failed in its passage in the senate. It is Mr. Patman's intention to re-introduce this bill at the coming session of Congress in December, with the hope that it will become a law during that session. Mr. Patman is one of the most popular members of Congress, a very brilliant and forceful speaker, and the Alabama Legionaires are indeed fortunate to have him as their guest on this occasion. Other prominent men of state-wide and national note who will appear on the program include: Gen. W. L. Sibert, of Panama Canal fame, national vice commander, Forrest Cooper, of Washington, D. C., who will represent the National Headquarters, Hon. J. A. Keller, president of the Alabama Educaton Association, and others.

The convention proper will be called to order by the State Commander, Jas. C. Connor, of Huntsville, Monday morning, July 25, in the large auditorium of the Gadsden High School, and from that time on, there will not be an idle moment for the visitors. Only the mornings will be devoted to business and routine sessions of the Legion, the afternoons and evenings being for pleasure and entertainments. There will be three dances; one at the Hotel Reich, Monday night, from 10 to 2, and two Tuesday night; one at the country club, and one at the Hotel Reich.

There will be several Junior base ball games, sightseeing trips, golf tournaments, etc. The big parade will take place at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon, July 26, with Maj. Robert Joerg, U. S. A., as the grand Marshall. All posts over the state are urged to bring their post colors, and Old Glory, to take part in the parade, which promises to be the longest and best ever held, inasmuch as at least 10 musical organizations are expected to be in line; these to include two bands from Fort McClellan, the band of Gen. Gorgas Post, Birmingham, the 167th Inf. band of Gadsden, and others, as well as the prize-winning Drum and Bugle Corps of Birmingham Post No. 1, Birmingham; the fifty-two piece drum and bugle corps of LaGrange, Georgia, the drum and bugle corps of the Anniston Post, and most probably the corps from Rome, Georgia, as well as several military units from Fort McClellan, and the northern section of the state.

Following the parade the uniform bodies contest will be held at the Godsden High School athletic field at three o'clock, a big barbecue in Moragne Park, at four, and the bathing beauty review and contest at the country club, at five. All posts are urged to send their "Queens" to participate in this contest.

Wednesday morning, July 27, will bring the 14th annual convention to a close with the selection of the 1932 Convention city, and the annual election of officers. This promises to be a very lively session, as several very prominent Legionnaires are candidates for the Department Commander. A whole-hearted welcome awaits all the Legionnaires of Alabama, and the Auxiliaries, in Gadsden. The city of Gadsden will belong to the Legion for these three days.

The railroads have offered special rates of one fare plus twenty-five cents for a round trip ticket to the state convention in Gadsden. In order to receive this rate you must have an identification ticket issued by the Legion. We have those identification tickets in this office, so order your supply at once.

HOSPITAL THANKS PILOT CLUB

To The Clanton Pilot Club:

For interest shown by you in renovating, repainting, furnishing linens and other equipment for a room in the Central Alabama Hospital, the officials of the institution desire to express their most profound appreciation and heartfelt thanks.

If we can in any way serve you, call on us.—Yours truly, V. J. Gragg, President; Grace Robinson, Superintendent.

HOOVER SLASHES OWN PAY

Cabinet Officers Reduced to $12,750 Annually

Washington, July 15.—President Hoover today ruled himself a $15,000 a year reduction in salary and simultaneously reduced the salaries of his cabinet officers by 15 per cent.

The order, cutting cabinet members from $15,000 a year to $12,750 a year, was issued while the president sat with them at his regular weekly cabinet meeting.

Mr. Hoover, himself, it was said, took a 20 per cent cut as the maximum allowed under the law. Ordinarily he receives $75,000 a year.

IN MEMORY

On July 13, 1932, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. Ludie Chandler and wafted away our father and grandfather, Mr. Allen T. Dobbs. He was 79 years of age. He was laid to rest at Mulberry, with Martin in charge. He had been with his daughter, Mrs. Chandler, three weeks to the day, when he died with cancer.

He was in the big storm and we feel sure that the shock and injury shortened his days. Grandpa leaves to mourn his loss, nine children, Jim, Henry and Russtll Dobbs of Mineral Springs, Mr. Ed Dobbs of Aldrich, Mr. Oscar Dobbs of Cox, Mrs. Essie Headley of Cox, Mrs. Nettie Seals of Maplesville, Mrs. Mae Cash of Lawley and Mrs. Ludie Chandler of Union Grove; two brothers, Jim and Will Dobbs of Bessemer and two sisters, Mrs. Carrie Retherford of Clanton and Mrs. Convil of Oak Grove.

All was done for grandpa that loving hands and physicians could do, but God saw fit to call him to a better world. Weep not dear friends for grandpa has gone to heaven with God to dwell, while demon and devil remain in hell. His pains, suffering and worries are over. He finished his work, he fought a good fight, and has gone to a home God has prepared for him.

Oh, grandpa, if you could only know the heartaches we are caused to bear. It seemed more than we could bear to give you up; we all loved you so much. But God works in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform. Grandpa lived a life that we should all pattern by. Just to know him was to love him. He was so good and kind to all. He greeted his friends with a smile.—Mrs. Annie Paschal.

PETER McLAREN KEEPS HIS CHOPPING RECORD

Peter McLaren, the champion wood chopper, went through the contest at Clanton Building Supply Co., Tuesday, and came out with his record still clear of every contestant by plenty of margin.

The first man to hop the big pine log was R. F. Ellison, one of the widely known local axe wielders. He cut it in two in five minutes and 44 seconds.

The next man in the contest was Archie DeLoach, whose time was five minutes and sixteen seconds.

Then came the champion Plumb Axe artist, Peter McLaren. It took him only one minute and forty-five seconds to cut the log.

Archie DeLoach was the winner of the Plumb Axe, which was given to the man who made the nearest approach to the time required for McLaren to cut the log.

A great throng of people witnessed the contest. It was the unanimous opinion of the spectators that McLaren and his Plumb Axe are a cutting-up combination.

Central Singing Society

The Central Singing Society meets at Friendship church next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All singers are invited. We do not know of an all day singing anywhere next Sunday, so everybody near by make an effort to come to Friendship in the afternoon and help in the singing. If you have a Henson or Stamps book, bring it.

George McCullough, Birmingham, is president of the Mountain team. Harriett Barnes of Mobile won the single tennis championship for women and Lindsey Oden, Hartselle, took the crown for men.

State Geologist Walter B. Jones, plans to spend the next three weeks in the vicinity of Clayton, where he will study the Fuller's earth deposits of that region. His investigations is to be recorded in a bulletin to be issued by the state geological survey.

David de Jarnette, acting curator of the Alabama Museum of Natural History, is now in Chicago and vicinity where he is in charge of the mound excavations being carried on by a group of archaeologists of the University of Chicago.

The summer school is now in the first week of the last term of the 1932 session. The term will run six days per week for five weeks. Summer graduation exercises will be held the evening of August 19.

PICNIC AT BILLINGSLEY

The Billingsley P.-T. A. is sponsoring a school picnic, July 30, at the Billingsley High School. Barbecue and refreshments will be sold for the benefit of the school. An interesting educational program will be rendered during the morning. Speakers are to be announced next week. Ball games will be played during the afternoon. Everyone make plans to attend, enjoy the day and help the school.—Billingsley P.-T. A.

Though vacations scatter the family the Telephone keeps them together

Vacation time is here and soon thousands of families will be scattering to various places to spend their vacations. Some will go to the seashore, others to the mountains or on week-end motor trips; yet large numbers of these vacationists will keep in close touch with relatives and friends back home by telephone.

People are fast learning that it adds much to the pleasure of their vacations and the happiness of those left at home when they call back at regular intervals.

The cost is small. To most places 25 miles away, the day station-to-station rate is about 25 cents; 75 miles, 60 cents; 100 miles, 65 cents; 150 miles, $1.00. During the evening and night periods, rates are much lower.

MORE CURIOUS THINGS

If people keep on bringing curious things to The Union-Banner we are going to have to put up a special building and use it as a museum. And we wish we were able to do exactly that. Such a place to dsiplay the products of Chilton County's farms would at all times be a thing of interest and value.

This week Clifford Manning, of Mulberry, son of the well-known and justly famous D. O. Manning, brought us a whole raft of gourds, cucumbers, squash and what-not. These were grown by Clifford on his father's farm. Oliver said they belonged to Clifford, and insisted that his brother have credit for them.

Clifford showed that he is very mch interested in such things. He showed us a squash and a gourd that grew close together. Crossing was very evident, as there were many distinct features in common.

As this boy explained all about his curious collection of odd vegetable creatures, the thought came to me, how valuable, and indeed how interesting must be farm life to a boy who will bring himself to see and appreciate the interesting study he may make of plant life.

Here is a boy who likes to experiment with plants. He enjoys watching them to see how they live and what are their habits. Through an eye trained to see such things and a mind to understand them, life on a farm holds for boys a much finer pleasure than any other place in the world.

Oliver said he had been to Miami for some weeks on a visit. "I was glad to get back to the farm," he said. "I would not like to live all the time in a place where folks are doing nothing but wasting time and money on foolish pleasures." That sounds good for a boy.

WILL WE KEEP A NAVY?

Due to the tireless efforts of Senator Hale, the navy appropriation bill has been saved from emasculation. As sent to conference it carried $318,233,591 for maintenance and development of the navy during the next fiscal year. This represents a cut of only $8,119,868 from the House bill. If the senate had applied the 10 per cent cut prescribed for most other appropriation measures the reduction would have been nearly four times that large.

The senator from Maine convinced the Senate that this is no time to jeopardize national defense. Naval construction in the United States is far behind the limits prescribed by international treaty. Although the government has jealously guarded the right of Uncle Sam to build and maintain a navy second to none in the world, the actual fighting strength of this country on the sea is considerably below that of Great Britain and in some ways inferior to that of Japan. Regardless of the depression the maintenance of a reasonable naval construction program is imperative.

As the naval supply bill passed the Senate, under the guidance of Senator Hale, it gives assurance that the efficiency of the navy will be maintained and that a reasonable amount of construction will proceed. Seven cruisers, one aircraft carrier, three submarines and five destroyers are now under construction. Three battleships are being modernized. The supply bill gives assurance that this work will continue through the fiscal year beginning on July 1. Present indications are that construction of only one naval vessel, a cruiser, will begin next year. A total of about $24,000,000 will be available for naval building, $6,000,000 of which is being transferred from the naval supply accounts fund.

Senator Hale also deserves credit for passage through the senate of the bill providing that the navy should be built up to treaty limits. That measure is now bogged in the Naval Affairs Committee of the House.

Senator Hale's bill does not call for any immediate appropriations. Expansion of the naval building program will have to wait for an improvement in economic conditions. But that does not alter the desirability of committing Congress to a policy of building up to parity with Great Britain. There is no possibility that the other great naval powers will reduce their strength on the sea to a ratio below treaty limits, as the Americans has done. Consequently, the United States ought to make definite arrangements to take its proper place among the naval powers. Those practical and conscientous statesmen who have been working to this endson Captitol Hill deserve more credit than they have received.

The Gunga Din bathing suit has been put on the market. And the average man looking it over will conclude that Kipling was right when he said: "You're a braver man than I am, Gunga Din."

President Hoover's proposal for a one-third reduction in all armaments was so simple that the European governments want three months to study it—for the purpose, of course, of rendering it more complex.

UNCLE TOM POWELL'S FAMILY RECORD

Ninety-one descendants for a man 75 seems to be about the fulfillment of the command "Go thou and replenish the earth," if there is such a command anywhere.

Such is the record of Uncle Tom Powell, age 75 years, who lives about three miles east of Clanton, in the Concord cummunity. Mr. Powell has been married three times, and has eight living children, 45 grandchildren, and 38 great-grandchildren.

He was born and reared within a few miles of where he now lives. The only time he ever lived outside of Chilton County was when he was from two to four years old, in Shelby County.

His first wife was Mary Taylor; second was Martha Moates; third was Lettie Mims, widow of Mose Mims. Mr. Powell and his third wife now live at the old place of Mose Mims, near Concord.

The children of Mr. Powell are Mrs. Lucinda Wilson, wife of Floyd Wilson; Mrs. Mahala Wilson, wife of Joe Wilson; A. H. Powell; Mrs. Hattie Bell Mims, wife of Elijah Mims; Mrs. Lennie Miner, wife of John Miner; James Powell; Scheusler Powell; Mrs. Pharoah Mims, wife of Arthur Mims.

Uncle Tom is a farmer, and we would class him as among the best in the county. He always maintains his lands and his crops in the most beautiful condition, indicating that he is a very careful and painstaking worker.

TOWNLEY MONEY

If A. C. Townley had his way, he says, he would start the government printing presses and print five, ten and fifteen billion dollars in five-dollar bills. And lest it puzzle anybody to figure out what we should then do for change, with practically all of our money in five-dollar bills, it may be suggested that we shouldn't need any smaller change—the five-dollar bills would rapidly become of value so small that they would meet that problem, and that alone. One-dollar bills, fifty-cent pieces, quarter and dimes would buy nothing at all by themselves. Prices would be stated in thousands—a fortune in face value for a bushel of wheat, a king's ransom for a pair of overalls, and nudism for everybody but the printer of the bills.

The Democrats in their national platform declared against the cancellation of the European debts, and since they loaned the money to Europe in the first place they naturally feel that they have some responsibility in the matter.

Peel the dry and repeal the Eighteenth Amendment is going to be the Democratic slogan in the forthcoming campaign.

De doubt whether Andy Volstead would have gotten many votes if a poll had been taken of the galleries in either the Democratic or Republican national conventions.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert)

In his speech of acceptance at the Chicago Democratic National Convention, Governor Roosevelt is quoted as saying:

"Our Republican leaders tell us that economic laws—sacred, inviolable, unchangeable—that these laws cause panics which no one can prevent. But while they prate of economic laws, people are starving. We must lay hold of the fact that economic laws are not made by nature. They are made by human beings."

Without going into the politics of the situation one can find serious reasons for taking exceptions to the governor's statement on economic laws. If these are made by human beings rather than by nature then it would be possible for human beings to annul them. Yet in every season of panic—and panics are caused not by economic laws themselves but by violation of these laws by puny human beings—we have to learn all over that the efforts of man to change the natural economic law are futile. If Governor Roosevelt's statement that economic laws are man-made is true, then we ought yet to devise a means of repealing the law of supply and demand. Numerous efforts to do this have been made by national and local legislatures in the past—not only in the United State but in nearly every country in the world, and in each instance the effort has been a failure. For a time, in some cases, it may have been apparent that the natural law had been altered, but in each instance the reaction has come and has come so relentlessly that the nation which has sought to repeal nature's law has been worse off than before the attempt was made.

One economic law provides that if we go into debt heedlessly, borrowing more than we can pay, we must suffer in the end. This law applies to nations as well as individuals. When everybody goes into the debt contracting game and starts spending money recklessly, we have at first good times, and an increase of values, and the economists call it inflation. Then comes the inevitable reaction and we have panic and depression. This is exactly what has happened in every civilized country of the world during the past ten years. Now this law regarding running into debt is not a human one. We doubt very much whether even Governor Roosevelt in all the exuberance of his newfound candidacy can devise a way to repeal this law, and bring about a condition in which the individual or the nation can borrow and spend as much as it pleases without sooner or later bringing the inevitable reaction. If he can do so then he will indeed be a benefactor to mankind.

One of the favorite ideas of those who believe that economic laws are man-made—and it always comes to light in times of depression—is that one way to avoid the evil consequences of severe deflation following a boom period is to issue more money. These economists profess to believe that the old laws regarding sound money are not natural laws set aside by oiling up the government printing presses and turning them loose for the creation of a flood of paper money. Yet here again the quickening of the economic pulse, when such a movement starts, turns out only to be a fever and is followed by collapse and economic prostration. If anyone doubts this let him ask German business men who went through the currency deflation in that country a few years ago.

The fact is that our fundamental economic laws are not man-made, but are inevitable in their effect. As we obey them we prosper and as we disobey them we suffer. No politician and no statesman has yet found a way to get around them. They are eternal as the ten commandments.

MORAL ECHOES

(By D. W. Haskew)

With hoe in hand I started to cutting some sweet gum bushes that were growing by the side of a dead gum tree. At the first lick I saw a green lizzard leap from the bushes and land on the tree. Boy like, I followed the Chameleon around the tree and to my astonishment this species of the lizzard had changed his color and now was the identical color of the trunk of the tree. Being hot in pursuit of him, he leaped back into the green gum bushes, and when I located him the next time, he was as green as a gum leaf. The lizzard had the capacity to change his color. He did this for purposes of deception. He had in mind the purpose of hiding from his enemies and deceiving its expected food. He changed himself to be the color of the thing over which he crawled. Since that day I have been beating the bushes with the Gospel, and I have located and upset many a human chameleon. This type of mankind seems to have the faculty of changing their colors to suit their associations. On Sunday in the choir, or in the pew they look white as angels, but on Thursday night at the dance hall, they look black as mud. I often wonder what God is going to do with this type of the human Chameleon family.

I was sitting in the photographer's office waiting to see him about testing out my defects in the world of beauty. In came a previous customer. She had fire on her cheeks and ever and anon she would blow some smoke from her nostrils. While we waited together I was tempted to get a bucket of water and dash it over her, for it seemed that she was going to catch on fire. When the proprietor of the esablishment stepped from behind the curtains she dashed at him with a fury that frightened two men. "Look at that picture. Do you think I look like that? Do you call that a good likeness?" snapped the woman, as she shoved a photo under the nose of the photographer. "Why that thing is an outrage. In it I have an awful squint of the eyes and my face looks like a prize-fighting bully," she continued. Without saying a word the protographer ran back and brought out the negative. Glancing over the picture and the negative, he quietly replied, "Why my good woman, they are just alike." A lot of folks are filled with wrath when they see themselves as they really are. If you want to fire up the furnace in the bosom of folks, just put them into print as they really are. Oh, that we had the power to see ourselves as other people see us.

In one of the county courts in east Georgia a few weeks ago a negro man was put into the witness chair to tell why and how he came into the possession of a sack full of chickens found in his possession. He related to the court this interesting story: "Judge, it was dis way bout dem fowls. I went out wid me dogs after a pussum for me dinner. No possums was stirrin, and late at night I started home wid de sack on me back. I sartenly passed de accuser's house, but I did not stop to get his chickens. Dey just flewed off de roost and flew into my sack as I walked along, an I did not know dat da wuz in dere until I reached my shanty. No sir, Judge, I didn't catch dem fowls, dey just took and flew into my sack. I knowed the very minute I saw dem dat dey belonged to Mars John and I was going to carry dem back to him just as soon as I planted me crop." Have you ever seen a member of the white race who had a lot of things that "Just flew into his sack?" Some folks would not steal for the world, but somehow things just take up with them. In other words, they borrow and never pay back.

I left the train at a Florida depot and was waiting around for a friend who was to meet me and carry me out into the country to help in a meeting. About ten minutes after the train had passed a big car dashed up and a nicely dressed man leaped to the ground and dashed into the depot and asked for a ticket to Pensacola. The agent replied, "I am sorry my friend, but your train has been gone about ten minutes." The man showed every sign of disgust at every thing but himself. He cursed the train, he cursed the railroads, re cursed his car and then let fly a few more vulgar oaths for full measure. I looked at this bundle of curses and wondered why he did not waste his curses on himself alone. I knew that on the big L. & N. division that trains did not run ahead of time. Some folks have such an exalted opinion of themselves that they think that God and creation should wait on them.

Meeting a red-nosed Demijohn at the street crossing, he accosted me with the querry, "And now parson, what do you think of the prohibition question since Rockefeller has come out for repeal?" Not wishing an argument with a man who had no reason, and one who has no eyes to see a moral question, I ventured to say, "I think Mr. Rockefeller has made the mistake of his life." Then my man blew himself up like a balloon fish and replied, "There you go again, too narrow to see that there are two sides to every question." At that moment the red light came on, but I paused long enough to say, "Yes my friend, there are two sides to every question, just like there are two sides to a sheet of fly paper. Do you not agree with me that it makes much difference to the fly as to which side he lights on?" I guess he cursed, but I did not hear it, for I was on the other side of the street. There are two sides to the whiskey question, one side has life and liberty, the other side has the gum and death.

ONE EASY JOB

There is no particular difficulty in inducing two dandelions to grow where one grew before.

No matter where you go or what you do the galleries always seem to be for Al Smith.

A lot of politicians expect to wake up some of these days and find that they are back in the campaign of 1896, or something like it.

The way some of those Tammany candidates are "lining up" for their presidential candidate must remind them of the good old castor oil days.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, in a speech at London on July 4, called for world cooperation. Fine. The only trouble is that the internationalists seem to want Uncle Sam to do all the cooperating.

ROOM EQUIPPED BY PILOT CLUB

The Pilot Club of Clanton is to be commended most highly for the spirit which moved them in equipping a delightful room at the Central Alabama Hospital, where cheerfulness may come in to brighten the dreary hours of some sick and lonely person.

Women are always strong for harmony in color. They believe in carrying out the color scheme in everything from socks to headpiece. Since the Pilot Club is a group of women, naturally the first thing they struck upon in arranging the hospital room was color. They adopted the club colors, green and gold, and out of it made a delightful harmony for this particular place. The whole interior of the room, walls, window shades, curtains, furniture and everything is given its due portion of the color scheme.

The little things were not overlooked. A water set, smoking set, flower stands, wall vases, all of which add to the attractiveness of the arrangement, and the colors are harmonious.

Noticeable was a little picture of George Washington hanging on the wall. Its green frame brought out a perfect degree of contrast against the golden hue of the newly finished wall.

Enumerated in the furnishings supplied by the club are two linen bedspreads, twelve sheets, a number of pillow cases, bath towels, dresser scarfs, and a lovely little framed mirror.

It would be a pleasure to stay in a nice room like this—if one were not too sick.

Another "Get-Together" Affair

Since I have gotten all so interested in community affairs, it seems that every one which happens nowadays, which I attend, gets better. Last Friday night I attended a Sunday school picnic down at the home of Mr. G. F. M. Easterling, and enjoyed the affair very much. I believe I have been missing a lot of my life in the past by not attending more of these functions. Some thing over a hundred people, young and old, attended this picnic, given by Class No. 4, of the Foursquare Sunday school. And what a time we all had. Supper spread on a long table under the trees, followed by refreshments of several kinds, this followed by an old time singing, and this, in turn followed by games of many kinds. After some three hours of these different parts of the the affair, we returned to our homes. Besides the class and many members of the church, several visitors were present with us. A very enjoyable occasion, indeed.

Woodman, Spare That Tree

Yes, sir! I was present at Rockett's log-cutting last Tuesday, along with just about everyone else in this immediate neighborhood. And, boy, oh boy, how that guy could chop. I had a nice high seat up in one of the second story windows of the Rockett establishment, where I could see everything that happened, which was plenty. One fellow went to work on one end of the log, and I thought he was pretty smart as he went about the business of chopping that old pine log, taking his own time so that he wouldn't get all worried out. Then the next guy took his stand on the log and chopped it in a little shorter time than the first. And then the champ got his axe out and cut loose. And when I say he "cut loose" I mean just that. How the chips did fly. And that fellow had the log chopped in a little less than half the time the last fellow had used. If that fellow should happen to fall afoul of the usual size wood lot, it wouldn't be long before he would have it looking mighty bare. As the champion wood-chopper whacked away at the log, and the big chips flew, it reminded me of that poem, "Woodman, Spare That Tree."

The E. W. Butler Article

Well, at last I am able to give readers of The Union-Banner a paper on "The Life of E. W. Butler," of Thorsby. This, I believe, will prove to be one of the most interesting articles you have ever read. On account of the length of the article, it cannot be put in this column, but you will find it elsewhere in this issue. Turn to it—read it—enjoy it.

The Voice of The People

In the past, it has been the custom to call mass meetings to settle questions of great importance in this county, but it seems "them days are gone forever." If the mass meeting at the courthouse last Saturday in some way shows the trend of public opinion, our people do not want their money spent in this way. It is their money, and I think they should have some say as to how it should be spent. I believe the people's voice should be listened to.—Man in the Moon.

What Makes Holes in Doughnuts?

Dr. Sie Hayes has found the answer to the ever-perplexing question, "What makes the holes in Doughnuts?" On a visit to the new bakery one day last week, the doctor was looking over the bread-making machinery. As would be naturally expected, he was asking questions about things he did not understand. Coming around to the dough mixer he inquired what in tarnation the baker expected to do with such a big auger "That's what we use to bore the holes in doughnuts," was the answer he received.

Pee-Wee Not Married

"Like the story of Mark Twain's death," said Leroy Martin, "the report that I got married is very much exaggerated." For more reasons than one, Pee-Wee wishes it to be known that he is not married.

Another Strange Plant

From the farm of Mrs. Emma Foshee comes one of the most unusual plants we have ever seen. It looks like the vine of an Irish potato, has leaves like a watermelon vine, and is so full of small thorny burs you can't touch it without getting stuck. The leaves and stems are full of thorns. Mrs. Foshee thinks perhaps the storm last spring picked up the seed in some distant place and deposited it in her field. We can at least be glad the storm did not leave us many of such things, if it did bring us this one.

New Bridge about Finished

The new steel and concrete bridge on the old Birmingham Highway at the city limits is just about completed. The workmen estimate that the work will be done by the last of the week. The men who have worked on the bridge will give a barbecue and picnic this afternoon (Thursday) to which they have invited a number of guests, including the county commissioners, Probate Judge, and others. It is a fine piece of work, that will endure for many years to come. I understand there is a plan on foot to open Tenth Street so it will extend northward directly over the hill and straight across the new bridge. That too, would be a good piece of work.

Mr. Shaw's Cattle Venture

At his big farm just across the river below Lay Dam Mr. H. S. Shaw is carrying on an extensive venture in cattle raising. Last Friday I was fortunate to be one of a bunch of men from Clanton whom he carried over there to see his farm. Particular attention was given to the pasture which has been developed to take care of the cattle. It is a very fine pasture of lespedeza, carpet grass and Dallas grass, which has been made in six months. The seed were sown on the naked ground from which all timber and growth had been cleared. There was no plowing or harrowing. By this venture Mr. Shaw vindicated the recommendations of Auburn in pasture making.

Only One Thing Lacking

While we were at the Shaw farm we enjoyed seeing not only the pasture and fine cattle, but also the trench silo, the sorghum being grown to fill the silo and feed the cattle in the winter; the fine barns and corn cribs; many nice hogs, a modern potato curing house; acres and acres of fine corn; cozy cabins down by the riverside that are indeed tempting to one who is given to outing and fishing. But with all his fine hospitality, there was one thing that would have been of very particular interest, and Mr. Shaw never mentioned it. I will always wonder why he did not show us a big patch of fine watermelons. I never would have thought of this if Uncle George Willis had not whispered the question in my ear as we were returning home: "Don't you wish Shaw had showed us his watermelon patch?"

I Thought About Clanton's Swamps

It was a low swampy place where Mr. Shaw made the clearing for his pasture. As we looked at it, the fine cattle grazing here and there, the thought again came to my mind about how nice it would be if the swamp lands around Clanton were cleared away, planted in pasture like that, and giving support to hundreds of head of cattle. The possibilities of this community as a cattle raising center are almost unlimited. All around this town are hundreds of acres of land that would furnish all the feed necessary for many cattle during fully seven months of the year. Besides being worth more, pastures would look better than swamps of worthless trees, vines, underbrush and holes of muddy water.

Tickling the Democrats

As I knock around town, every now and then I come across signs of great rejoicing among the Democrats. They are tickled to death at the way the Republicans keep up any and all kinds of discord in their leadership. Individual rivalry among some of the Republican leaders keeps the political pot boiling all the time. The Republicans seem unable to agree on anything any more. They don't agree on Hoover. They don't agree on road working. They don't agree on the weather—some are wet and some dry. No wonder the Democrats are tickled. They know what is going to happen if the Republicans of Chilton County don't learn some sense right soon and quit acting a fool about everything that comes up. Some Democrats are glad, and some Republicans are skeered. My own private opinion is that Republicans better leave off everything else for a while now and support the Republican nominees. We can look after selecting a probate judge all right when the time comes two years hence.

New Syrup Coming In

Uncle Bob Holley was in Clanton Tuesday making preparations for getting his new sorghum syrup on the market. He says he will make it Friday and will be in town with it ready for sale Saturday. Mr. Holley has been a busy man on his farm this summer. He has grown a great quantity of vegetables of every kind, and has sold lots of them. He will be early in the game if he gets on the market with new syrup next Saturday.

France and Germany are still arguing about who is guilty of starting the war, which seems to us about as futile as the Sunday night discussions on the village street corners of who was guilty of losing the Sunday afternoon ball game.

POOR OR

On account of sickness in his family, Rev. G. B. Golden couldn't be with us in our revival meeting this week. So our pastor has secured the help of Rev. J. H. Limbrick to carry on the services.

Mr. Odis Weldon left Monday for Birmingham where he will work during the summer.

Mr. E. E. Edwards and daughter, Lucille, visited Miss Alice Williams Monday afternoon.

MULBERRY

I am writing this article to give emphasis to our revival which begins at Mulberry next Sunday. Brother Wallace Cook of Stanton will do the preaching. He is a splendid Christian gentleman, who loves the souls of men and who is willing to do his best to win them for Christ. Bro. Cook is well fitted in every way and I am sure we will have a gracious revival if we commit ourselves to the Lord's service.

I feel sure that the good people of Mulberry will do everything in their power to have things in preparedness. There is a good deal more in getting ready for tasks than there is in doing the task in many instances. We fail to receive blessings because we are not ready for them.

If you have not prayed for the revival, do it without fail. Also pray for the lost of the community now. Come and invite your friends and everyone.—G. G. Williams.

County Farm Agent's Notes

ROTARY CLUB FOR LEGUMES

Anniston, Ala.—The Anniston Rotary Club has joined hands with County Agent S. R. Doughty in sponsoring winter legumes throughout Calhoun County. The aim is to increase the acreage planted for soil improvement and also for grazing. E. L. Turner, Jr., and Gen. R. E. Noble are the Club's representatives on this project.

EGG COST IS REDUCED TO 7 CENTS A DOZEN

Auburn, Ala., July 18.—By producing eggs at a cost of 7 cents per dozen, 197 Alabama poultrymen who are owners of farm demonstration flocks are operating successfully with low prices for eggs. Many of them are under the average cost of 7 cents per dozen.

H. R. Bailey, extension poultryman at Auburn, says that these 197 flocks are scattered throughout the state and that a commercial protein supplement is the key to theirachievement. This protein supplement is fed with home-grown grain and green feed as grazing.

This supplement is 26 per cent protein. It contains several proteins both animal and vegetable. Minerals are included.

It was three years ago when the Alabama Farm Bureau Poultry Association suggested such a protein supplement, with a view to using more home-grown feed and reducing the cost of producing eggs. It has worked well and has spread to other states.

For laying hens one pound of this supplement is mixed with one pound of corn meal, fed in a self-feeder. Corn is fed twice daily as much as the hens will eat. Poultrymen having 2½ to 3 gallons of buttermilk daily per 100 hens feed this mash except that one pound of the supplement is mixed with two pounds of corn meal.

In addition to egg production this ration has proved successful for baby chicks and for growing chicks, either with or without milk. In feeding baby chicks and growing chicks two pounds of corn meal are mixed with one pound of protein supplement. If other grains are available they are fed along with corn without changing the mash. Green feed and grazing are provided in addition to grain and mash.

County agents and home demonstration agents are advising this method of producing eggs and raising chicks.

FARM WOMEN TO MEET

Auburn, Ala.—The annual meeting of the Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Club Women will be held at Auburn during farmers week, August 2, 3, and 4, according to Mrs. J. D. Giles, president. Officers will report on the work of the organization during the year and plan for their work for the ensuing year. Among the speakers will be Miss Mary Mims of Louisiana, whose subject will be "Community Organization;" and Prof. Duncan, Auburn extension director.

PINE STRAW FLOOR FORMING IN WOODS

Montgomery, Ala., July 18.—Under the care and administration of their owners, large areas of long leaf pine forest lands are returning to their natural conditions, says Colonel Page S. Bunker, Alabama State Forester. A recent survey of many stands of southwest Alabama showed that with the increasing density of young growth the grass is rapidly becoming chocked out with a layer of pine straw.

Grass has practically no place in a well stocked long leaf forest, points out Colonel Bunker. This is notwithstanding that most of the cut over lands of the long leaf region look more like prairies than woodlands. This condition is due to over cutting, failure to leave sufficient seed trees and cutting without reference to the period of seed fall. Further, most of the so-called virgin stands were comprised of areas decimated by man caused fires for several generations. Under such circumstances grass easily intrudes into the forest, hinders the seed germination of the more valuable tree species and introduces severe root competition with the young seedlings.

The natural long leaf forest is much more heavily stocked than most of the stands known to modern lumbermen and possesses pine straw floors upon which the seed germinates readily in such openings as are made by nature or by man, according to Colonel Bunker. Getting the long leaf forest back into this condition is the first step toward perpetual and profitable production of timber of this valuable species.

MORE ACRES PLANTED TO FOODS AND FEEDS

Alabama farmers have 442,000 more acres planted to food and feed crops this year than they harvested of the same crops last year, reports F. W. Gist, state and federal statistician for the department of agriculture. The total average planted to food and feed crops amounts to 4,928,000 acres compared with 4,496,000 acres harvested last year.

Despite the 10 per cent reduction in cotton acreage farmers have 100,000 acres more in all crops this year than harvested last year, the report shows. This year's acreage in all crops amounts to 8,017,000 compared with 7,917,000 last year.

Mr. Gist reports the following acreage planted to the various crops this year, the percentage of increase or decrease compared with last year: cotton 3,079,000 acres, a 10 per cent decrease; corn, 3,318,000, 7 per cent increase; hay, 711,000, 8 per cent increase; peanuts 329,000, 26 per cent increase; oats, 130,000, 15 per cent decrease; soybeans, 108,000, 30 per cent decrease; cowpeas, 112,000, 25 per cent increase; sweet potatoes, 98,000, 13 per cent increase; Irish potatoes, 36,000, 8 per cent decrease; sorghum for syrup, 55,000, 2 per cent increase; sugar cane, 22,000, 10 per cent increase; and truck crops, 21,000, 29 per cent increase.

Farmers have also planted 261,000 acres more of legumes in corn middles than they planted last year. They have 933,000 acres of corn planted to soybeans, cowpeas, peanuts and velvet beans compared with 692,000 acres in 1931.

Commenting upon the 100,000 acre increase in crops Mr. Gist said: "This increase is due both to the effort toward producing acre food and feed crops and to the additional new farms operated this year. The latter is estimated to amount to about 6,000 and comprises persons who have gone to the farm from industrial pursuits in an effort to make a living over the current depression."

WINTER LEGUME FACTS

Rich land is needed by every farmer and the easiest way that the Experiment Station at Auburn and the county agents of Alabama know to make land richer is by winter legumes—hairy vetch and Austrian peas.

George Webster of Florala, Covington County, made last year 2,750 bushels of corn on 50 acres, following a crop of Austrian winter peas. This was an average of 55 bushels per acre, or five times the average yield for the county.

One crop of Austrian winter peas caused J. N. Wallace of New Grocton, Coffee County, to make 35 bushels of corn per acre on land which had been making 12 to 15 bushels per acre.

A corn crop varying in yield from 35 to 60 bushels per acre following hairy vetch and Austrian peas was made by E. L. Fulton of Saginaw, Shelby County. Without a winter legume he made 20 to 25 bushels per acre.

Solon McGraw of Vincent, Shelby County, produced 85 bales of cotton on a 15-horse farm before he began planting hairy vetch and Austrian peas, after which he made 130 bales.

By planting hairy vetch seed in the fall and plowing the crop under in the spring, P. J. Watson of Lincoln in Talledega County, made 40 bales of cotton where he had been making 20 bales. On another field of 150 acres he averaged little more than 400 pounds of lint cotton per acre with no fertilizer.

John C. Webb and Sons of Demopolis, Marengo county averaged 45 bushels of corn per acre following winter legumes. They made 203 bales of cotton on 205 acres. The only fertilizer they bought was phosphate and potash.

BARTON TO DALLAS

Dr. L. E. Barton, secretary of the Alabama Baptist executive board, left Thursday night for Dallas, Texas, where he filled the pulpit of Dr. George W. Truett Sunday morning and night. Before returning home Dr. Barton will visit his brother at Jonesboro, Arkansas.

BOARD REFUSES TO CHANGE REGULATION

Approximately $300,000 was saved Wednesday for Alabama farmers by the state board of agriculture refusing to change its regulation requiring a minimum of 18 pounds and a maximum of 21 pounds of bagging and ties to be placed on every bale of cotton ginned in the state.

It was proposed to the board that the bagging standard be reduced from 18 to 15 pounds per bale, which, according to Seth P. Storrs, commissioner, would have resulted in a loss of $300,000 to farmers because of reductions in total weights of bales of cotton.

The board refused to permit the registration of mixed feed with more than 16 per cent of fiber material.

COTTON EXPORTS INCREASED

Cotton exports during June showed a gain over the same month last year.

The department of commerce announced this week that cotton exports during June were 360,000 bales as compared with 255,000 bales in June of last year.

Shipments for the 11 months of the cotton season from August to June, inclusive, aggregated 8,258,000bales, an increase of 1,757,000 over the shipments for the corresponding period of 1930-31 season.

DEBATE AT COURTHOUSE NEXT SATURDAY NIGHT

The affirmative side of the question will be argued by the Concord boys; the negative by Verbena boys.

This promises to be a very interesting display of youthful oratory and argument. The subject is a live one, and a good crowd should be present. There will be no admission charge.

If Your Doctor Was Your Cook–You Would Never Need Medicine

Physicians and Scientists Now Know that the Body is Composed of Eleven Minerals and Six Vitamins All of which are Contained in Natural Foods.

Modern, Refined Foods, Improper Cooking and Poorly Balanced Diet Rob the Body of these Essential Elements so Necessary to Health. Science finds New Way to supply These Deficiencies and Rebuild the Body.

Medical science, constantly searching for ways to prolong life, frequently come forward with startling statements of their findings, but no more astounding announcement has been made in recent years than the statement of an eminent Chemist who now declares that "There is no natural death. All deaths from so-called natural causes are merely the end point of progressive acid saturation." An amazing statement indeed but a warning, that if heeded, should improve the health and well being, increase the joy of living, and prolong the lives of millions of men, women and children who might otherwise drag through a weary life to an untimely end.

ACIDITY KILLS MILLIONS

Health authorities now agree that 91% of all diseases originate in the stomach and are caused by poor cooking, improper diet, and the eating of highly refined foods. Your doctor knows that the 11 essential Minerals and all Vitamins are contained in foods in their natural state and could he live with you constantly, carefully select and prepare everything you eat, you would never need medicines of any kind. Little Gertrude Gibson, as flower girl, wore a period frock of pink net over taffeta and carried a French bouquet of pink roses.

The ring bearer, Barnett Deramus, Jr., wore a white satin suit, and carried the ring on a satin pillow.

The bride entered with her father, Samuel Scott, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and Donald V. Spagnoli, of Glendale, California, who served as best man.

Her youthful beauty was emphasized by her wedding gown of ivory satin which was fashioned in form fitting lines, made with a short coat of angel skin lace, to which was attached the long satin train.

The veil of filmy tulle was attached to a cap of rose point lace, caught with orange blossoms. She wore long white gloves and the slippers which completed the costume were of corded moire.

The bride's only jewels were a watch, the wedding gift of the groom and an heirloom diamond bracelet. Her bouquet was of orchids and bride's roses, showered with valley lilies. Recessional was to the wedding march by Mendelssohn.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Scott parents of the bride, entertained at an informal reception, when guests were the bridal party and out-of-town guests.

Mrs. Scott wore poudre blue chiffon with trimming of lace. Her boquet was a corsage of pink roses.

Assisting in receiving were Mrs. J. E. Joyal, of Berkley, California, wearing green chiffon; Mrs. Arnold Joyal, of Washington, D. C., sister of the bride, wearing heavy eggshell lace trimmed with green velvet. Her bouquet was a corsage of pink roses; Miss Mary Scott, wearing pink chiffon and corsage of butterfly roses and valley lilies; Miss Fanny Jo Scott, Mrs. John Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Smale, Miss Frances Gulledge, Miss Cordelia Gulledge, Miss Evelyn Buford, Mrs. J. B. Fort, assisted.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Smale left for a short wedding trip. The bride wore a going away gown of midnight blue georgette with a blouse of beige lace, the hat and accessories being of beige.

They will later be with the bride's parents for 10 days before leaving for the West. En route they will visit Dr. Joyal in Washington and their tour will include stops in interesting points in Canada. In California, they will visit Mr. Smale's parents in Berkley, before taking up their residence in Fresno, where Mr. Smale is a member of the faculty of the high school.

The bride, who is a graduate of Alabama College, class of 1931, was last year connected with the high school at Hayneville, where she taught economics. Her beauty and vivid personality have made her widely popular.

She is a grandaughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Gulledge, of Verbena. On her father's side she is of families long prominent, socially and politically, in Virginia.

Mr. Smale received his A. B., and A. M., degrees at the University of California, where he was a member of Kappa Delta Rho and Phi Delta Kappa fraternities. He is an educator and a successful writer.

FARM AND GARDEN QUERY BOX

(By K. C. Davis, Knapp School of Country Life, Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.)

Q.—How may shade trees and others be prepared in summer for more successful transplanting in the winter?

A.—In midsummer dig a trench about eighteen inches deep around the tree so as to cut all lateral roots of the tree. Make this trench about three or more feet away from the tree, depending upon the size of the trunk of the tree. For large trees allow one foot distance for every inch of diameter of the trunk. If the trunk is four inches in diameter, let the radius of the circle be four feet. By cutting this trench many fibrous roots are formed between now and fall. Those fibrous roots are the best feeding roots for the tree next year after it is transplanted. Avoid injuring these roots at the time of transplanting.

Q.—Please give farm uses for crank-case waste oil.

A.—(1) Rub on stoves and pipes to prevent rust. (2) Wipe up floors to remove dust. (3) Saturate and clean farm implement. (4) Spray on poultry roosts, nests, etc., for lice and mites. (5) Paint on concrete forms to fill pores. (6) Immerse bolts, nuts, and treaded rods. (7) Spread on concrete walls to keep out water. (8) Cover concrete walls to reduce frost damage. (9) Mix with paint for stucco walls. (10) Wipe off work shoes and soak soles. (11) Clean and oil harness, trunk leather, etc. (13) Treat sills and bases of buildings to prevent termites. (14 Emulsify with lie and soap as orchard winter spray. (15) Soak old and new shingles used on roofs. (16) Paint farm sleds, stock chutes, and wood fences. (17) Surface gravel and dirt roads and walks to keep down dust and prevent mud. (18) Soak burlap to cover hog-rubbing posts. (19) Prevent lice and flies on livestock. (20) Kill wild onions and other noxious weeds along roadways. (21) Burn in blast burner for heating water, etc. (22) Spread on ponds to prevent mosquitoes.

POOR OR

DAT BLOOMIN PREACHER

This week's Blossom:
Old sayin is, "Money makes de mare go."
I say, "Dats whut makes lots ob church members sta to home."

Yoah tention dis mawnin is directed to de 18th chapter ob Matt. An as Ah reads dis scripture, Ah wants you to realize fully de fac dat it wuz spoken by our Lord. (Reads lesson.) Now Ah wants you all to bow down yoah heds while sistah Jane Stone leads us in prayer. (Her prayer:)

"Our gracious hebenly Father, wood you condescend to lissen to de petition ob one ob yoah very littleist chillun dis mawnin? Lord, Ah feels so little in Yoah sight an am so unworthy till Ah hesitates to call you Father. But you is bin so good to me in dese las few years while Ah wuz raisin mah chillun widout no daddy, cause you took him fum us six years ago. An Ah thanks you so much fur all you has done fur us. Ah praises you fur sabin three ob mah chillun. But oh how mah hart has been bleedin since da turned my two gals outen de church. Ah no da wuznt good gals, but you kno how Ah talked to um an prayed fur um. It mought be dat da oughter bin turned out, but de way de church went bout hit is whut kills mah soul. Des hop up an make charges ginst dem an turn um out an dem not present. Lord, dat may be de wa you wod hab done it, but Ah cant belebe it. You kno Lord how da cried when Ah got home an tol um bout it. Ah loves de church ob Christ, an Ah loves de brudders an sistahs, but Ah am fraid dat de man whut brot de charges ginst mah gals is gwyin to hab to suffer fur it. But stid ob bein mad wid de church, Ah will pray fur it. Lord bless dem to gals ob mine, an bless de church an bless de preacher whuts gwyin to preach to us dis mawnin. May he so preach an lead dis church dat she will do rite things, an deal wid her mimbers cordin to de scripture, is de prayer of yoah humble servant. Amen."

Now fur a tex. Ah invite yoah tention to de 15-16-17 verses ob de 18th chapter ob Matt. Lissen while Ah reads it. "Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone. If he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church; but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican." Some hab contended dat dis scripture cant be applied to de dealins ob de church wid unruly members. Contendin dat it applies to any trespass ob one brudder ginst another. But when we look at it in de rite lite we can easily see dat when one trespasses ginst another dat it is an offence ginst de cause ob Christ, an shood be dealt with by de church, if a reconciliation cant be brot about between de two. An if a brudder exhausts de means here set fourth an fails to win his brudder, den it becomes his duty to make de matter known to de church. Den when it is brot to de church, it becomes de same as whut has been called a public offence.

An while Ah belebe dat it is rite an in accordance wid de will ob Him who founded de church, to discipline members who will not walk orderly yet Ah belebe dat Jesus, de head ob be church, taught dat we, as individuals, an as a church, be lenient wid those who are weak, always ready to forgive.

As Ah listened to Sistah Stone as she prayed jes now, an havin learned how dis church, under de leadership ob a former pastor, had widout ever saying a word to an in their absence turned out her two girls, Ah couldn't hep but feel dat some one wuz guilty ob rong doin, either de one who lodged de complaint ginst dim or de church fur allowin such, or de pastor whoes duty it wuz to instruct de church an lead dem in de rite path long dese lines. Will you allow me to tell you bout a certain case? When Ah took charge ob a certain church a man cum to me an related dis story. He said dat he wuz a deacon an also de clerk ob dat church fur a long time, but da turned me out, an dis is whut da turned him out fur. He made a crop in de summer an run three teams on de county roads in de fall an winter, his camp on de road wuz eight miles fum his home on one Sunday ebenin (not his regular service day) he took his wagons to de field and loaded dem wid hay to take wid him on Monday mornin. An his wife took sick an kept him away fum de next conference, an in his absence, da turned him out fur desecratin de Sabbath day. De pint Ah want to make wid dis story is, not dat de man dun rite but dat de church dun rong. De fust conference Ah held as pastor ob a certain church, a deacon lodged a complaint ginst two boys fur playin base ball (not on Sunday) an wanted to turn dem out rite den, but Ah made um wait a month an gib dim boys a chance to be dar. Now, dat same deacon an his wife an his son-in-law an his wife drove up to a fillin station dat Sunday ebenin an bought five gallons ob gas an a quart ob oil, four dopes an a pack ob cigarettes. So when we met in conference de nex time an dat deacon brot up de charge ginst those boys, Ah axed him which did he think wuz de wust, to play ball on week days or buy gas an dope on Sunday.

Brudders dat deacon aint answered me yet. It seems to me dat most ob de churches in dis county is on de extreme one wa or de udder. Some will allow its members to do any wa an nevah sa a word or do anything bout it, an some is ready to bounce um out on de slightest provocation, an dat widout a chance to defend dem selves. Ah dont belebe de great hed ob de church, Jesus Christ, is pleased wid either. Les try to win de wayward ones back to de fold, an atter we has exhausted evy means an den failed, will be time nough to "tell it to de church."

May de Lord bless evy one ob you is de prayer ob your umble servant. We will now stan an be dismis.

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

We are announcing our servcies next Sunday as follows: Sunday school at 9:45 and preaching at 11 a.m. The young people's organizations at 7:15 and preaching at 8 p.m.

We understand that Dr. Ezell will be out of town for several Sundays and me wish to extend to the Baptist people a special invitation to worship with us. While he is away if the Methodist pastor can be of any help or comfort to any one of his flock, our services are at your call.

We are sticking to our bush and we are going to work right on during the summer. Not many people go to church during the summer months, but we will be here to administer to those who seek for worship. Our plan is to have services every Sunday with the exception of the 5th Sunday in July. There is room and a welcome for all.

From Operator Of Peoples Telephone

There are still a few who have not repaired their telephone line. We are asking you if you are going to fix your line, fix it now or as soon as possible, or if you are not going to fix it at all, please let us know, for we are continually having calls for people all over the country whom we cannot get, because their line is down and we do not know if they are going to fix it up or not, and the party calling always wants to know if they are going to fix it.

You folks seem to think if you can possibly get the operator you are O. K., but the operator can scarcely hear you, and the party you are calling cannot possibly hear you, because your line is down on the ground, maybe in two, and one end thrown on another line, rusty joints, and dead batteries. Now we are not going to have any such line connected to the Peoples Switchboard. They are nothing but trouble and worry to everybody. You can fix your line up if you will. Every man is so afraid that he will do more work than his neighbor, and everyone is waiting for the other one to start.

There is no excuse for you not fixing your line now. Most everyone is through laying by, the central fee is so reasonable, and I have put your switchboard in good condition. And the only excuse I can find for you not fixing your line is pure liziness. But if you had rather buy gasoline and come to town when you need a doctor or anything important than to fix your line and pay 25c per month central fee, its all right with us. Of course we would be mighty glad to have you with us, for the Peoples Telephone Co is growing every day, but we can get along nicely without you.

If you are in need of help, climbers or any tools, I will be only too glad to help you and furnish any tools, needed, if you will let me know which day you want me.

Those who have already paid central fees are not required to pay again. But it will be highly appreciated if you folks who have not paid will pay as soon as you can.

Any person who will get as many as five telephone holders who do not have telephones already will be given free one years central service.—Yours truly, C. R. Copelan.

FROM HALEYVILLE CITIZEN UP IN WINSTON COUNTY

Editor Union-Banner:

I notice occasionally a fellow bobs up and tells the people what a good Republican he has been, but proceeds to bless out Mr. Hoover and the entire Republican party and say they will never vote the ticket any more. They fail to tell you that they are sold to the wet crowd and have to vote Democratic to have any show towards making our country wet again. Don't get scared brethren, we are gaining ten dry Democrats for every wet Republican we are losing. A fine bargain.—Rev. J. E. Creel, Haleyville, Alabama.

DEEP SEA FISHING RODEO

Preparations are nearing completion for Alabama's fourth annual deep sea rodeo to be held in lower Mobile Bay and the Alabama Gulf waters August 8, 9, and 10, according to Commissioner I. T. Quinn, of the department of game and fisheries.

Continuing, Commissioner Quinn said: "The fourth annual deep sea fishing rodeo promises to surpass any event of its kind ever held. Registrations of participants are being received daily at the office of secretary Sam H. Lackland, Adams Motor Company, at 350 Government St., Mobile.

Fishing sportsmen from all over Alabama and from far flung sections of the country will meet Fort Gaines and match their fisherman's prowess with their competitors. Among the notables who are expected to participate are Will Rogers, of Beverly Hills, California; U. S. Senator Harry B. Hawes, author of "My Friend the Black Bass", Missouri; Col. Charles Dawes, with a party of fifty from Chicago, Illinois; and Irvin S. Cobb, of New York City.

The annual deep sea fishing rodeo was designed to make it possible for the every day variety of fisherman who have little opportunity on account of the cost usually found necessary in deep sea fishing to partipate in this wonderful sport. The committee in its preparations for Alabama's deep sea fishing rodeo has arranged for free lodging in comfortable quarters, meals at popular prices, and boat hire has been reduced to a minimum. Nothing will be left undone for the comfort and happiness of all participants.

Many valuable prizes will be awarded to successful contestants, and the rankest amateur is just as likely to win a grand prize as any old timer at the art of deep sea fishing.

Reports from the fishing grounds convey the good news that tarpon, the gamest fish that swims the seven seas, ling, King Mackerel, cavalla, black, fish, bonita, blue fish, speckled trout, channel bass, Spanish mackerel and many other valuable and game species are now appearing there in unusual numbers.

If you have visited historic Dauphin Island and Fort Gaines on its eastern point, overlooking the Gulf of Mexico, you will want to go back again. If you have never availed yourself of an opportunity to visit Alabama's sub-tropical area where the cooling breezes from the Gulf are wafted upon beautiful Dauphin Island and the sandy deaches of Mobile and Baldwin counties, you should arrange your vacation so as to include three days fishing with a host of brother Waltonians at Alabama's fourth annual deep sea rodeo.

Looking Through The Glass Walls

The State of Indiana has what is said to be the world's only glass-walled death chamber. However, this death chamber of most unusual construction is not part of the state's penal system but is the property of the Sinclair Refining Company and is located at the Sinclair P. D. Insect Spray testing laboratories at East Chicago, Indiana.

Nevertheless, the glass-built chamber is no miniature affair. It is a well-built structure and in size resembles a small room in your house. In it are carried on tests of Sinclair P. D. Insect Spray, for every batch of Sinclair P. D. manufactured must kill 1,000 pedigreed flies under conditions more difficult than those in your own home.

In making the test, the entomologist in charge of Sinclair's breed-a-million-a-year "fly farm" proceeds in this fashion: Taking a cage containing 100 strong, healthy flies to the death chamber, he uncorks the hole at the top of the cage and releases the flies into the chamber. The door of the chamber is then closed and a carefully measured quantity of Sinclair P. D. is sprayed into the chamber through small holes near the top. The sprayer is equipped with pressure gauges for maintaining the pressure behind the spray so that it is always the same degree of fine mist.

Watching through the glass, witnesses to the tests see that at first the P. D. has a very peppy effect on the flies; they fly crazily and around and around and seem to be having a very giddy time of it. Sinclair P. D. acts on insects just as cocaine or morphine acts on human beings—a little of it peps them up—and a little more kills them. But it is important to know that the insect must actually breathe the mist before he dies.

At the end of ten minutes (stop-watch time), the door of the death chamber is opened and the dead removed. Any fly which isn't actually on his back (Philidelphia count) and dead, is carefully picked up and removed to a screened observation cage where he is fed water and cinnamon buns (an ailing fly is especially partial to cinnamon rolls and will come back to life on them if given a chance.)

Ten such tests as these are carried out on every batch of Sinclair P. D. manufactured—making 1,000 flies in all which must be killed. If a certain number of flies revive, it is known that this particular batch of P. D. is not up to the Sinclair standard and must be discarded. Because of the death chamber test, every marketer and user of Sinclair P. D. can be sure of the killing power of P. D. on flies, mosquitoes, moths, roaches, bedbugs, ants, fleas and other household pests—yet it is harmless to men and animals.

SPECIAL ENTERTAINER COMING TO OUR COUNTY-WIDE PICNIC

Croell Kicker, of the Birmingham Police Department, informs us that he will attend the County Picnic at Popwell Woods July 22, and will bring with him "Preacher" Salser, who is a talented and unique entertainer, of the Birmingham Police Department.

Mr. Kicker's friends will be glad to know he is coming, and they will look forward with much interest in seeing what it is that "Preacher" Salser will do for entertainment of the visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Duncan, of Birmingham, visited friends and relatives in Clanton Sunday.

Revival At Refuge On Fourth Snnday

Rev. J. W. Jones, Pastor of Thorsby Church, Will Do The Preaching

As formerly announced, Rev. J. W. Jones, of Thorsby, will do the preaching in the revival beginning the 4th Sunday in this month at Refuge Baptist Church. Refuge is located six miles northeast of Clanton. We ask that the readers bear the date in mind and come out and hear Bro. Jones. They who have heard him know that he is a live wire in a revival.

Rev. Jones preached here last year and there were 27 additions to the church. The writer has been very closely associated with Rev. Jones, and has learned that he is a man of God, which is the secret of his being such a power in the pulpit. The meeting will doubtless extend through the following week.

"The Unexpected Father"

The Wadesonian Theatre will show Universal's enthusiastically hearlded "The Unexpected Father," on next Friday and Saturday, according to Mr. Wade's announcement.

The film, co-starring Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts for the first time, concerns the embarrassing situation of a newly-rich bachelor who finds a strange lady of four years calling him "daddy" and quite adamant about it.

The child, played by Hollywood's newest kid-star, Cora Sue Collins, plays havoc with the scheduled marriage of the bachelor to a scheming gold-digger, while a nurse from the dog hospital, Miss Pitts, is recruited, quite by mistake, by the millionaire to quell the confusion.

Dale Van Every wrote the screen story and Max Lief and Robert Keith added the dialogue. Thornton Freeland, who filmed "Whoopee," directed.

Dorothy Christy plays the gold digger and Claude Allister, Allison Skipworth, Grace Hampton, Tyrell Davis, Tom O'Brien and Richard Cramer complete the cast.

COUNTY PICNIC FRIDAY, JULY 22

Everybody Urged To Make Preparations To Attend This Big Event

Did you tell your neighbors about the big county-wide picnic that county agent Stapp is arranging for July 22nd? Mr. Stapp states that he is going to do everything he can to make the 22nd of July a day long to be remembered by those who attend the picnic. Mr. Stapp is having the grounds cleaned now. The picnic will be in that beautiful grove of pines and oaks about 1½ miles south of Clanton on the highway and just across the highway from Mr. Boswell's barbecue stand.

Mr. Boswell has offered to cooperate with Mr. Stapp in every way he can to help make it a great day.

Mr. Stapp has already arranged a splendid program and is now making ready to get up loud speakers so every one can hear. The fiddlers are registering for the fiddlers contest.

Mr. Stapp states that he is arranging this picnic so every white family that so desires can come, see and hear a fine program, spread their own lunch and have a good time without having to spend a nickel.

Mr. Stapp says that he is going to provide plenty good free ice water, and for those who just want to spend some money that day, he has arranged to have on sale cold drinks, ice cream and barbecue, the profit from the sales to go toward helping defray expenses of cleaning the grounds, building speaker stands and seats, and providing ice water and other comforts.

We are wondering who will get the $2.50 gold piece for having the largest family—all present. Someone suggested Eugene Mullins. Well, there are so many good things on the program until we hope everybody will cooperate with Mr. Stapp in making it a great day in Chilton County.

H. S. Shaw, William Walker, Dr. C. N. Parnell, Charles Parnell, and J. N. Dennis went to Faunsdale Tuesday to visit the Kirkwood Farms. It was a meeting of over a hundred people from different counties, in the interest of cattle and sheep raising.

CAUGHT SIX-FOOT ALLIGATOR

A report sent to The Union-Banner from Foley, Ala., says Bent T. Chiidress, Thebe Kendrick, Rudolph Pierce, two Pierce boys, Dude Childress, Dan and Jack Hayes had the pleasure of catching a six-foot alligator in Thebe's pasture on July 18.

The alligator was eating Thebe's pigs, and Thebe decided that would not work. They found the alligator in a 25-foot hole six feet under the ground. It was some thrill pulling him out, they said, "but we got him."

MRS. KATE ANDERSON DIED

Mrs. Kate Anderson, age 74 years, died Tuesday morning at Central Alabama Hospital in Clanton. She had been in poor health for many months.

Burial was in Clanton cemetery Wednesday afternoon, with Martin in charge. A short funeral service at the grave was conducted by Rev. Haskew.

Mrs. Anderson was the widow of J. T. Anderson, who died several years ago. She was the daughter of L. A. Thornton, one of the pioneer citizens of Clanton.

Survivors of the immediate family of Mrs. Anderson are a son, Frank Anderson, a sailor, now in the Pacific waters; an adopted daughter, Mrs. J. H. Cook, who lives in Detroit.

John Nat Thornton, of California, and St. Clair Thornton, of Fort Worth, Texas, are brothers of Mrs. Anderson. She has two sisters living, Mrs. Henry Martin, and Mrs. Daily Miller of Clanton.

Mrs. Anderson was a deeply religious woman. Her kind and loving disposition endeared her to the hearts of all with whom she came in contact. For years past her ill health kept her confined to her home. She passed the time by thinking beautiful thoughts, singing sweet songs, and silent meditation.

Flower Gardens At Mount Vernon

Visitors to Mount Vernon are sure to be impressed with the dignity and serenity which pervades the entire estate. The design for Mount Vernon, planned in 1783 is supremely simple and at the same time most interesting and a rarely original scheme, accoding to the division of infomation of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission. It is gracious and warm and inviting, and was all of this when its trees were young and the ancient boxwood was just beginning to grow for it is not entirely to time that this garden must lay its charm.

The symmetry, or to be more literally exact, the formality of the general design is preserved with the scrupulous care which we should expect in so fastidious a man as Washington. General Washington could no more have made a garden that was informal than he could have descended to act the clown in cap and bells. His matchless poise and grave and beautiful majesty could only reflect in a creation of similar balance and stateliness. By studying Mount Vernon both in its plan and in its endless beautiful perspectives and vistas, it is possible to come nearer to an understanding of that quality in George Washington which made all men a little in awe of him. One sees in Mount Vernon, as well as feels the bigness of his mold, physical, mental, and spiritual, that set him apart from all his kind and yet made him to be so greatly loved.

In his own plan for the place Washington calls both gardens "Kitchen gardens," but the enclosed garden on the north side of the lawn is the flower garden and the famous garden of boxwood. The kitchen garden lies opposite on the south, back of its similar brick wall, topped with white palings. Situated here, on the gentle slope where the land begins to fall away towards the river, this garden is terraced into two levels its entire length. The gate in the wall which leads in from the lawn is met by a walk that crosses the upper terraces to steps which descend to the common vegetable level. This upper terrace entertains only the finer herbs, the salads, simples and small fruits, with the fine tree fruits against the wall as it faces the south. Apricots, nectarines, peaches, fine plums, pears—all these were trained against the wall in Washington's time, as in the English custom; and the General's table enjoyed the earliest and richest delicacies as a consequence.

The upper terrace is a charming garden. In addition to its herbs and wall fruits, there are grapes trellised along the terrace edge, and shrubs here and there. A border of venerable, unkempt boxwood incloses the walk from the lawn to the steps, and there are old flowers, both annual and perinnial, brightening the soberer beds of salad and savory. Poppies sweet peas, hollycocks, sweet Williams, gulliflowers, stocks mingle in the oldest garden fashion with the cabbages, lettuce, cucumbers, the sage, marjoram, lavender and thyme. Although this garden is actually only a little more than one hundred years old, it might easily be three centuries old so consistently does it conform to the earliest modes, before purely "pleasure gardens" of flowers alone, were made.

In the finer flower garden at Mount Vernon, opposite the "kitchen garden" are old fashioned flowers, which would be considered extremely modern compared to the sweet south garden. Backing this are the great greenhouses where many rare exotics found a home. Gifts such as these came to the idolized general, and of course, continued to come to the president in even greater numbers. He was never too busy to thank personally the giver. "With much sensibility I received letter," he writes to one from Philidelphia, in 1795, "I thank you, sir, for the plants which are mentioned in the list which accompanied it. When my situation will allow me to pay more attention than I am able to do at present to situations of this kind, which combine utility, ornament and amusement—I shall certainly avail such exotics as, with a little aid may be reconciled to the climate of my garden."

Jack Hayes of the White Sox Handled Eighteen Chances For A Record

Boston, July 15.—A perusal of the dusty tomes of baseball reveals that Jack Hayes of the White Sox set a new major league fielding record yesterday when he accepted eighteen chances at second base without a bobble.

Jimmy Dykes had seventeen chances with the Athletics in 1921. The late Miller Huggins took care of sixteen plays in 1911, a feat matched by Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals in 1930.

Not all of Hayes' chances were easy. He had eight putouts and ten assists. Chicago American.

BRIDGE OPENED LAST THURSDAY

Workmen Give Barbecue To Friends in Dedication of County Project

The new steel and concrete bridge on the old Birmingham Highway between the city limits and the cotton mill has been completed. Finishing of the job was celebrated last Thursday evening when the workmen who built the bridge gave a barbecue to which about 150 people were invited.

For the dedication exercises an improvised speakers stand was arranged near the north end of the bridge. On the stand were members of the Foursquare Church Orchestra, which furnished music for the program. Several short talks were made.

The job of building the bridge was in charge of W. F. Deshazo. In a short talk concerning the work, Mr. Deshazo concluded his remarks by formally delivering the structure into the hands of the Commissioners Court, represented on the occasion by Commissioners Vinson and Burnett. Commissioners Cobb and Mims had been invited to come but failed to arrive.

After the program was finished the people went to a table under the pines nearby, from which every person received a plate of barbecued meat, fried fish and camp stew.

It was a most delightful occasion enjoyed by everyone whose good fortune it was to be the guest of the boys who built the bridge.

MULTIPLE HEAD CABBAGE

Did you raise any multiple head cabbages this year? Well, we presume that this would be a good name for a cabbage brought in to The Banner office by Mr. Jim Baker of Lay Dam Road on Monday. This particular specimen had a total of seventeen heads; and they are all separate and distinct heads, firm and hard.

WAGON STRUCK BY AUTO

Will Miner's wagon was struck by an automobile near the home of J. B. Downs on the highway Monday. The car was from Gadsden. Mr. Miner was injured and the people in the car called Martin's ambulance and sent him to the hospital here. The extent of Mr. Miner's injuries could not be ascertained.

SINGING AT COURTHOUSE NEXT SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The United Singing Society and the Central Singing Society are inviting everybody to meet with them in an afternoon singing at the courthouse next Sunday afternoon. The singing will begin as shortly after 1:30 as possible and continue for two hours. The singers of the county are especially urged to attend and bring your song books.

TWO STILLS DESTROYED BY OFFICERS MONDAY

The force from the Sheriff's office went out up in the Dry Valley neighborhood, about three miles from Wilton, last Monday and located and destroyed two distilling outfits. They were only a few hundred yards apart. One was a 100-gallon box still and the other was a 50-gallon oil drum still. Two men were arrested with the big still and about 100 gallons of beer was poured out. The men had just begun operating the still when the officers made their appearance. No one was at the small outfit, but 50 gallons of beer was destroyed there. There was no whiskey found at either place.

The summary of the arrests for the past week is: 3 for violating the prohibition law; 1 for public drunkenness; 2 for distilling.

KILLED BIG RATTLER

Last Wednesday afternoon Cleve Baker brought to the Banner office a large rattle snake, which he killed the day before, a short distance from Refuge church. The monster was said to be a velvet tail rattler, was five and one-half feet long and had seventeen rattles. Famous snakeologists who have seen him figure that the reptile was around 20 years old, inasmuch as they are about three years old when they have the first rattle, and one is added each year.

The Banner wishes that we might have been able to take down all the snake stories that have been told by people standing around this rattler and reproduce them to its readers. They would have made interesting reading, but the volume would have been prohibitive. It is interesting to listen to people swap yarns about snakes that they have seen or heard.

63,000 GALLONS GASOLINE ARE SUSPENDED FROM SALE

The Alabama department of agriculture has 63,000 gallons of gasoline suspended from sale and has several inspectors busy taking samples to ascertain that gasoline and kerosene sold in the state come up to the state standard. The suspended gasoline belongs to sixteen different dealers located in various parts of the state.

When gasoline or kerosene is found below standard it is suspended from sale and is not allowed to be sold until it meets the state standard, declares Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of agriculture.

H. S. Holloway, chief of the measures and weights division of the department of agriculture, reports that during the past nine months about 4,000 samples of gasoline and 2,000 samples of kerosene have been collected and analyzed. Last year over 8,000 samples of both were tested. In most cases each sample represented a tank car.

REVIVAL AT FOURSQUARE CHURCH STARTS SUNDAY

Services will be held every night during the following week at 7:30, and a special prayer meeting will be held each morning at 10 o'clock.

BRO. HASKEW AWAY

Rev. D. W. Haskew will be out of town next Sunday, so there will be no preaching at the Methodist church. Bro. Haskew will be preaching in a revival meeting at his old home town, Whatley, Ala.

Rev. Honeycutt will be remembered as having conducted a revival at Friendship about four years ago. He has many friends in Clanton as well as in that community who are glad to have him visit us again. Those were especially glad who were able to hear him preach again.

HUGE CROWD ATTENDS MASS MEETING LAST SATURDAY

Resolutions Passed Commending Commissioners For Taking Up Road Work and Supply Employment For Needy People in Chilton County

One of the largest crowds ever assembled in Clanton was at the courthouse last Saturday afternoon, the purpose being a road meeting and a call by Judge Reynolds for all people in the county wanting work on the county roads to come and register.

People from over the county began to gather at the courthouse early in the morning, and they kept coming in more and more until the appointed hour for the meeting. Just after noon it began raining, but this had no effect on the gathering, except probably it caused them to stick a little closer to the courthouse in order to stay out of the rain. There were more than a thousand people present, and a great number of them were not able to get in the large court room where the meeting was held, but another meeting was also arranged down stairs by W. M. Wyatt and Reed Mullins, to accommodate those who could not get into the court room.

About 2 o'clock the meeting was called to order by Judge L. H. Reynolds and a chairman and secretary elected. Judge Reynolds was elected chairman and T. E. Wyatt secretary. The business of the meeting, namely the discussion of the road work of the county, was immediately gone into. Judge Reynolds made a pointed talk dealing with the road work of the county, especially the project of paving part of the Lay Dam road. After the Judge spoke he called on others to express themselves on the matter. Mr. W. G. Shaw was the first to speak following Judge Reynolds, and he voiced his disapproval of the paving of the road. Among those commending the Commissioners for their decision to pave the road and thus supply work for the needy were: Rev. M. J. Parrish, D. S. Robinson and J. V. Best.

When the probate's office closed Saturday afternoon there had over eight hundred presons filled out the questionaire thus applying for work on the county roads. Over half of these asserted in their applications that they had no crop or any other means of support. Judge Reynelds says that it is the intention of the Commissioners Court to furnish some work to just as many of these applicants as possible. From time to time jobs of work will be undertaken in different sections of the county so as to use folks who want to work from as nearly all over the county as possible. The commissioners hope to let what money they can out on the roads, but to put it out so that the county will get the good of the work and at the same time so that the needy may be helped to feed their families.

All Beats Represented

A register was taken of the number present in the courtroom from each Beat in the county. The number standing as the various Beats were called were: Beat 1, 8; Beat 2, 14; Beat 3, 10; Beat 4 Box 1, 36; Beat 4 Box 2, 10; Beat 4 Box 3, 5; Beat 4 Box 4, 13; Beat 5, 28; Beat 6, 38; Beat 7, 4; Beat 8, 0; Beat 9, 40; Beat 10, 51; Beat 11, 55; Beat 12, 25; Beat 13, 3; Beat 14, 14; Beat 15, 26; Beat 16, 15. No register as to Beats was taken of those downstairs, but there was about the same number down there as in the court room.

Resolutions Adopted

The following resolutions were presented by W. F. Deshazo and read by the Secretary. After being read the resolutions were adopted by the gathering, only one dissenting vote being cast.

We, who are assembled in this mass meeting, being citizens of Chilton County, hereby express our approval and commendation of the action of the Commissioners Court in proposing to build two miles or more of a better grade road than has been built by our county in the past.

It is our opinion that the time has come when the Commissioners should build a few miles of better grade roads in different parts of the county each year. In so doing not only will we begin to approach the ideal of a county system of permanent roads, but will begin to reduce the cost of road maintenance.

We know that the road authorities in the different counties of Alabama have incurred some criticism because they have not built any permanent roads. On account of this failure there have been numerous threats to take away from the counties the gasoline tax and give it all to the State. The recent Brooking Institute report upon the suggested revision of Alabama's system of government suggests taking the gasoline tax away from the counties, presumably because it is held that the counties are not using any of the funds to build permanent roads.

We especially urge the Commissioners to spend enough money on the roads in each precinct to relieve the distressed condition of our people, as far as they can consistently do so.

A man out of a job needs a job where he lives. Road work will bring the job to him. The county can now buy roads at a bargain, and at the same time bring jobs—meat, bread, and clothing—to those of our people who are in such needy circumstances as they have never seen before.

The poor people of our county who need a job to make money with which to buy the bare necessities of life, are not able to gather political influence in support of their needs. They must depend upon the people who are able and willing to help them and who are in sympathy with their distressed condition. We are glad our probate judge and commissioners have shown that they are willing to answer the cry of the needy, regardless of politics and personal interests.

We are proud of Chilton County and the record our county has made. We are proud of the fact that our county rates financially among the best in the state of Alabama. We commend our commissioners for their policy in the past of spending the county's money with the people of the county when possible.

We regret that some persons who want to be candidates for county office in the future have tried to put politics into the road work of our county. We say that politics does not belong in our road business, and if continued, as some are seeking to do, it will result in a serious injury to the splendid road system which has already been made possible by the sound and constructive action of our road officials.

We urge our Commissioners to stand fast by their duties to the people of this county. We hope they will not be misled by the strange political disturbances that may arise. If our officials will discharge their duties in the future as faithfully and efficiently as they have in the past, and at this time accomplish their plans of bringing relief to the suffering, we believe such a stand will receive the commendation of the great body of Chilton County citizens who want to see our road business kept out of politics.

We urge our Probate Judge and Commissioners to make immediate application through the Governor of Alabama, for such aid as may be secured for our county through the relief appropriation bill which was recently enacted by the Congress and signed by President Hoover.

We recommend that a committee composed of Mr. T. J. Littlejohn, Mr. M. A. Gore, Dr. N. S. Johnson, and Mr. W. M. Wyatt be appointed to serve with the Probate Judge and Commissioners to take up with the Governor of Alabama the matter of securing relief for the people of our county through the Federal Emergency Appropriation bill.

COMMISSIONERS ATTEND A MEETING IN BIRMINGHAM

Judge Reynolds, together with Commissioners Cobb, Vinson, Burnett and Mims, went to Birmingham Wednesday morning where they will attend a three-days session of the State Association of County Commissioners. They will return Friday afternoon.

Judge Reynolds is slated to make a speech before the association on the subject of the counties paying to the state the tax on gasoline the same as individuals have to pay. Heretofore counties have been exempt from paying this tax, but an agitation has been started which claims that they should pay it. Several other matters concerning county affairs as handled by the boards of commissioners will be discussed at this meeting.

ECONOMY LEAGUE HEAD WAS HERE

Local Organization Started, and Will Cooperate With State Movement

Mr. W. C. Davis of Jasper was in Clanton Monday and spoke to a small crowd of citizens in the Probate Judge's office. He gave some figures and data concerning taxation and the cost of state, county and municipal government in Alabama. Following these remarks by Mr. Davis, a local organization was set up to affiliate with the Economy League of Alabama. The purpose of the association is to secure "Economy in government — national, state, county, and municipal," and holds that this is "The only hope of permanent relief from excessive taxation.."

The organization is to be statewide with an independent unit in each county, such county organizations, at all times, to keep in touch with the state chairman, which post is held by Mr. Davis.

A temporary chairman was chosen for Chilton County, and Mr. C. Fenn Jones was named for this place. In a few chosen remarks Mr. Jones expressed his hearty sympathy with the movement and agreed to accept the temporary chairmanship. Some time in the near future Mr. Jones will name an executive committee of five or seven members to help him handle the work in the county. It is the ultimate intention to carry the work into every Beat in the county, the details of which will be worked out as the work progresses.

STAPP THANKS PEOPLE FOR COOPERATION IN PICNIC

Mr. Stapp asked us to express through the paper his appreciation for the splendid cooperation on the part of organizations and individuals in helping make the county-wide picnic last Friday a success.

It is estimated that more than 2,500 people attended the picnic. Many people say that the county-wide picnic was the best meeting of this nature they have ever attended. It was voted to make it an annual affair.

Mr. Stapp states that the Kiwanis Club, the Pilot Club and numerous individuals cooperated in every way to make the day a success, especially does he wish to call attention to the cooperation of the new bakery in Clanton for their donation of the bread used at the barbecue stand.

BOY PREACHER WAS HERE

A boy preacher, 11 years old, by the name of Hall from Florida, passed through Clanton a few days ago and stopped off and preached at the courthouse. A full court room was there to hear him Sunday afternoon, and reports say that he did some fine preaching. His brother, younger than him, conducted the singing.
